BUSINESSES WILL DISPLAY CARD WITH THE CODE PROVISIONS

Every factory, shop and store throughout Alabama will soon have posted in a conspicuous place a large placard which bears the labor provisions of the NRA code under which the industry is operating. Here on the very wall of his shop, every workman may read exactly what he is entitled to receive from his employer. The grocery clerk need only look on the back of the ice box or on the wall next to the pork and beans to know whether his employer is giving him a "square deal."

It is an exaggeration to say that every employee enjoys this privilege at present. But, as fast as the government printing office can prepare them and the various code authorities can distribute them, the labor provisions posters are finding their way to every industrial and trade unit in the counrty. So far, 139 industries have been covered and posters for 60 additional industries per week are in the course of preparation at the government printing office.

Under orders from President Roosevelt and General Johnson, every proprietor was required to send his application for these posters to his local or state code authirty by May 15. Adequate time was given employers to become fully acquainted with the need for this action. In the case of an industry whose code has not yet been approved, the employer is granted 45 days after such approval before making his application.

Merchants operating under the retail code in towns where there is no local retail code authority established as yet, can secure the Labor Provisions under the retail code by applying to the State NRA Compliance Director, 201 Liberty National Life Building, Birminham, Ala.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Esau Sells His Birthright to Jacob.—Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife. When Rebekah had no children, Isaac prayed to the Lord, and the Lord declared to Rebekah that she would be the mother of two nations and two manner of people, one stronger than the other, and that the elder would serve the younger. And Rebekah became the mother of twins, the elder one being called Esau and the younger one Jacob. "And the boys grew: and Esau was a cunning hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a plain man dwelling in tents. And Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison: but Rebekah loved Jacob. And Jacob sold pottage: and Esau came from the field, and he was faint: And Esau said to Jacob, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint: therefore was his name called Edom. And Jacob said, Sell me this day thy birthright. And Esau sold his birthright unto Jacob. Then Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentiles; and he did eat and drink, and rose up, and went his way: thus Esau despised his birthright."—Gen. 25: 27-34. One of a series of Bible pictures made by Merian in 1625.

CHILTON FINALLY HAILS NEW DEAL

County Resisted at First, Dethroning Republican Judge Who Advocated It

By GEORGE L. DAVIS
Montgomery Advertiser Staff Correspondent

Clanton, Ala., July 14. — Chilton County, one of the centrally located counties in Alabama and distinctive in that it has a population divided in political thought, being about half Republican and half Democrat, is none the less strong for President Roosevelt and the principles of his New Deal.

This is due largely to the public spirited efforts of Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds, a life-long Republican and recognized as one of the state's outstanding statesmen and administrators since long before the Constitutional convention of 1901, of which he was a member.

It was judge Reynolds, who, when other Republican members of the Chilton County Commission opposed the Roosevelt program which decreed that no person should starve in this land of plenty and called upon the counties to contribute to relief, urged that the question be submitted to a vote of the people.

It was Judge Reynolds who took off his coat, and went on the stump for county participation in relief and the New Deal, and who outspokenly declared his admiration and esteem for President Roosevelt and his concern for the "forgotten man."

Still a Republican, Judge Reynolds laid aside partisan politics to save a large number of persons from starvation. His advocacy of the New Deal principles and his stump speeches for Roosevelt, perhaps, cost Judge Reynolds the privilege of being again nominated for Probate Judge in the Republican primary after about a quarter of a century in that office, but the New Deal lives in Chilton County.

Today Chilton County has 425 on the direct relief rolls, and officials of the Chilton Relief Administration are searching for a way further to reduce them, in the face of additional unemployment during the months of July and August. Crops are being laid by and tenants in some cases, are being released from the care of landowners to shift for themselves until harvest time.

Shifting for themselves is as great a problem in Chilton County as in other counties of the State. There just doesn't seem to be any jobs open.

Aside from this, Chilton has now and for a long time has had a relief problem somewhat different from the relief problems of other counties. This is because a goodly part of the population, in the days of 'prosperity' migrated to large population centers like Birmingham, Montgomery, Talladega and Selma—Chilton County being of about equal distance from these cities.

Then when the panic came, Judge Reynolds said, those who had sought their fortunes in the larger centers came back home to "pa and ma."

It was an unfortunate situation, Judge Reynolds said. Some of those who had left home single came back home with families to live with "pa and ma."

In a survey conducted by direction of Judge Reynolds back in 1930, it was found that more than 400 such families which had returned to Chilton County were virtually penniless and dependent. It was all the more serious, Judge Reynolds said, because "pa and ma" were hardly able to take care of themselves.

The relief roll in Chilton County has been reduced approximately 50 per cent. Of these on relief 76 families are enrolled in the rural rehabilitation program in which they agree to repay the Relief Administration in work relief labor or in produce for the amount advanced them for fertilizer, seed, steers, plows and other equipment. Work Director W. A. Cone estimated that the average family investment in the rehabilitation program was $90. This is in line with the state average of $89.45 a family for the 5,492 families in the rehabilitation program.

Only one man, Mr. Cone said, has made any payment on his obligation. One farmer brought in 1,600 pounds of irish potatoes. He said he hoped to place as many as possbile on work relief projects soon to enable them to repay their obligations.

The writer visited several sections of Chilton County with William Stokes, representative of the AAA; Work Director Cone, Glenn Sessions and R. M. Foshee, farm foremen and Victor Norris, correspondent of The Chilton County News. The crops in Chilton County are the finest in years it was said, especially the corn and other feed crops.

The party called upon Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mims, of the Collins Chapel community. Mr. Mims is a member of one of Chilton County's most prominent and substantial families. Of an advanced age, and afflicted, he was not been able to do any work on the farm formerly owned by his mother, Mrs. George Mims. He was without work animals, and a neighbor loaned him two steers. He was without funds to purchase seed, feed or fertilizer, until placed on the rehabilitation rolls.

The work on the farm was done by his two young sons, Cecil, 15, and Elwood, 12. They cultivated 22 acres with the two steers and have one of the finest crops in Chilton County.

On 15 acres planted in corn, Foreman Sessions estimates Mr. Mims will make 20 bushels. On the remainder he says he will make 20 bushels of peas, 100 bushels of sweet potatoes, and 100 gallons of syrup. Mrs. Mims has canned 80 quarts of berries and fruit in fruit jars.

Mr. Mims was deeply grateful for the opportunity to make a crop and provide for himself.

"It is something that I appreciate very much," he said.

Another family visited was that of Kellard Wilson, negro, who has a general reputation for shiftlessness. Wilson has already almost starved the two steers purchased for him, although ample feed had been provided and apparently was too lazy to turn the steers out to graze. The Relief Administration's investment in Wilson, it was admitted, will probably be a total loss and Wilson is regarded as one of the "mistakes" in the program.

Judge Reynolds is chairman of the Chilton County Rural Rehabilitation Advisory Committee and believes that the rehabilitation program is the most practical means devised for taking destitute farmers from relief and building them up to a self supporting status.

He frankly admitted that he knew of no panacea for the ills of the poverty-stricken generally to take the place of the relief program but believed that the work relief should be made less attractive in the amount paid, and that this should be a matter for the counties to pass upon.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

It seems to be more and more generally realized that we may have to put the cart before the horse in that phase of our recovery program in which there was brought about an increase in prices before increase was warranted by an acceleration in the demand for goods due to generally increased incomes. There has been something of a mild buyers' strike in many lines during the early summer months of 1934, which caused a temporary recession in business that was not generally expected. The automobile business is an example. Early in the year, when the prospects were good, most of the companies put into effect an increase in retail prices which, they said, was justified by increased costs in materials and wages. The result was a sudden slump in the purchase of cars. Then the old prices were restored by sweeping cuts. Again the demand for automobiles seemed to pick up. The steel industry furnishes another example. Business was fairly good up until the first of July, with purchasers buying in advance in anticipation of higher prices then to go into effect. But after July 1 there was the sharppest drop in demand on record to a figure far below that of July, 1933. Immediately there was announcements of cuts in steel prices and the manufacturers have hope of stimulating business again early in the fall.

Another example is the building industry. Costs of building have nearly doubled since 1933 and the anticipated building boom has failed to develop. There is grave doubt whether it will develop even with government aid, for the man who wants to build will have some hesitation in borrowing the money to do so when he realizes he must pay prosperity prices to put up a building in times of depression. As a result, the building index turned sharply down in June, the permits in 215 cities according to Dun and Bradsteet, indicating a decrease of 34.8 per cent in building from May, 1934, and a decrease of 16.2 per cent from June, 1933.

It is becoming evident that the increased buying in the late winter and early spring was in anticipation of higher prices later this year, just as the boom in the early summer of 1933 was in anticipation of inflation later on. Since this early buying was completed there has been a let-down and it may take the stimulation of lower prices to remedy the situation. Even such ardent exponents of the New Deal as Donald Richberg general counsel of the NRA, are beginning to realize the situation. Mr. Richberg is quoted as declaring recently that "sudden and sweeping increases in labor costs" are likely to bring the country back "upon that same road to ruin from which we turned aside." Just how and when we turned aside from the "road to ruin" and whether we have really entered a new broad highway or are actually on a federally maintained detour are of course questions open to debate, but there can be no serious refutuation of the statement that higher costs generally, without higher incomes to meet the costs, have slowed up our recovery from the depression to a rate which is lower than the rate of recovery in some of the other civilized nations at this time.

It all goes back to the question as towhether prosperity can be forced by an attempt to repeal the old economic laws. Heretofore recovery has always come when there has been a completion of deflation and a natural resumption of consumer demand because such demand could no longer be deferred. Prices did not rise until the recovery was well under way and people could afford to pay the higher prices. Perhaps the new plan will work, but it is becoming increasingly evident that some of its theories will have to be repolished. What we seem to need now is not more codes and artificially higher prices, but an increased confidence in the prospect that we will some time in the near future get back to a balanced budget, where Uncle Sam can use a little more black ink and a little less red.

THE "NEW DEAL" IN CHILTON

We reproduce in another column of this paper a most interesting article from a recent Sunday issue of the Montgomery Advertiser, by George L. Davis, staff correspondent of that paper.

Mr. Davis visited Chilton some weeks ago at which time he gathered some facts and figures, and some inspiration, from which his article was prepared.

As is the case with all that is written about Chilton County, a few names and more or less politics, expressed or implied, furnishes the chief element of spice for what is said.

In the article referred to Mr. Davis chose to start off by discussing the "New Deal", Judge L. H. Reynolds, and then ventured a guess about local county politics.

We feel urged to say a word or two upon the subject raised by Mr. Davis in his Advertiser article.

With the heading "Chilton Finally Hails New Deal," The Advertiser, we feel, implies more than it says. It is a bit late to say that Chilton County has joined in the national relief program. It is a bit early to draw the conclusion that Chilton County Republicans have abandoned their party and gone Democratic. That may happen in November, as some ardently hope. But not yet.

A second head on the article says "County Resisted at First, Dethroning Republican Judge Who Advocated it." We think this needs a bit of clarifying. We do not recall that Chilton County ever resisted the relief offers of the government. A few of our political leaders shied off at first, but they soon saw the matter was too popular to oppose, and they softened. This was true of a small number in both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Judge Reynolds, it is well known, from the very first, advocated the county taking advantage of all relief measures offered by the government. It was largely through his efforts that the question was submitted to a vote of the people, who at the first opportunity voted a majority in approval of accepting the relief measures.

Now, Judge Reynolds, to use the words of Mr. Davis, has been dethroned all right, if that is the way one might choose to express the fact that he was defeated in the primary. But we can not admit the inference of Mr. Davis that he was "dethroned" because he stuck up for relief.

As a matter of fact, we believe that Judge Reynolds's advocacy of relief measures for our needy people came as near as peas to putting him back in the Probate Office for another six years.

Before the relief program became agitated it was generally admitted that Judge Reynolds did not expect to continue in office nor in active politics after his present term expires. In fact, he had little chance to do so if he wanted to. But his championship of relief in the face of others who opposed it made a different picture, and caused hundreds of voters to want to keep Reynolds in office for another term. It came very near to being the force to lift Reynolds out of the group that have been relegated because the pople thought they had had office long enough.

The article of Mr. Davis is the first time we have heard of Judge Reynolds making stump speeches for Roosevelt. He did make speeches in favor of the peole of the county getting all the relief money possible, and was broadly accused of trying to make politics out of it. This accusation was made by both Democrats and Republicans who were his political enemies.

We are caused to wonder if the Davis article in The Advertiser was prepared and given to us as a kind of opiate to calm our nerves for a future political shock that is being made ready for us. It looks like we may expect most anything these days.

Then there was the hard working farm woman who was even glad of an excuse to go to the dentist's office for, as she said, that was the one place where she could sit down and fold her hands and do nothing without feeling guilt about it.

A New Jersey man says complainingly that when he was first married he got half the hooks in the closet but now his wife takes nearly all of them. The only thing he can do about this is to get her to join a nudist colony.

What this country needs today, more than anything else we can think of right at the moment, is more cash customers.

Ex-kind Alphonso will not jump at the chance of joining Mae West in the movies, but how he would revel in the idea of appearing in a news reel depicting his return to the Spanish throne.

The brain trust plan of helping the farmers by swapping four dollars in taxes to give the farmers one dollar benefits is like the tobacco chewer I knew as a boy. He tried to chew so much tobacco that the premiums would pay his tobacco bill.

The radio may be a factor in keeping some of the young folks at home but we delieve it drives the old folks out of the house in the ratio of 16 to 1.

The prize jackass is the fellow who believes that the government can run itself into debt without somebody having to pay the bill.

If the present national spending program keeps up in a few years the average income taxpayer will know how to sympathize with the cow that jumped over the moon.

Any day now we expect to see a dairy ad in the paper asking us to use an AAA milk because "it comes from regimented cows."

The old fashioned woman who used to boast about how many glasses of jelly she could get out of a gallon of blackberries, has a daughter who likes to brag about how many miles she can get out of a gallon of gas.

It is said that you can tell AAA "regimented" potatoes by the fact that they keep their eyes to the front.

When we went to school they told us that the lowest form of animal life was the amoeba, but now General Johnson tells us it is the chisler.

If the brain trust could only induce the modern mother to bake some of the bread that mother used to, the wheat problem would soon solve itself.

If you don't believe that General Johnson thinks well of himself, please note that he is planning a "vacation" for the summer and will put five men on the job to take his place.

When you see a black cloud in the sky it may be a thunderstorm coming and then again, it may be that dense volume of Russian trade we were going to get when we recognized Moscow.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

None But Americans

History relates a story of the foresight of George Washington, during the Revolutionary War, which shows the faith he had in 100 per cent Americans, and the precautions he took in directing the affairs then uppermost in his mind. The American army, with their allies, the French, were in a hot battle with the English, when night came, and the fighting stopped until the next day. But before General Washington went to his quarters, he left specific instructions to "put nothing but Americans on guard." He knew the French were with him, tooth and nail, but yet he knew that he could trust a full-fledged American further. The French soldiers were fighting for the money and adventure—the Americans were fighting for their very lives and liberty—their homes and loved ones. He knew that a French soldier MIGHT nod during the night, and let something get past him, but he knew that an American would not, because that American's loved ones were depending on him, and their lives were in his hands. The same situation exists today. We need nothing but proved Americans at Washington. We do not need crack-pots and theorists at the helm of this nation. We need men who think of government in terms of "America for Americans," and guide their official acts accordingly. Do we have such men there now? We most certainly do not! They allow our delegates to world conferences to enter peace pacts, whereby other nations are allowed to build just so many ships or airplanes, and keep a standing army of a certain strength, and they sign our nation up, also. What happens? Everybody goes back home and starts building ships and planes, except Americans, and they come back and go fishing. They see the nations of the world arming on every side, yet they do nothing to help our defensive measures. America is a peaceful nation, but the poor boob who thinks we can insure peace by allowing our defenses to go to rack should be headed for a padded cell instead of a padded seat in the White House. In addition to all this, they invite Russia over to talk things over, and finally recognize them—the same as inviting a wildcat into the parlor. Our officials are too intent on seeing that the rest of the world is cared for, that they have no time to devote to America. Why not ship the whole lot of Communistic collegiate theoristic crack-pots back to college, and put "nothing but Americans on guard?"

Strike While The Iron Is Hot

Labor all over the United States must have taken renewed stock in that old saying: "Strike while the iron is hot." And they must certainly think the iron is sizzling, by the way they are striking. In the city of San Francisco alone, some 140,000 men went on strike a few days ago. The steel mills have been having their strike troubles for some time. And now the fad has reached farther, into the South, and the textile industry appears to be bordering on a complete close-down. But the curious part of it is that neither capital nor labor seems to be able to explain the why and wherefore of it all. The mill owners and the workers can get together all right, between themselves, if left alone, and right there is where all the trouble lies. The NRA sets a minimum wage per hour, and then tells the mill owner just how long he can work each person. The mill owner might be able to pay a higher wage, but if he must have 3 shifts of workers where he formerly hired only two, then he must necessarily pay the minimum wage, and then his operating expenses will be higher. But the workers maintain that with the low rate, together with the short hours, they cannot make a living. They say that, even at the present wage rate they could make a go of it, if they could get their old working hours, but the NRA forbids that. The mill owners contend that three shifts instead of two lowers productions, which necessarily raises their cost. And so the scrap goes on, with each faction knowing what it wants, and the other faction willing to allow it—only the NRA will not allow it. So, the next time somebody pops up and wants to know why there are so many more strikes, you tell 'em.

The Baby Code

The "brain trust" has concoted some curious and ridiculous ideas, and the "rubber stamp congress" of the past session has done some tall "yessing," but there is one which even this outfit has so far reneged on. I suppose when they run out of something else to pass they will get around to it, however. And, inasmuch as it is something absolutely beyond the bounds of reason, there is every reason to believe that it may be passed. I will admit it sounds phoney, but it may come. Believe it or not, a bill reposes somewhere in some of the pigeon-holed desks around Washington, which sets out the "Baby Code" in full. Don't laugh—it's a fact! This bill provides, among other things, that couples must have a "permit" to raise a baby.. This "permit" would first make sure that each of the parents is of sound mind and body, and that they are able, financially, to take care of it, even making provision for the doctor, and all. It provides that this child shall come into the world at some approximate time (such as would fit in best for the child's education). It would make sure that the parents were able to give that child at least a high school education, etc. Now, I will admit that the parents of children should be of sound mind and body, and should be able to give it a high school education, at least, in all fairness to the child. But this one thing I would like to ask: How in the name of all that is high and holy would any government go about enforcing such a law? There were many squawkers at the force that was kept on hand to try to enforce the prohibition law. I just wonder how many would have to be taken on to keep the "Baby Code" in force. And how would they manage to check up on just who had the baby raising idea in mind? And if the law undertook to punish all who violated the code, how many prisons would have to be built? And, even if the parents did take out a permit for a child, and the old stork took matters in hand and brought twins, when there was no permit for twins, what would they do with the "spare"? They couldn't kill it—there is a law against murder. And the parents might be able (in the eyes of the law) to care for one child but not two or more. Yep, it's a silly idea, but just about in line with lots of the other acts of our "intellectual theorists."

Perhaps it would be better to drop the expression "brain trust" and substitute a word more apt, more accurately describing a bunch of supercilious men and women, looking with scorn on all who have notions of constitutional democracy and liberty of choice, seeking the millinneium overnight by use of nostrums and arrogating to themselves all the intelligence there is."

A man visited a farm.
"What's that?" he asked.
"That's wheat," said the farmer.
"What's that?" asked the man.
"That's corn," said the farmer.
What's that, asked the man.
"That's barley," said the farmer. And what is your business "
"I'm a federal crop expert," replied the man.

The problem how to adjust type to space in order to fill a paper up when there isn't anything to fill it up with was satisfactorily attended to last week by Harold Dwyer, resourceful publisher of the Tipton Times, who set aside a blank page and labeled it "Contracted acreage."

Remember the good old days when you were innocent enough to believe that the girls with the street carnival company were the most beautiful things on earth?

Master Production Manager

A few years ago, when bumper crops were being raised all over the country, there went up a great howl about over-production. Now, in factories and things of that sort, there is an executive called the production manager. His job is to watch the production and sales, and to keep production down to the par of consumption. That keeps everything balanced. But in factories, the machinery can be started up anew any time the officials wish to do so, in case consumption suddenly increases. But this is not the case as regards farm products. If we make a short crop this year, and the fag end of the year catches us short, we must wait until next year to raise another crop. When the AAA began to function a little over a year ago, the officials decided to apply factory production methods to the farm over-production problem, but they failed to remember that they could not start up their farms and begin raising stuff on the spur of the moment, like a factory can. So, in several states of the middle-west, the production curbing method has turned out bad. The wheat region, which usually turns out a normal crop of 170,000,000 bushels, is expected, this year, to produce not more than 12,000,000 bushels, on account of the severe drouth in the region. In a section of the country, where a year ago the government was paying farmers to burn wheat and destroy cattle and hogs, to cut down production, the government is now sending train loads of supplies, meat corn, and wheat. In short, I suppose the master production manager looked down on us last year and said to Himself: "All right, if they want to cut down production, I'll help them along with it. I'll send a drouth to kill the wheat and corn, and dry up the wells and springs, and this will take care of the over-production in cattle and hogs." And the Master, when He takes a hand in something, that job is well done. Now, the master production manager, the creator of things, is on the job, and production is certainly being curbed. Statisticians tell us that, but for the wheat and corn surplus that was held over from last year, we would now be paying exhorbitant prices for flour and other products of the region. Away back in Biblical history, there is a parallel to the situation we have had here. Egypt was rasing bumper crops, and her barns were bursting with plenty. Did they order a certain amount of this production destroyed? They did not! They had somebody at the head of the government who had sense enough to realize that one extreme follows another, and this period of plenty, would reasonably be followed by a period of famine. So, instead of burning part of their corn and wheat, and killing off their sheep and cattle, they looked ahead and stocked up. Sure enough, following the seven years of plenty, Egypt experienced seven years of famine, but no one suffered, because plenty had been saved. Would that this country could have had that kind of officials. Of course Secretary Wallace could not KNOW that the drouth would come this year but he might have had the foresight to take into consideration the uncertainty of the weather, and managed things accordingly. Instead, by his actions, he reasoned thus, if at all: "Well cut down to bare consumption, and raise prices. We'll let next year take care of itself." He reasoned within the might of mankind, and took no stock whatsoever in what the Almighty might think of his tinkering with nature's plans to feed and clothe the country. For Mr. Wallace's big error the country is now suffering. But how about Mr. Wallace—is he suffering? Oh, no! While those farmers in the middle west are going through a bad case of the wrinkle-belly, Mr. Wallace continues to feed on three squares a day, and Mr. Roosevelt is away on a fishing trip that is costing the taxpayers plenty. Last year it was a case fo "starvation in a land of plenty." Next year, indications are that even if you have the wherewithall to buy, there will be nothing to buy. How's that for efficiency? The sooner our national officials decide that the Almighty is plenty able to feed the world and look out for its welfare the better it will be for all of us. And, good friend, if, some time during the coming winter, you are asked to pay an outrageous price for a sack of flour, and have nothing left with which to buy, just remember that back in 1932 we heard a few say: "It can't be worse." Then check up and ask yourself if things in general are better or worse—you'll be able to answer your own question.—Man in the Moon.

THE FORGOTTEN TAXPAYER

Frequently of late the taxpayer has been referred to as the "forgotten man" in America. Some evidence is coming to light, however, that he will not be content to remain forgotten much longer. If he intends to survive it will be well for him to do a little squirming in the near future. Certainly his prospect is not a rosy one. Federal income taxes have been raised considerably in the past few years and the old "nuisance" taxes are with us again with all their wartime fervor. But the end it not yet.

The public debt of the United States has reached a new peak and will soon be several billions higher than ever before. The New Deal costs money and it is going to cost considerably more money as the months fly by. And in addition to income taxes and nuisance taxes, there are the new processing taxes which fall heavily on the consumer to the theoretical benefit of the farmer—although the farmer since his cost of living is rapidly mounting is having some difficulty in finding just where he is benefitted.

Be this as it may, there are already signs of even higher taxes to come. Already one or two prime exponents of the New Deal have hinted that when it comes to taxes the American public "don't know nothin' yet." A commission, so the newspapers tell us, is going to Great Britain to study the British system of income taxes. Everyone knows that British taxes are much higher than those in America. If we are going to approach Great Britain in the matter of tax rates, in order to pay for the "New Deal," the American taxpayer may well pause for a moment to speculate.

He is already beginning to wonder and there are coming to light some evidences that taxation is going to be one of the big issues in the coming campaign. Up to this time it has been the state and local taxes which have fallen heaviest on the ordinary citizen. But signs are not lacking that the average man is going to have to help foot the mounting costs of the federal government, too. That he will "take it and like it" is very doubtful. In fact, he is already begining to sit up and take notice in some parts of the country. Speaking of the tax issue in New England, the Botson Transcript had the following interesting editorial comment recently:

"The country is becoming most keenly tax conscious. Business men and trustees will interest themselves more in the taxation question than in some of the other phases of the New Deal that have made sensational newspaper stories, like the Darrow-Johnson controversy and 'regimentation.' In fact, organization already has been begun in Boston, which will extend over New England, to bring home to the taxpayers the menaces to social and industrial stability involved in the unbridled tax program of the New Dealers. Even the activities of the viril American Taxpayers League, Inc., which put the Mellon tax plan over, may be revived. The new organization probably will press for a federal sales tax, as the only hope if all wealth is not to be dissipated or destroyed by the government's tax schemes. Its purpose would be to reduce excessive levies in other directions, which are now being used frankly as a device for the ulterior purpose of redistributing wealth" and not for the economic support of the government. One purpose will be to force the government out of the inheritance tax field and of all property levies, like those on the capital stock of corporations, all such levies being regarddtd as belonging to the states. Even repeal of the federal income amendment may be asked, because of the grave abuses of that instrument. Certainly it will be demanded that the government withdraw from all activities that are not essential governmental. These are recent and interesting political developments. Surely they are worth watching."

VANISHING STATES RIGHTS

One of the surprising developments since March 4, 1933, has been the accelerated pace of the government away from "states rights". This is especially surprising in view of the fact that the party now in power was formerly the exponent of states rights as opposed to the growth of federal control at Washington. Many a campaign has been fought on that issue, and many a Democratic orator, especially those from the conservative South, railed against the opposition for what was termed violating the spirit of the Constitution and the intent of the founding fathers.

And yet the violation of states rights in the past few years have been paled into insignificance when compared with the trend toward federalism in the last fifteen months. Certainly nobody will deny that the tendency of the NRA has been to violate what we used to know as states rights. States rights seem to be growing dimmer and dimmer. But perhaps they will again become an issue in the campaign with the two major parties changing sides on the subject. Certainly that would be a strange political development. In a recent interview in Chicago, Henry P. Fletcher, the new chairman of the Republican National Committee, in touching on the question said, in part:

"I had not realized fully the extent to which the national adminsrtation has gone in the invasion of state rights. I shall go into the subject thoroughly and shall have a lot more to say about it later. This issue will be taken up specifically in every one of the states in which the legislatures prostrated themselves so abjectly in response to demand from Washington.

"As I understand the present situation, about one-third of the states have passed bills that in effect make the numerous and almost numberless codes actually a part of the law of those states.

"These codes were written by the industries themselves, by men with no official connection with the government and they are being enforced by newly created offices whose existence never was contemplpated by the Constitution.

"They were drawn up by extra governmental forces and they were given approval by a rubber-stamp Congress, but the utter abjectness of the state legislatures was more extreme than that of Congress, for the legislatures passed their state laws without even looking at a word of the codes already in existence."

No matter what our individual views may be on the question of states rights, we will have to admit that these rights are constantly being curtailed. Unfortunately, the curtailing of the rights of the states has been accompanied, no doubt inevitably by the growth of bureaucracy at Washington. That this is contrary to the intent of the farmers of the Constitution is beyond question. The real question is, however, what are we going to do about it? Are we going to accept federal regimentation, and bureaucracy control in place of the former system in the hope that we can get Uncle Sam to solve our problems for us? If we do, then there are breakers ahead. A people who learn to depend on their government rather than on themselves, are already on the way to national decay.

American Legion Has Big Gathering In Birmingham

Birmingham, Ala. — Birmingham was overrun this week by veterans of the World War who gathered at the sixteenth and most successful convention of the Alabama Department of the American Legion.

More than 5,000 persons, including the 1,000 official delegates, roamed the streets and made merry throughout the week as they attended the various special business functions connected with the convention.

The gathering was one of the most colorful in the history of any legion gathering. The city was gaily decorated in the blue and gold colors of the legion. The streets were filled with banners bearing the legion emblem and the red, white and blue colors of the flag.

The legionnaires were all wearing the snappy white overseas caps given them when they registered. The 100 women who marched in the parade also added color to the occasion with their blue and gold capes and their bright blue overseas caps with the words "Welcome Buddy" embronzed in gold on them.

The convention opened Sunday with the memorial services at Legion Field as the prinicpal event of the day. George Lewis Bailes presided over these services and governor-elect Graves paid tribute to the departed "Buddies."

The convention sessions opened with an address by Senator Hugo Black Monday morning and the day was featured with the gala airshow at the muncipal airport to which the public as well as the legion were admitted free of charge. The retreat ceremony was also a feature of the convention. Each night Boy Scouts gathered at Woodrow Wilson Park at 6:00 p.m. and lowered the colors. Another outstanding patriotic display was the guard mount which followed the parade. Tuesday afternoon, members of the Alabama National Guard and the 69th coast artillery band participated in this display that brought back to the veterans memories of the hectic days spent in France.

The parade was also an outstanding affair. There was much music, the championship drum and bugle corps of Alabama Post No. 11, which has visited so many of the posts over the state, the Gorgas Band, the Anniston drum corps, the 69th infantry band and the numerous Birmingham music making units participating.

The grand ball was held Tuesday night at the muncipal auditorium. The grand march was led by Commander Abramson and Mrs. C. L. Salter, president of the auxiliary. This occasion was featured by 500 Birmingham girls who were especial guests to entertain the visiting delegates.

The convention was featured by the appearance of Mrs. William H. Biesters, Jr., of Philadelphia, national president of the auxiliary; John Thomas Taylor, vice president of the national legislative committee of the legion; Mrs. C. H. Miller, vice president of the national auxiliary, Governor-elect Bibb Graves, Senator Hugo Black and others high in legion and national circles.

There were also many dinners for the various units, reunions for the members of the different divisions and many other social gatherings and functions that went into the making of the 16th annual convention the greatest in the history of the department.

Everyone was looking for Elmer.

DAIRYMEN TOLD TO CULL LOW PRODUCERS

Auburn, Ala. — With prospects of roughage and grain prices going higher and very little chance for better milk prices, F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist, has issued a warning to Alabama dairymen urging them to "cull low-producing cows before winter and make every provision possible to have an adequate supply of home-grown roughage and grain.

"Dairymen with high-producing cows fed on home-grown feed will be in a relatively advantageous position during the coming winter he said.

CROP YIELDS INCREASED ON DEMONSTRATION FARM

Auburn, Ala. — The demonstration farm near here is now yielding from 30 to 40 bushels of corn per acre and more than a bale of cotton per acre as a result of soil building by the planting of winter legumes.

Prior to 1929, the same farm was averaging 10 to 15 bushels of corn per acre and barely one bale of cotton to every 3 acres.

Not only has the planting of hairy vetch with a good application of basic slag increased the acre yields but has cut down production cost and made possible production of more feed stuff for livestock, reports J. T. Belue, the county agent and supervisor of the farm.

Mrs. Sallie Prince of Alexander City is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Prince.

COMMUNITY HALL TO BE GIVEN BEST 4-H CLUB COUNTY IN U. S.

Chicago, July 23.—The finest community building which can be built and equipped for $10,000 will be given without lien or obligation to the county in the United States showing the most effective 4-H program in 1934 in a contest just announced by the national committee on Boys and Girls Club Work.

All the wininng community is asked to do is furnish the site for the edifice and set up an incorporated body to provide perpetual care and upkeep, and a program of activities designed to promote the welfare of the community.

This handsome building, designed to increase interest in 4-H Club training and foster the most wholesome relations in country and town life, is the most recent contribution of Sears, Roebuck and Co., to America's upbuilding.

The winning county will be chosen from the highest scoring county in each of the four extension divisions of the country, the eastern, southern, western and northern. Each of the three remaining high scoring counties will be awarded a $1,000 cash prize to be used to promote the welfare of the community.

The contest is open to every county in the United States with an enrollment of 100 or more 4-H members. Counties of this class have equal chances to win with those of larger enrollments, providing the ratio of membership to the county's rural population is comparable. For example, 100 active members and leaders may be able to make a better showing than several times an inactive number.

This contest, it is hoped and expected, will prove of great inspiration and future, benefit to the 4-H club movement in bringing to light successful achievements of county club organzatons. The rules of the contest, soon to be distributed to club leaders, encourage them to enlist the aid of all social, civic, rural and other local groups in furthering the 4-H program and aiding in the presentation of the county's progress. County reports must be in the hands of the state extension office on or before January 15, 1935. It is planned to dedicate the building late next summer.

The Alabama Relief Administration has launched a new measure by which thousands of deserving and destitute families on relief rolls may become owners of homes and farms, anounces Thad Holt, director.

TIME FOR PLANTING FALL POTATOES GIVEN

Auburn, Ala.—Now is the time to prepare to grow a fall crop of Irish potatoes, advises Julian Brown, extension horticulturist.

"The potatoes should be planted in the northern sections of the state from July 20 to August 1; in the middle area, from August 10 to 20; and in the southern sections from August 20 to September 1. Nothing is to be gained by planting during midsummer when temperatures are so high and moisture is quite limited.

"Because of high temperature at planting time the seed pieces should be planted deeper than is recommended for the spring planting, unless the field is to be mulched.

"Growers should plant their fall crop of potatoes in a low, moist area, or nearly so as possible. Mulching with 3 or 4 inches of leaves or straw will tend to keep the soil cool, help maintain a favorable level of soil moisture and greaty increase the yield."

County agents are advising farmers how to treat spring-grown potatoes to make them sprout.

ALABAMA GIRLS STAY IN CLUB WORK THE LONGEST

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama 4-H Club girls stay in club work longer than in any other state in the United States according to a study made by Bernard Joy of New York, Payne Fellowship student of 1933. In Alabama 36.06 per cent of the 4-H Club girls remain in club work four years or longer. The average for the United States is 20.42 per cent.

UNBURNED FORESTS CONTROL RAINFALL

Auburn, Ala.—Unburned woods may be the solution to the control of two-thirds of the rainfall in Alabama, declares Lyie Brown, extension forester.

"Soils covered by trees are very efficient in handling the water which falls on them, both by preventing the erosion of these wooded soils and by holding water off the cultivated lands below," Brown says.

THE ANNUAL GATHERING AT AUBURN IS CHANGED

Auburn, Ala.—Due to extra work in measuring cotton acreage and making allottments under the Bankhead Act, Farmers' Week at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute has been postponed. It had been scheduled for July 31 through August 3. Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the extension service, said today that the date of the meeting will be announced later.

The annual meetings of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation and the Council of Home Demonstrtion Clubs have been postponed also.

SUBMARGINAL LANDS MAY MAKE STATE PARKS

Montgomery, Ala.—An official committee of the federal government is ingaged in locating areas of submarginal land which it is hoped to take out of cultivation and devote to some appropriate public purpose, according to information issued by the Alabama State Commission of Forestry. The Commission has been advised that, while the main objective of the federal program is to get families off low grade farm land and on to better quality land or engaged in some other occupation, a secondary purpose is to develop rough land areas into parks, forests and other areas of public benefit. The park bureau of the Commission of Forestry is at present engaged in locating tracts that conform to the specifications and at the same time possess scenic features that will render them valuable as recreational areas.

CORINTH CEMETERY CLEANING

All who are interested in the cemetery at Corinth church are requested to meet there on Thursday, August the 2nd, for the purpose of cleaning off the grounds. Come prepared to spend the day and bring your tools.—Thanking you, A. L. Robinson.

REVIVAL AT SAMARIA

Revival services will begin at Samaria Baptist church Sunday at 11 a.m. Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor, will be assisted by Rev. E. Floyd Olive, of Nashville, Tenn. They are in a revival at Thorsby this week. Everyone is extended a cordial invitation to be present at these services.

ALABAMA FARMERS SAVING ON INTEREST COSTS NOW

Auburn, Ala.—Reduction in interest charges for the 3,639 farmers who have borrowed $748,062 from their production credit associations has been an important item in lowering production costs to these farmers, J. L. Robinson of the Washington office of the Farm Credit Administration said in a talk here today to teachers of vocational agriculture taking special summe rcourse at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Robinson said that farmer-borrowers had also arranged to receive an additional $242,000 in installments during the season.

"The nine production credit associations from which these farmers borrowed this money are now making loans bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent a year rather than on a flat basis," Mr. Robinson stated. He cited the example of an Alabama farmer who last year borrowed $200 for six months and paid a flat interest charge of 8 per cent, or $16. This year, the same farmer borrowed $200 from a production credit association for six months and will pay only $5 interest because the association charges interest only for the time the borrower actually has the money. The farmer also received the total amount of his loan this year instead of having his interest deducted in advance.

Since interest is charged only for the time the farmer has the money, many borrowers have further reduced their interest charges this year by obtaining their loans in installments. Farmers borrowing on such a budget basis have often been able to reduce their interest costs by as much as one-third compared to what they would have to pay if they received their entire loan at one time.

Farmers in Alabama have used their loans from production credit associations to finance the production of cotton and other crops and to purchase fertilizer, seed, horses, mules, machinery, and farm supplies, and for general agricultural purposes.

NOTICE UNITY BAPTISTS

Dr. J. O. Colley has sent a supply of empty jars with tops and rubbers to be filled with vegetables, fruits, pickles, jams and jellies for our orphan children in Troy, Ala. Those churches, societies and individuals interested in helping in this good work may call for any number of jars you wish at Renfroe Mullins's Store. Help in this good work.—S. J. Ezell.

Friends of Mrs. G. L. Phillips will regret to know that she is critically ill at her home.

IRISH POTATOES

It is difficult to keep Irish potatoes from the spring crop during the hot summer, but if you plant fall potatoes about August 10th in this county on moist land, it is possible to make plenty of potatoes to use during the winter.

To grow a fall crop it is necessary to do one of two things: (1) Get Florida grown seed and plant the same as your spring crop, or (2) Treat your home grown potatoes with ethelene chlorhydria.

To treat seed potatoes with ethelene chlorhydria use one pint of ethlene chlorhydria to 4 gallons of water. Cut the potatoes ready for planting and place them in the above solution. Leave in cool, place for 10 to 12 hours, take out of the solution and plant.

Plant in deep furrows and cover with a scooter plow. List on this ridge with a turn plow in such a way as to cover the potatoes about eigth inches deep. Ten days after planting remove the ridge to within about 3 inches of the potatoes.

CONCORD-BILLINGSLEY

There will be a working at the Concord cemetery Friday morning, the 27th of July. Those who are interested will please take notice and are urged to come prepared to work.—W. W. Williams.

TARPON STRIKES REPORTED DATE FOR RODEO IS NEAR

Foley, Ala.—Coach "Lew" Irwin, of Birmingham Athletic Club, fishing with Willard Morril as guide off the mouth of Perdido Bay, had the thrill of his life when the king of all fish—the elusive tarpon—took a liking to Coach Irwin's lure. The terrific tug at his line came so unexpectedly, and through his excitement, he managed to get the one splendid jump clear of the water.

Capt. Herman Callaway, widely known fishing guide, also reports that his recent parties have had several tarpon strikes.

All of which is excellent news, and most especially for those planning to attend the Baldwin County Fishing Rodeo, which is to be held here Aug. 2nd and 3rd.

Rodeo officials invite inquiries about the event and will mail complete information upon request.

ONE GALLON could lift the Eiffel Tower 6¼ feet!

99 Million Foot-Pounds* Per Gallon

The great Eiffel Tower spikes the sky above Paris — 7,840 tons of bolted steel. Colossal as it is, this mighty structure could be hoisted 6¼ feet off its base by a single gallon of the new powerful H-C — *provided the potential energy in the new H-C could be fully utilized.

The new H-C sells at the Sinclair stations in your neighborhood for the price of regular gasoline. The first steep hill you come to will show you what a smooth, steady stream of knockless power the new H-C gives. Or an hour's drive in traffic will convince you that here is the quick, lively acceleration you have sought so long. But for an accurate idea of its mileage — give the new H-C a 30-day trial.

Ask the Sinclair dealer for a folder which fully explains how one gallon of the new H-C could hoist the Eiffel Tower 6¼ feet.

* Foot-pound: The amount of work required to lift one pound one foot. Due to friction and other losses no machine yet built can convert into useful work all the potential energy in any gasoline. Friction alone steals millions of foot-pounds of work from every gallon of gasoline you buy. To keep friction loss in your engine at a minimum be sure to use either Sinclair Opaline or Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil.

Watermelons and honeydews are of excellent quality but more expensive than most other fruits.

Meats and eggs are higher, but a large selection of low-priced fish is available.

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

Most of my life I have been an executive. Nearly all of my life I have been the head of some organization. My problem has never been to find talented people. The hardest job I ever had has been to find loyal and dependable men and women. It takes years to build a real organization. All executives find as a rule that they have to train from ground up dependable and loyal members of an organization. The hardest thing an executive has to do is to pay a man to curse him. You can get plenty of cursing free.

Paul told Timothy to commit his teachings to faithful men who would be able to teach others. God depends upon faithful people. There are a lot of folks out of jobs, but my experience teaches me that when the head of an organization gets ready to fire some of the crowd, he usually keeps the most faithful members of the organization. If a man isn't faithful he is dangerous, especially if he has ability. Talent is a good thing, but fidelity is a better thing. God rewards faithful people. He said, "Be faithful unto death and I will give you a crown of life." This scripture quotation does not mean that we are to be faithful just as long as we live. The literal meaning is to be faithful up to the point of death. Be faithful enough to die.

A man is entitled to whatever comforts he is able to enjoy as long as he travels the road of duty. On the road of duty Abraham had servants, camels and wealth. On the road of duty Elijah stepped into a heavenly chariot and went home without dying. On the road of duty John the Baptist lost his head. On the road of duty Paul found a dungeon and went around with a bloody back. Lot's stay on the road of duty and anything that we can find in the way of comfort, it will be all right for us to enjoy it. It is when we step off the road of duty to enjoy the comforts of life that we do wrong and suffer the consequences.

MAPLE SPRINGS

Health of this community is fairly good this week. Everybody seems to be feeling better since the revial. As you know, last week was the time for our revival. Bro. Sorrell brought us a wonderful message each time, which everyone enjoyed. Did you attend any of the services? If not you missed a treat. Bro. Sorrell explained everything as he went so well until even a small child could understand. His subject Friday night was "Home." Did you have the opportunity of hearing that sermon? If not then ask someone who did. There were many prayers and good talks made by the mothers and fathers that you should have heard. There were many prayers prayed for the lost souls of this land and country and let's just keep praying and don't wait until next summer to pray for we still need your prayers. To know Bro. Sorrell is to love him. He made many friends during his stay, and I am sure Maple Springs folks won't forget to pray for Bro. Sorrell as you go about doing the will of God.

We Maple Springs folks just want to say again we enjoyed the wonderful messages which Bro. Sorrell brought to us each time and we are begging you to come and be with us any time. We will be more than glad to have you back with us. There were six additions to the church. They were Messrs. Elmer Rollan and Lee Mitchell and Mrs. Bill for baptism; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Culver by letter and Mr. Reuben Devaughn by restoration. Bro. Sorrell will help in the revival at Poplar Springs this week.

Our B. Y. P. U. and Sunday school crowd was very small Sunday and Sunday night but we are holding out faithful. We are trying to carry on this work, but it seems as if we are going to have to have some cooperation if we continue. So we would be more than glad to have you back with us both Sunday and Sunday night, and with God's help we are going to try to continue having Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. at this place.

Miss Annie Ree Jones had as her week end guest Miss Tommie Leak Robinson from Cooper.

Mr. W. F. Glenn and family had as their supper guest on last Thursday night Rev. K. U. Hull from East View.

Mr. Charlie Sandlin made a business trip to Birmingham last Saturday.

Mr. R. J. Downs and family had as their guests Sunday Mr. Lee Downs, wife and baby from Birmingham.

Everybody come back to Sunday school Sunday and let's help Mr. John Sorrell, our superintendent, out. He is always at his place ready to do his part. So let's say we are going to do our part and then we'll have a Sunday school.

Mrs. Anna Gardner, Miss Katherine Gardner and Miss Ruth Prince of Alexander City are visiting friends and relatives here this week.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala. — Scientific research and investigation is equally as important as enforcement of game and fish laws in the opinion of Commissioner I. T. Quinn of the Alabama Game and Fisheries Department.

"For many years it was commonly thought that to fix bag and creel limits, open and closed seasons on game and fish by statute and enforce these statutory regulations was the sole purpose of the state's wild life department," said Commissioner Quinn.

"But what about those agencies other than men—food, water, climate, disease, predatory birds and animals? These, after all, are a greater menace to wild life than all the ordinary agencies permitted by man in taking his annual toll of game, birds and fish."

Protection from wanton slaughter is still important and in no program of conservation of the state's wild life resources should it be minimized, he emphasized, but added that it should be considered as only one phase of a broad, constructive plan of wild life development.

"Wild life without food cannot survive," Commissioner Quinn said, "and studies of the food habits of game is of the highest importance. An adequate water supply is just as essential to wild life as it is to our domestic breeds. One of the functions of the game and fisheries department is to try, through regulation and adequate legislation, to reduce the ruthless destruction of fish by water contamination.

The study of animal, bird and fish diseases also is necessary and a system for control of predatory forms that are detrimental to game species we try to protect is important to any well-balanced program of conservation. The propagation of game, birds and fish for restocking purposes and establishment of game preserves, where game management can be practiced, are other essentials.

But all this costs money and we must look to those who are interested in wild life conservation to furnish the means for the attainment of such a program with revenue derived from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses. The more revenue the department receives, the speedier will be the devlopment of such a program.

REVIVAL AT VERBENA

Notice is given that an eight days revial will be held at the Verbena Baptist church, beginning Sunday, July 29th. Rev. N. Y. Beall of Gadsden will be in charge of the services, which will be held at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Everybody is invited to attend.

The barbecue advertised to be at White City on July 26th has been postponed until Wednesday, August the 1st.

B'ham Balloon Races July 28

Birmingham, scene of three previous similar contests, has been chosen for the national balloon races of 1934, the most important event in lighter-than-air flying to be held in America this year. The contest will start at 9:30 p.m., Saturday, July 28, from Legion Field, the City's municipal stadium and the winners of the first three places will constitute the American team in the Gordon Bennett International races at Warsaw, Poland, September 20th of this year.

The National contest is sponsored by the Birmingham Post in conjunction with a number of local firms and civic associations and the net proceeds will go to the Crippled Children's Clinic for underprivileged crippled children from all over Alabama. Because of the widespread interest in this clinic, all of the state is interested in the races and the greatest crowd ever seen at an event of this kind is expected.

Sensations and thrills such as have never been experienced at a balloon race, and witnessed only once before at the take-off of the first attempted stratosphere flight at the Century of Progress fair last summer, are promised for those who attend the Birmingham races. Contrary to custom the balloons will start at night. Powerful flood lamps will illuminate the field during the inflation and starting period and the rays from a battery of the government anti-aircraft searchlights will cut a path through the darkness on the routes taken by the departing pilots.

The first balloon will leave at 9:30 and the others will follow in five minute intervals. Prior to the start the event will be staged in a most dramatic manner. The crowd will witness the inflation of the balloons and during its progress will be told something of the history of ballooning since its very inception. Pilots and aides will be presented to the assemblage from lighted platforms and descriptions of spectacular events from previous contests will be offered by means of loud speaker equipment.

Prizes aggregating $1,750 have been offered the winners in the contest and the active work of preparation is well along under the direction of Major Ray Cooper, general manager of the National Areonautic Association, who has been in Birmingham several weeks. Entry blanks have been sent to all of the most prominent balloonists in the United States but not more than ten entrants will be accepted. Eighty thousand cubic foot balloons will be used and each will carry a crew of two. Coal gas with a lift of 50 pounds to the 1,000 cubic feet will supply the altitude and such wind as may prevail will furnish the motive power.

This will be the fourth race of balloons to be staged in Birmingham. The national races of 1920 and 1921 and the Gordon Bennett race of 1920 started from the Alabama metropolis. The latter was won by the famous Belgian pilot, Ernest Demuyter after travelling approximately 1,100 miles, while the national race of 1920 went to H. E. Honeywell of St. Louis, who covered 700 miles and the 1921 race was taken by Ralph H. Upton of Detroit with 425 miles.

WHO SAID CHICKENS?

We can use them before they are born or after they are dead. Every hour somewhere somebody is eating chickens or eggs. We have a market for them each day of the year. The demand for chickens and eggs is now greater than ever before. Are we farmers doing our part to supply the demand?

Every farm home has a few chickens. Sometimes they get disease germs and we go out of the chicken business automatically if not voluntarily.

"Mother," asked Billly coughing more than necessary for a slight.

"Yes, dear, sometimes," said mother.

"Then," said Billy, "Maybe I better not dry the dishes tonight. I might get germs on them."

We sometimes get the germs before the chickens.

If you want to grow chickens for the market, start with good stock and improve from time to time. House them the best you can. Have plenty of room. Use good feed. Give them plenty of water and keep houses and feed hoppers and drinking founts clean at all times.

Always be on the look-out for pests, as they are close around. When I was a boy I lost toenails, had ground itch, dew poison, and sometimes ate green apples, peaches, plums and raw taters. What came next? Not less than half a cup of castor oil. Did I live? Yes; but I don't use castor oil now.

You can't keep your poultry tip-top by using only one remedy. If you try that you will get out of the business almost overnight. The poultry business is something called a side line. If you are growing poultry and thinking along that line, see your county agent. He has valuable literature for you, and it may be secured merely for the asking. Read it and you will be benefitted. Talk to your neighbor who has poultry. He will be able and glad to assist you.

Subscribe for some one of the leading poultry journals. They explain many difficult problems each month. You will be benefitted if you will take time to read them. You can learn how to raise and market poultry profitably. This will be worth your while.

Then figure if it would be worth a united effort among us all to make Chilton County known as the county of fine poultry.—J. W. P. Murphy, Clanton, Route 1.

Mr .and Mrs. Luther Rodgers, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Jones, of Jasper, visited friends in Tuskegee Sunday.

TWO CHILTON COUNTY YOUTHS WIN AWARD

Ralph and Pierce Culver of Mt. Creek, Alabama, recently were awarded $200.00 each by the Leopold Schepp Foundation of New York, after having complied with all the rules of the foundation for three years.

The Leopold Schepp Foundation was founded by a very noble man whose name the Foundation bears. Mr. Schepp after having made a great success in life left his entire wealth to the boys of America through this Foundation.

In order that the boys of Chilton County may become more familiar with this great work the Foundation is doing, the pledge is shown below:

Desiring to share the benefits of the Leopold Schepp Foundation, I hereby pledge my best efforts to be worthy of the aid and encouragement which it offers.

First—To remember my accountability to my Maker, and endeavor with God's help to keep His commandments and daily seek His favor.

Second—To be loyal to my country, to obey the laws of the land which I live in, or in which I may sojourn.

Third—To honor by parents and all to whom honor is due.

Fourth—To be honest in all my dealings and endeavor to observe the rule: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Fifth—To abstain from all intoxicating drinks and harmful drugs.

Sixth—To avoid the practice of gambling in any form.

Seventh—To shun evil companions and avail myself of such moral and religious influences as are within my reach.

Eighth—To cultivate those many qualities which will fit me for good citizenship and for an honorable life.

These boys were sponsored by Rev. C. H. Rogers and Mr. W. R. Warrick of Marbury, Alabama, and are proud of the reports made to the Foundation by these two men.

Only boys under the age of fifteen years of age may enroll in the Foundation. It is hoped that many boys will have the courage to take part in such a noble work which the Foundation is carrying on and which our nation is proud of.

Mr J. W. Hayes was a business visitor in Birmingham Monday.

PRESS SPECIAL TO CHICAGO ON AUGUST 17th APPEALS TO MANY

From responses coming in from all over the state, the Alabama Press Association special train to Chicago and the Century of Progress which is to leave Birmingham Friday, August 17, at 2 p.m., over the Illinois Central railroad will be loaded to the guard rail.

Some towns have already sent in reservations for 30 to 40 people and by the time the train glides out of the Terminal station in Birmingham anywhere from 900 to 1,000 are expected to be aboard.

Officials of the passenger department of the Illinois Central are keeping in close touch with W. Roy Brown, field manager, who is handling all details of the trip for the editors and even the details of the stay in Chicago will be worked out before the train leaves.

Arrangements have been made with the American Railway Express Co., to handle all baggage from the station in Chicago to the Hotel Sherman, relieving passengers on the special train of all worry. Special buses will handle the crowd from the terminal in Chicago to the hotel.

The railroad fare of $29.95 includes hotel accommodations in Chicago and breakfast; admission into the fair grounds and one major concession; a sight seeing bus trip over the city and a moonlight boat ride up the Chicago river on the Steamer Roosevelt and back via the fair which will give the party a view of the monster fair by night.

Those outside the newspaper fraternity who wish to go on the trip should turn in their names to the editor at once so that last-minute rushes and turmoil may be avoided.

This is the opportunity of a lifetime to see the big fair, ride a fine train and associate with a splendid bunch of people. Now's the time to make your reservations.

BOND ISSUE FOR CITY APPROVED

For Erection of A City Hall and Extension of the Waterworks

An overwhelming majority of the voters of Clanton, who expressed themselves in the election Monday, approved both the proposition of bond issues for erection of a city hall and extension of the waterworks system.

Following is the official tabulation of votes as announced after completion of the count Monday night:

For City Hall.....158
Against City Hall..... 15

For Waterworks.....167
Against Waterworks..... 8

The propositions thus approved gives authorization to the city officials to proceed in acceptance of a loan of $32,000 from the Public Works Administration. Of this amount $23,000 is designated for the erection of a city hall and $9,000 for extension of the city waterworks system.

Thirty per cent of this amount will be a direct grant to the city by PWA. The balance will be repaid within thirty years, and is to be financed by separate bond issues to cover the amounts represented in each project.

As stated last week, definite location of the new city hall is not yet determined. The old Baptist church lot across the street from the courthouse has been submitted to the town for that purpose. It is understood that bids will be announced for other sites that may be available, after selection of the most appropriate and suitable location will be made.

ED MIMS REQUESTS CORRECTION OF STATEMENT ABOUT ROAD

Mr. Ed Mims, operator of Ed Mim's Camp on Coosa River below Lay Dam, requests the Union-Banner to make correction of a statement which appeared in our news columns last week relative to the road where the McAllister automobile accident happened.

It was stated in the news article that the wreck happened at a place in the road where there is a sharp curve on a steep hill. Mr. Mims says this is an error; that there is no dangerous curve nor steep hill on the road where the wreck occurred. In fact, he says, there is no such steep dangerous curve at any place on the road to his camp.

We are glad to print this statement of Mr. Mims in correction of the error he claims we made in last week's story.

NEW RED CROSS FIELD MAN PLANS STATE-WIDE ROLL CALL

Washington, D. C., July 1.—Appointment of Miss Mary Parr as field representative for the state of Alabama is announced by the American Red Cross, together with plans for setting up an efficient state-wide roll call organization to increase Red Cross membership during the annual fall campaign.

Miss Parr, like her predecessor, C. H. McFarland, has had long and varied experience. She began her work with the Red Cross in 1918 in a United States Army hospital in Cape May, New Jersey. At various times she has been director of Red Cross services in veterans hospitals, in hospital service, in home service work, in disaster service and in field activities. She was executive secretary in the Ashville, North Carolina, Red Cross chapter, when called to serve in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Louisiana several months ago. Her assignment to the Alabama post came as a result of the transfer of Mr. McFarland to the northern district of West Virginia.

Miss Parr will devote her first few weeks largely to the development of a roll call structure. She will visit Alabama chapters at regular intervals to assist in furthering Red Cross programs in the local communities.

Alabama Day At The World's Fair

Is Sponsored By Newspapers Composing the Alabama Press Association

With plans about complete for a real "ALABAMA DAY" at the World's Fair in Chicago, Monday, August 20, and the selection of "MISS ALABAMA for 1934" from the winners of contests held in more than fifty towns in the state, the persons joining the Alabama Press Special to Chicago will play a real part in the official celebration.

An invitation to Governor-elect Bibb Graves to speak at the program being arranged for official Alabama Day and also to appear on the program of the Alabama Press Association in annual convention on Saturday, August 18, has been extended by the association's officials. Col. Graves is a firm believer in the power of the weekly press of this state and is expected to give an outline of his proposed plans when he takes office next January.

Governor B. M. Miller has proclaimed Alabama Day at the Fair and will join the party or have representatives from the state. It is also expected that a number of other state officials will make the trip with the Alabama publishers and their friends for the 1934 Century of Progress.

An attractive low-priced tour is being offered anyone that wishes to go. It includes besides railroad fare from Birmingham and return, on the Illinois Central special reclining chair cars, breakfast each morning at Hotel Sherman, accommodations in the same hotel for the entire three days while there, tickets to the Fair, and outstanding concessions each day, twilight cruise up the river and into the lake via the Fair, sight-seeing tour of the Century of Progress. The cost of this complete trip is only $29.95 and for children it is $19.75.

The Alabama editors are making every effort to carry a real representative crowd from the state to participate in Alabama Day at the Fair and to give the state as much publicity as possible. Already a large delegation from each town has been reported and advanced indications are that there will be 1,000 or more to make the trip. Ask your newspaper now for this information or write W. Roy Brown, field manager of the Alabama Press Association at Montgomery, who is handling all arrangements for the tour.

Martin Memorial Services Aug. 5

Hundreds of friends of the late Rev. Darius S. Martin, who died little more than a year ago, are expected to attend the first anual memorial services in his honor to be held Sunday, August 5, at the old Bethesda Baptist church in Coosa County.

Last year, this old church which has stood nestled in the hills of Coosa County for more than a half-century was renovated and made into a memorial to the Rev. Martin and his life-long ministerial work in Coosa and surrounding countes.

Several hundred of his friends from a dozen counties throughout Central Alabama congregated to pay homage to the deceased Baptist minister when the building was dedicated in his memory.

The memorial services this year will climax a week's revival service at the old church, where the venerable minister worshipped for more than half of his life. The revival services will be conducted by the Rev. Judson Martin, son of the Rev. Darius Martin, and the Rev. John T. Nolen, a nephew. The Rev. Martin is pastor of the Sulligent Baptist church and Rev. Nolen is pastor of the Stockham Memorial Methodist church in Birmingham.

A varied program has been prepared for the memorial services this year, according to an announcement by J. Mell Martin, another son of the deceased minister, who declared that it is the aim of the family and close friends of his father to make the memorial services an annual tribute.—Rockford Chronicle.

Three Ball Games Here This Week

Tarrant City, Independence and Montgomery Are On the Menu

Baseball fans in this vicinity have a treat coming to them over this week end. Three good games will be dished out.

On Thursday, (today) the locals will play Tarrant City (Birmingham). This is a highly rated team, and carries two former Clanton boys, who have made good since going to the magic city. They are Fred and Pratt Busby. It is understood that the last part of the picnic program will end at 2:30 p.m., and the baseball game will begin at 3:00 o'clock.

On Friday, August 3, Clanton will play the Independence team, which is said to be good—plenty good.

On Saturday, August 4, the Coca-Cola team, of Montgomery, will come back for another game. The locals have already trimmed this team twice this year, but the "dope" boys are itching to come back again. They are gluttons for punishment, those fellows, and are coming with blood in their eyes.

This program should be good enough to interest any baseball fan. Be there! Good baseball is on tap.

POLICE OFFICERS CAUGHT THIEF

Paul Stutzman, Who Stole A Ford Car Up In Indiana

After a spectacular race between two Fords for seventeen miles up the paved highway toward Birmingham, Clanton police officers, Nivens and Browder, Sunday night arrested Paul Stutzman, age 19, and took charge of his stolen automobile, which was practically demolished in a wreck that ended the chase.

Stutzman, from Indiana, unknown in this section, traveling south in the new Ford V-8 which he had stolen in Indiana, stopped at a filling station in Calera Sunday night to get gasoline. When his car was filled up he drove away without paying his bill. Clanton police officers were notified to stop him.

Officers Browder and Nivens were watching the crossing at Second Avenue and Seventh Street. As Stutzman came into town he saw the officers, and turned off the highway at the Shell Station on Third Avenue. Quickly he found he could not cross the railroad, when he whipped back into the highway, went a block north, and turned west on the Selma Road.

Officers Browder and Nivens secured Tera Parrish to drive them in his new Ford, and started the chase. They followed the fleeing car to the edge of town. When they pressed him too close the driver stopped suddenly, turned around in the road, and beat the officers back to the Birmingham Highway, and started back north. John Browder shot at his tires four times while he was turning around, but with no effect.

Back to the paved highway the race took a new and more interesting start. It continued until the driver of the stolen car went off the road at the curve above George Freeman's, seventeen miles from here. The car went into a telephone pole, and was almost demolished. The officers were upon him as the driver got out of the wreck.

Stutzman was brought back to Clanton and put in jail. He was hurt some, but not seriously. Spurgeon Calloway brought the car here with his wrecker.

Admission was made to the officers by Stutzman that he stole the car in Kendallville, Indiana, but he said he did not know who the machine belonged to. Communication with Indiana officials promptly identified the car and the man who stole it. The prisoner is being held in jail here, while officers in Indiana prepare for taking over the case. An insurance man is coming here to take charge of the car.

THE STATE MUST MATCH RELIEF

County Has Voted To Give Part Of Gasoline Tax

Warning has come from Washington that Alabama, which furnished less than three per cent of the $8,614,000 spent in the state of relief during 1933, will be called upon to match federal appropriations in 1935.

On the heels of refusals from officials of various counties to devote one cent of their gas tax money to relief purposes, the Washington announcement presents a pressing problem.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the County Commissioners of Chilton County have already taken steps to assure the continuation of federal relief funds here in 1935. At their meeting last week the Commissioner passed an order appropriating the equivalent of one cent of the county's three-cent gas tax to be used jointly with federal funds for relief next year.

This action of our Commissioners made Chilton the ninth county in Alabama to assure the federal government of its desire to cooperate in the relief work, according to Judge Reynolds, who said the proposal will be submitted to state relief authorities.

Members of the court voted to make the appropriation after Judge Reynolds had explained that Thad Holt, director of the Alabama Relief Administration, had told him that only those counties which offered local cooperation will share in the 1935 federal program.

It is believed that unless county officials over the state agree to some such action as was taken in this county, it will mean that additional taxes must be levied by the state. Alabama's unemployed must be fed, clothed and housed, and the state itself, which has failed so far to recognize its responsibility must do the job in some way, either on the part of the state, or by counties themselves.

STANDARD OIL CO. ADVERTISING ALABAMA POINTS OF INTEREST

Newspaper readers will note with interest the advertising campaign which is being carried on by the Standard Oil Company this summer pointing out places of interest in Alabama. These advertisements are beautifully illustrated, and are being published in newspapers of the state over a period of several weeks.

The advertisements are designed to impress the traveler that no state has more to offer its people in the way of spots of historical interest, or a greater variety of scenic beauty than Alabama. Whether you like to spend your vacation at the coast or in the mountains; whether you like to swim, fish, golf, or motor, Alabama can fill the bill.

"See Alabama First," should be the slogan of every Alabama citizen who feels the call to go places for a summer vacation. We are glad that such an organization as the Standard Oil Company has chosen to impress this fact upon our people.

"Dr. Jones, would you advise me to go to a church school or a state school?" That is what a young lady asked the writer one time. "It depends on the church school and the state school," I replied I have a son who graduated from the Bob Jones College and he has been in three great universities. Two of these universities were very modernistic, religiously speaking. One of them is rather conservative. Of course, my son had been innoculated in our college against rationalism and modernism and was able to hold his own against the modernists in the two great universities. "I had to fight mighty hard against the subtle propaganda of the rationalists and if I had not had real Christian training, I could not have stood the test." my son told me.

The most dangerous school in the world is the church school which does not stay true to the old time religion. When we send our sons and daughters off to state institutions we can tell them, "You will have to look out for your own religion and your own faith. You are going to a state institution, and under our system of government we have separation of church and state. Don't forget to say your prayers and go to church and trust God." When we are sending a child to a church school we naturally take it for granted, and the child does too, that he will find real religion in the church school. If our children do not find religion in a church school they come home ninety-nine times out of a hundred with a shattered faith. I have seen sipirtual wrecks all over this nation. A large percentage of these spiritual wrecks were from supposedly religious schools. As a minister of the Gospel I would advise parents who are planning to send their sons and daughters off to college this fall to carefully investigate the institution. Just because a school is a church school, don't take it for granted that it is a Christian institution.

The most wicked and hypocritical people I know are the modernists, rationalists and behaviorists who are trying to capture the educational leadership of this nation. I am the president of a college and I have had to fire from our faculty in the middle of the year teachers who signed an orthodox creed and yet later I found out that they were secret modernists. I have had many hard jobs, but I am telling the whole world that the hardest job I ever had is to keep modernists from slipping into our faculty. These modernists have little conscience. They are endeavoring to capture this nation and they work under cover of darkness. They never work in the open. The Bob Jones College proposes to keep faith, but it has to watch the modernists all the time.

A VISION OF HEAVEN

Editor Union-Banner:

I have had a vision of heaven and immortal glory, and as my days on earth are but a few more, I feel impressed to make it known to the public through the columns of your paper.

I do not know and can not tell what kind of a condition I was in at the time I had my vision; but so far as this life is concerned, I did not know anything more about it than if I had never been born into the world.

The Lord permitted me to take three peeps at that Heavenly City. The first one was just slight. I hardly realized what I was looking at. The second peep was considerably better. I realized sensibly what I was seeing.

The third peep was a glorious revelation. I saw a great multitude of people there, and I never was so surprised. Heaven is composed of children from small infants up to twelve or fifteen years of age. There are but few grown people there, compared with the number of grown people here. According to my vision it seems there will be about an average of seven grown people out of every hundred there.

I saw many mansions there. They are about the size of an average bungalow house that we live in here. They are beautifully finished and decorated. There is nothing lacking about them.

Heaven is a glorious place. Every family seemed to have a mansion of their own. It doesn't matter how many there might be in a family nor how few. If there is only one out of a family, he will be just as happy as he would be if the whole family were there.

God in His wisdom so fixed it that we are not going to know anything when we get there, except heaven. It will be eternal happiness. We are going to be there to some extent just like we are in this life. We are going to know each other as we are known here.

We will be in communities like we are here. I had never thought about a highway in heaven, but there is one. I can not tell how wide it is, but it is broad enough for everyone who is able to reach that glorious place. That highway is filled with chariots. There seemed to be one for every family. If you have a large family, and all of you go to heaven, your chariot will be large enough for the whole family. If your family is small, your chariot will be small. These chariots seem to be running on the highway all the time. You will be at liberty to ride when you get ready. I saw them getting on and off the chairots going back and forth to the mansions.

There will not be any fools nor road hogs there to run over you. There is nothing pulling the chariots like we run things here. They are moved by the power of God in a smooth, calm way. Everybody seemed to be enjoying themselves to the fullest extent of happiness.

At the close of my vision I heard a voice say, "Master, shall I let him see your face?" The reply came, "Not just yet. He hasn't fully ascended to the Father; just the edge of my garment."—J. R. Short, Maplesville, R. 2.

Lesson for August 5

ELISHA HELPS THE NEEDY

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 4:1-44.

GOLDEN TEXT—And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Matthew 25:40.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Elisha Helps a Woman in Need.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Elisha Helps Those in Need.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How We May Help Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Responsibility for Others.

I. Elisha Helps a Widow (vv. 1-7).

1. Her distress (v. 1). Her husband, a godly man, was taken away by death, leaving a debt. A certain creditor was about to make her sons slaves because of the nonpayment of the debt. We are not told for what reason the debt was incurred. It may have been because of charitable deeds.

2. Her only possession (v. 2). A pot of oil was all that she had in her house. God can use what we possess, and to set that apart is the measure of our responsibility.

3. The oil miraculously increased (vv. 3-7). The meager supply of oil was so increased that the sale of it paid the debt. There was enough left for the sustenance of the family.

II. Elisha's Kind Deeds to the Shunammite Woman (vv. 8-37).

1. Her hospitality to Elisha (vv. 8-11).

a. Its occasion (v. 8). Observing that Elisha passed continually by her house in his journeys, she was moved with compassion toward him. She perceived that he was a man of God and was called upon to deny himself of many things. She determined, according to her ability, to supply his needs.

b. She fitted up a room for him (vv. 10, 11). She equipped this room with the necessary furniture to make it comfortable.

2. Elisha endeavors to repay her (vv. 12-17).

a. He offers to ask a favor of the king or head of the army (v. 13) This showed that Elisha had influence at the royal court. The woman's reply shows her truly to be a great woman. She would not change the calm and quiet of her home for a place even in the royal court.

b. Elisha announces the coming of a son to her (vv. 16, 17). Through inquiry he discovered that this woman was childless. This in that day was considered a great misfortune. He assured her that in about a year from that time she should experience the joy of motherhood.

3. The coming of sorrow to her home (vv. 18-21). The child which brought joy to her heart was suddenly taken away. The cause of his death was probably a sunstroke, for the heat of the sun at harvest time in that country is intense. When the child died she laid him upon the bed of the man of God. Her faith was such that she did not make preparation for burial but for restoration to life (Heb. 11:35).

4. The mother goes to Elisha (vv. 22-28). Happy is the one who in the days of prosperity and sunshine has so related himself to God and his prophets that help and sympathy can be given in time of trouble.

a. She took hold of Elisha's feet (v. 27). This was the eastern way of enforcing a petition.

b. She chided the prophet (v. 28). "Did I desire a son?" This implies that it would have been better not to have a child than to have lost him so soon.

5. The child restored (vv. 29-37).

a. Gehazi's fruitless errand (vv. 29-31). He hurried away and placed the prophet's staff upon the child's face, but it did not revive. Doubtless failure was due to his lack of faith.

b. Elisha's efficient service (vv. 32-37). He sent to the house where the dead child was and did two things.

(1) He prayed (v. 33). He knew that no one but God could help so he closed the door, shutting all others out.

(2) He stretched himself upon the child (v. 34). He brought his warm body in touch with the cold body of the child. God blesses and saves through the warm touch of those who are in touch with him.

III. Elisha Feeding One Hundred Men (vv. 42-44).

These hundred men were likely prophets of God. From the meager supply of twenty barley loaves and some ears of new corn these hundred men were fed. How like the deed of the Master in feeding five thousand with the barley loaves and small fishes.

LARGE CATCHES ARE BEING REPORTED AS RODEO NEARS

Large catches of all varieties of deep-sea fish are reported daily as the dates near for the annual Baldwin County Fishing Rodeo, and rodeo officials are very optimistic that the weather conditions will be ideal and accordingly feel safe in making an advance guarantee of splendid catches on August 2nd and 3rd.

Particularly plentiful at this time are king mackerel, weighing as much as 25 pounds each. All boatmen and guides report large catches.

"Registrations and inquiries are coming in daily," reports Dr. W. C. Holmes, president of the Baldwin County chapter, Isaac Walton League of America, sponsors of the rodeo. "There will be no shortage of boats this year, but nevertheless I urge all to make early registrations so that we may make boat reservations in advance."

As proof of the fine catches of king mackerel during the past few days, here is the record—all kings:

The Wonder Of Honey

(By E. H. Calfee)

Dou you know anything about the wonders of honey and how important and large the honey industry has grown to be? Very few people realize on what a large scale honey is produced today, and that the production of this "safer sweet" has become an important industry. This is true not only in the United States, but also of Canada and practically every civilized country.

Honey has been a subject for debate by farmers of the American tariff, having been at one time or another both imported and exported by the ton.

There are between 800,000 and 1,000,000 people in the United States alone who keep bees. The average annual value of honey produced in this country tops $75,000,000, while wax, as a by-product, brings about $3,000,000. There are men who support their families, educate their children, own their homes, take trips and lay something aside for old age from the honey they produce. There are localities where they measure their crops not by the pound but by the ton or even by the carlot.

The department of agriculture at Washington has in its bureau of entomology, an able staff of workers who devote their entire time and skill to the investigation of various problems connected with this industry. Extension workers are sent out to different states to spread the doctrine of better bee-keeping. Bulletins have been issued covering every phase of the subject from the anatomy of the bee to the use of the honey in the home.

Alabama ranks higher than any other state in the union in package and queen bee production. This year Alabama sent package bees out by the truck loads. Not mentioning the amount sent by express and parcel post.

Today Chilton County is using modern machinery and equipment in most all their undertakings, but few beekeepers realize the importance of modern bee equipment. A great improvement has come about in the practice of bee-keepers since the old days of "skeps" or "log-gums" and bell ringing to stop swarms. The progressive bee keeper today uses factory made hives with movable frames for the bees to store honey in and to breed in so that at any time he can open his hive so he can see how things are going. From early spring on until fall, he examines his hives regularly. His part of the work is to keep every family of bees—colony, as he calls a bee family—populous, giving each one ample storage room, preventing swarming, take off the honey at the right time, and, in the fall, see that the bees themselves have enough honey to take them through until next spring. To get the honey off the hive easily, he first uses a little contrivance to trap the bees out of it.

Some produces comb honey in little square frames called sections, but more produce extracted honey. The extracted honey man has his bees store the honey in large combs, which he removes when well sealed and takes to his extracting house. Here he slices off the wax covering of the honey cells called "cappings," and then whirls the honey out of the comb in a machine made for the purpose, called a honey extractor. The small beekeeper turns his machine by hand, but the large producers use large power driven extractors, with honey pumps to force the honey in storage tanks.

Most beekeepers in Chilton County still have their bees in log-gums or box hives and produce some chunk honey, while some few have realized the importance of modern equipment and produce a great deal of both fancy honey and extracted honey.

Common white clover, the little variety found on road sides, commonly known as dutch white clover, is one of the chief sources of honey in the United States. Hundreds of tons of nectar are gathered from these little blossoms by the bees every summer, and ripened into honey. Throughout the middle west, alfalfa supplies hundreds of tons.

Sweet clover yields heaily throughout the whole country. In California the orange groves are the main dependence for honey crops. Countless other plants are important honey yielders in different localities, such as buck wheat, cotton, poplar, sourwood, basswood, tupelo, orange, catsclaw, Alaska clover. There are at least two books dealing entirely with the list and description of American honey plants.

In the very earliest spring the bees "mark" blossoms of the red maple and elm and willows; the fruit bloom and dandelion; then the white clover, or what ever may be the main flower. Then the so-called weeds and wild flowers of late summer and fall—heartsease, boneset, astor, wild sunflowers, golden rod.

In this country the bees first begin work on the red maple the last of February. Fruit blooms about the first of April, poplar about April 15, honeydaw May 20; basswood, shoemake June 1, sourwood June 10, cotton July 1. The poplar, basswood, sourwood and cotton bring the main honey plants in this section.

The nectar in all these plants, watery, thin and only slightly sweet would go to waste except for the honey bee. They gather it from countless blossoms, carry it to the hive in their honey sacks, store it in cells of the honey comb and ripen it into honey by evaporating it.

This ripening is a mysterious process, carried on partly in the honey sack of the bees and partly in the cell of the comb. Some of the bees in the hive fan with their wings almost unceasingly and so help to evaporate the excessive water from the nectar.

While gathering this immense amount of nectar and a smaller quantity of pollen, which they also use for food, the bees perform a double service carrying pollen on their bodies from one blossom to another, they become invaluable as pollenizing agents. Fruit trees, oranges, Alaska clover, buckwheat, cucumbers and many other plants produce at their best only when freely visited by these busy workers.

The social organization of the hive is most interesting. There are usually from 30,000 to 75,000 bees in one hive. A hundred or more of these are drones, one is queen and the others are workers. The drones are males and the queen and workers are females.

The queen is the mother and lays all the eggs. Sometimes a couple of thousand a day. She mates only once, in mid air, and unless she comes out later with a swarm she spends the rest of her life, sometimes several years, in the dark hive. The drones have no stingers and would starve to death in a clover field. So they neither work nor fight. They live a few months carefree, on the honey their sisters store and then their sisters drive them from their hive and kill them off for they are useless to the hive during the long winter season and not worth their keep.

The workers have stingers and use them. They do all the work, gather nectar, make comb, feed the queen, ventilate and guard the hive in summer they work so hard they live only about six weeks. They are females but not as fully developed as the queen.

Honey is a natural food and the most ancient of sweets, primitive man getting it out from rocks and hollow trees, did not know, as modern man knows that its food value is very high, 1,485 calories to the pound, or that this food value is almost entirely pure energy. He only knew how good it tasted, and how it helped him through his fighting and hunting. He did not know either that because of being largely invert sugar it is more easily digested than cane sugar, because there wasn't any cane sugar. That came later. Cane sugar has to be inverted by the digestive system which is what taxes the pancreas so heavily and often brings on diabetes. Honey on the other hand is all ready to be digested and absorbed.

Some of the large bakers use honey to an extent that would damage the man of the street of carloads a year. Bread made with honey will keep soft and fresh when other breads without it will become stale. Honey is most superior as a sweetening for the little cakes that are sold all over the world, because made of honey, they keep moist and sweet almost indefinitely.

Large quantities are also used in making preserves. Bar-le-duc currants of France, imported at such fancy prices. It is used in candy making in summer drinks, in ice cream and over ice cream for a sundae. Honey vinegar is known to be excellent. There are a great many recipes for the use of house keepers in making honey cakes, custards, breads and muffins. Mixed with nuts or peanut butter, it has become famous as a spread for delicate sandwiches.

Honey and cream is recommended for children incluined toward tuberculosis and honey, given to any children is admitted to be the most wholesome sweet they can eat. How good it is on hot biscuits.

DROUTH MAY CHANGE POLICIES

Washington—Out of the dust and misery of the nation's worst drouth two developments arose Friday:

1. There is a possibility that the Bankhead act, involving compulsory reduction of the cotton crop, may be scrapped. The drouth has been extending its killing reign into the South, notably Texas and Oklahoma. This has led officials to wonder whether the crop would not be reduced even lower than the 10,460,251 bales permitted under the Bankhead act.

2. An enormous expansion of the government's cattle buying program is planned. Secretary Wallace declared "we expect to buy at least 4,000,000 cattle and possibly 7,000,000." The government has already bought 1,500,000 to save them from death by thirst and starvation.

Wallace predicted the AAA's general effort to aid the farmer, or some similar plan, "will continue regardless of any change in administration —or there will be disaster again."

"Grotesque" was the way he described the saying that "the Lord is punishing the farmers for reducing acreage."

"If that is true," he said, "I wonder why the Almighty has not punished the factory owners, who through these years have stopped production the moment they could no longer make a profit."

The Weather Bureau said that from the Rocky Mountains to the Appalachians, more rivers have shrunk to abnormally low levels this month than in any other July since records began in 1859.

Efforts to persuade families in hardest hit sections to sell their land and move to better soil were said to be having some success. The word went out that several thousand acres in North Central States have been optioned by the government for purchase when titles are clear. Officials disclaimed any desire to force families to move.

Dr. H. R. Tolly, head of the Farm Administration's planning division, said:

"There is no compulsion but if we did not think we could help them we would not be endeavoring to persuade them to leave. The land is not suited to agriculture," referring to parts of the Dakotas, Wyoming and Montana. "All they face if they stay is more poverty and drouth."

With the level of water in the ground dangerously low, officials of the Geological Survey said drilling more deep wells offered the only immediate solution of the water shortage.

As for the cotton control act, Farm Administration officials said they were sworn to enforce the law as it stands, and could not do otherwise unless the Southern farmers demanded its end.

Some officials believed, however, that if the cotton crop shrinks to below 10,460,251 bales, the present contral machinery might prove useless.

Congress gave the act a one-year term of life, but permitted the president to extend it for another year or terminate it at his discretion.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

ORANGES are the chief attraction of this week's markets in spite of the great variety of summer fruits available. They are both plentiful and cheap and have many uses in summer meals and beverages. Cantaloupe, watermelons and Elberta or Hiley Belle peaches are also attractive in quality and price.

Green peas, white or yellow sweet corn, beets, carrots, cabbage and green beans are the outstanding vegetables of the week. Lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers are cheap and plentiful. Celery, too, is lower in price than usual.

Eggs are slightly more expensive but are still an excellent value. Hard-cooked eggs help to make salads hearty and satisfying.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus:

Low Cost Dinner

Roast Pork with Gravy
Rice or Potatoes Boiled Onions
Bread and Butter
Sliced Bananas and Oranges
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Chicken Fricassee Boiled Rice
Celery and Peas
Hot Biscuits Butter
Orange Ice

Very Special Dinner

Buttered Cabbage
Lettuce French Dressing

FRIENDSHIP CHURCH HAD GOOD MEETINGS DURING PAST WEEK

If we used the words of the pastor, Rev. Wm. E. Robinson, regarding the series of meetings at Friendship which closed last Friday night, it would be: "The week's meetings proved to be a revival." Rev. Robinson does not like to call them revivals until they are over with and not always then, which is probably right when you think of the real meaning of the word. Old Bro. Honeycutt does not like the idea of announcing that "we are going to have a revival," either.

Any way it can be truthfully said that things generally at Friendship look better than they have for the past several years. During the meetings which were held last week there were nineteen additions to the church, fourteen of which are for baptism. Since Rev. Robinson became pastor nearly a year ago, there have been a total of thirty additions, which is about a fifty per cent increase of the former total membership.

Friendship, like many other churches, has been on the drag, but the tide has turned. It is decidedly on the up-grade as regards attendance, interest, spirituality, work and everything that goes to make a moving church. And may it continue so until the effects for good can be felt throughout the community and for miles around.

A wide-awake B. Y. P. U., an evergreen Sunday school, and a well arranged singing class that meets every Thursday night, are some of the important adjuncts to the church. There is still lots of other work to be done around Friendship, but with the potential possibilities of the community, including electric lights and it being a fine farming section, there is no reason why even greater strides might be made in the near future.

Baptismal services will be held at Hugh Mims Pond on the fourth Sunday in August at 9:00 a.m.

CLANTON UNAPPRECIATIVE OF GOOD MUSIC SAYS SID GIBSON

If there ever was a time when a large number of the decent residents of Clanton should feel ashamed of themselves, it was last Sunday evening July 29th, when Miss Beverly Hester and Mrs. Roderick Beddow gave a most delightful musical program at the Methodist church. These wonderfully gifted artists rendered the most exquisite program ever given in Chilton County, to an audience of Clanton people, which in that spacious auditorium, looked like the usual prayer meeting crowd at a cross roads church.

I dare say, if Mrs. Percy Pitts, who sponsored the concert, had announced a leg show or a suggestive motion picture and charged for admission, the auditorium would not have held the audience.

Have many of us reached the point in this ultra-modern life where beautiful organ music and a beautiful singing voice are offensive and are not worth listening to? God forbid. Those who have lost their love for the beautiful things of life and are not lifted to a higher plane by such true artistry as that of Miss Hester and Mrs. Beddow are treading on dangerous ground.

Five of us drove up from Verbena and thoroughly enjoyed every sound of the organ played by Miss Hester and every golden note of the superb voice of the charming Mrs. Beddow. I feel sorry for the residents of Clanton who failed to hear this program. Such delightful events do not often occur in small country towns.—S. L. Gibson.

Mrs. Roderick Beddow of Birmingham, and Miss Beverly Hester, Clanton's most accomplished pianist, gave a most interesting musical recital at the Clanton Methodist church Sunday evening. Mrs. Beddow has a lovely soprano voice, and sang a group of twelve selections. She is by no means a stranger to Clanton, and is always a most welcome visitor.

Mrs. R. H. Vaughn of Birmingham was a visitor to Clanton the past week end.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

A good example of what can be accomplished by a concerted effort of the citizenry of the nation under responsible leadership is the recent mass protest against the production and exhibition of immoral or suggestive motion pictures. The drive, led by prominent representatives of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish churches, has been eminently successful and the first round in the battle for cleaner movies goes undoubtedly to the church people. The motion picture producers have graciously surrendered to popular sentiment, and if cleaning up of the movies is made permanent there may not have to be another battle.

It is greatly to be hoped that this will be the outcome because if another protest is necessary the motion picture producers will lose again and the result may be what no thinking citizen wants—federal censorship of the movies. This would be a remedy almost serious as the disease. If those who have won the victory for better movies do not rest on their laurels, if the producers are sincere in their agreement to clean up, and if the two elements cooperate, then it can be said that we have gone a long way toward cleaner and better motion picture productions.

There have been many attempts to clean up the movies in the past. Only three or four years ago the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association drew up and put over a code of morals for the motion pictures. If it had been followed by the producers, the mass protest we have witnessed during the past few weeks would not have been necessary. It is true that the producers allied with the above organization agreed to accept the code, but unfortunately there was a loophole in the agreement. The producers provided for themselves a court to which they could appeal in case they did not agree with the action of the association in "cleaning up" of censoring a particular film. The producers themselves sat on this court of appeals and the result was that the value of the code was lost because it could not be enforced. Things went from bad to worse until it became evident that either the producers would remedy things themselves or run the danger of encountering a federal board of censorship.

Fortunately the producers have gracefully surrendered and it is to be hoped that we are now on the road to better and cleaner things and the movie code, neglected in the past, will now come into real use. If it does, so clear-cut are its provisions that unclean movies will be out of fashion in the future.

The motion picture business is one of the biggest in the country. Even in the depression year of 1933, 60,000,000 of our citizens attended the movies weekly. There are nearly 13,000 motion picture theaters in operation and the industry employs nearly 300,000 people. The annual payroll of eight major companies alone, in the year 1932, which marked the bottom of the depression, was $135,000,000 and the film industry pays more than $100,000,000 a year in taxes. The motion picture plays an important part in our every day life, and has an important part in the directing of the ideas of the rising generation. Certainly the industry itself has a duty to perform, even though it is purely a business institution, and that duty is to provide us with clean, wholesome entertainment.

The moral forces of the country are to be congratulated on the good job they have done for the public and the motion picture industry. They have another duty to perform, too. It is to encourage our people to attend clean, wholesome plays, and to cooperate in any way possible with the industry in its agreement to produce and exhibit such plays. The better the attendance at good plays, the less will be the inducement to produce the questionable kind.

Although criticized for moral laxness in its productions, the motion picture industry has never been as guilty of misconduct as the so-called legitimate theater and the book industry. Plays and vaudeville acts are produced nightly on the stage which the screen would not dare to portray without wholesale revisions. Many books and periodicals are printed weekly which have a moral stratum several nundred feet below the lowest of motion picture productions. That, however, does not excuse the motion picture for any transgressions. It, above all other things, is the entertainment medium of the great American public, and especially that part of the public whose ideas are most subject to outside influence. For that reason it has a special duty to perform, and it is to be hoped that from now on it will not fail in this duty. But why not continue the fight for decency and clean up the stage, and indecent books and periodicals.

EXPLODING MYTH

No one with any knowledge of political realities has taken the Literary Digest poll very seriously. From the start it was plain that, while it might fairly portray the President's great personal popularity, it could not hope to gauge the breadth and depth of public dissatisfaction with the New Deal. For one thing, it was taken at an indecisive moment, before opposition had become outspoken and definite. For another, it offered the voter no alternative—either in the form of a program or a personality—and it is a truism of politics that you cannot defeat somebody with nobody.

Now come two by-elections in New York to support overwhelmingly these doubts. They are only straws and they represent only two regions. But so far as the 28th Senate and the 2nd St. Lawrence Assembly Districts are concerned, the results not only knock the "Digest" poll into a cocked hat but indicate the local Republican sentiment, so far from surrendering to the New Deal is well above normal.

Consider first the Senate district, which, by the way, was represented by President Roosevelt in 1911-13. It includes the counties of Dutchess, Putnam and Columbia. Frederic H. Bontecou, Republican county chairman of Dutchess, was elected to succeed Senator J. Groswold Webb, deceased, over G. Glenn Newell, Democrat, by a vote of about two and one-third to one. Mr. Webb was elected in 1932 by only four to three and in 1930 by three to two.

On May 17, as it happens, the Literary Digest published some early poll figures giving the sentiment for and against the New Deal as about 50-50 in the city of Poughkeepsie, in Dutchess County. In Thursday's vote sentiment in that city was two and one-quarter to one against the Democrats. Mr. Bontecou's opponent made the New Deal an outspoken issue in his campaign and the verdict against him was overwhelming. Not only did he lose the President's county, but the president's home town (Hyde Park) and the president's election district. Only three election districts in the entire county went Democratic.

To complete the picture, it should be added that at the instigation of the president the Democratic machine in Dutchess had been entirely reorganized. As a result some Republicans were a bit fearful of the result. The outcome was far beyond their expectations and, as has been said, above normal for other years.

In the assembly election in St. Lawrence County, Warren O. Daniels, Republican was elected to succeed Walter L. Pratt by a vote which on incomplete returns was roughly three to one. The ratio between the Republican and the Democratic votes there in recent years was: 1925, five to three; 1931, two to one; 1930, seven to four; 1929, under three to one; 1928, two and one-half to one. This year it is three to one.

The November elections are not decided in July. Much water will flow over the political dam before the new congress is chosen. But these two elections offer encouragement to Republicans everywhere. They show that the myth of New Deal popularity, fostered by the "Digest" poll, is simply not so, once a man-to-man fight is on and the normal influences of party loyalties enter the polls.—New York Herad-Tribune.

HOW MUCH AND WHY?

In his address at Waterloo, Iowa, General Johnson, head of the NRA, made the statement that the Blue Eagle had put 3,000,000 men back to work and added $3,000,000,000 to the purchasing power of the American domestic market.

All of which is interesting if true, and there is no way to disprove the truth of the statement because nobody knows just how much good or injury has been accomplished by the NRA program. It is a question of opinion entirely. So many things enter into the economic future.

It might be well to point out a few facts, however, that are intersting to say the least. The business boom which followed the bank holiday and the removal of Uncle Sam from the gold standard reached its culmination just about a year ago. Since then the business indices have not been any higher. Some of them have not been so high. As this is being written car loadings are lower than they were in the same week of 1933; electric power production is about the same; steel production is lower; bank clearings are lower; the volume of goods in most lines is no greater; the heavy industries, including building, are no better; U. S. Steel and American Telephone stock are below the figure of a year ago; motor and oil stocks are about even. Babson estimates business at four per cent below the same time a year ago.

The midsummer bloom of last year was caused, not by the Blue Eagle, but by increase in confidence, due to reopening of the banks, and by the anticipation of inflation. When this inflation did not come, there was a relapse, and the relapse came at about the time the NRA codes were being put into effect.

After the fall lull there was a business rise and some buying this spring, due to anticipated higher prices, then the volume began to lag again and there has been cutting of prices to stimulate business, notably in the steel, automobile and lumber lines.

Things are better than they were two years ago but not so much, if any, better than a year ago, when the NRA codes were put into effect. And it is to be remembered, too, that things are better all over the world than they were two years ago, in countries which do not fly the Blue Eagle as well as in our own. Let's hope things will begin to increase rapidly again this fall.

Of course we can't disprove the General's statement about the three million men and the three billion in business circulation, which he terms the direct result of the Blue Eagle. We can only call attention to the interesting facts cited above. We do know one thing, however, the government is considerably over three billions more in debt than it was a year ago. There are official figures for that. And the task of paying off the debt is still to come.

Good intentions sometimes turn out badly. A Kansas man, desiring not to disturb his wife at a late hour left his shoes on the front porch and the pup carried them across the street and left them on the porch of a pretty widow.

Rex Tugwell came last week to get acquainted with his new job as assistant to Secretary Wallace. We would like to have had Tugwell out in our wheat field last week to give him a few lessons in farming in order that he hight have something else to tell the rest of the "brain trusters."

Whenever we see the account of a marriage license listing the ages of the contracting parties as "over 21" we always figure they were old enough to know better.

The scientists say there are 485 volcanoes in the world, not counting Congress.

MAN IN THE MOON

Looks Over All—Overlooks None

"Connie" Connatser

It seems that Clanton will have another representative in big time baseball before long—Roy "Connie" Connatser. There are three of the Connatsers, Broadus, Alton and Roy. Broadus is now with Tulsa. Alton is in the Dixie Amateur League. And Roy, always known around here as "little Connie," because he was the baby boy of the family, is with Birmingham, of the Southern League, and making good in a big way. After making good at the University of Alabama, where he first began to attract attention as a baseball player, this spring Roy went with Dothan, in the Dixie Amateur League. He made good there, too, and attracted the attention of the Birmingham club, which signed him in mid-season. Needless to say, he is making good there, too. He is batting in the lead-off position, and fast building a rep for hitting in the pinches, with men on the bases, and when hits mean runs. The Baron management considers Roy one of the main cogs in its infield. Close observers claim that he is by far the best of the three Connatsers, and predict a bright future for him in baseball. More than one sports writer has predicted that "little Connie" is only a year or two away from the majors. Roy is an able performer, but there are other things that will help him up as much as his ability. He has never shown an inclination to become swell-headed over his work when he wins applause. He is a hard worker, and is sensible enough to realize that if he goes up in baseball it will be because he delivers the goods, and not because he is considered a bright prospect. Speculative big league eyes are watching his every move, and if he can continue the pace he has been setting so far, he should join that long line of major league performers who have gone from the University of Alabama.

The Summer Schools

Do you remember the time when we had summer schools here in Chilton County? In those days, the schools, especially in the rural districts, were held for about five months in the winter, then the children helped in the home work, and around the farm. During the summer there would be another term of about two months. And the students usually made their grades, too. And, above all, there was always plenty of money to run the schools. But, in the language of the comics, "them days are gone forever." Nowadays we have our junior high schools, consolidated affairs, everything centralized. Naturally, with the schools far removed from the homes of most of the children, there had to be some means of transportation, so the school bus system was established. I cannot understand why it is so, but I hear much complaint about the inefficiency of schools today. It would seem that the consolidated schools, with their more efficient teachers, would make for a more efficient school system. But let's let one school patron's words enter. Said he: "I have five children. Two of them came up and had their school work under the old system. They had a spelling book, a reader, an arithmetic, a grammar, a geography, and a history book. And they learned fast, and when they had finished our school, were fairly well educated, passing their tests easily. You could ask them hard questions, or give htem hard problems, and they knew the answers. The next two have come up under the new system. They have so many books they can hardly carry them. A bus stops at the door every morning for them. They are usually back at home every afternoon by three o'clock or thereabout. They make a picnic of their school work. They are just about ready to finish our junior high school, and they hardly know the multiplication table. I don't know what is the matter, but something is wrong. Another thing—people want to know where all the school money has gone. I know. So much of it is spent trying to get the children to and from school, that there is none left with which to hire teachers after they get to school." This is not a plea for the "little red schoolhouse," but according to patrons, what they want out of schools is results, and they believe they are not getting them as they once did. I notice DeKalb County is going back to the old system, after a fling with the new, and are opening their summer schools again. Maybe we need more school work and less bus lines here in Chilton, too.

Will There Be War?

Will there be another war—soon? Just about 20 years ago, now, the greatest conflict in all history broke out in Europe. At that time, although it was well known that several countries had been preparing for war, no such preparation had been made as has been made for the next one. Here are a few figures to show just how far the several countries have gone in preparation for war. The combined standing armies of the 12 main countries of Europe total 3,119,279 men, ready to begin actual war at a moment's notice. Guns bristle on every border. In addition to this these countries have a combined trained reserve force of 33,887,857 men, ready to be called at any minute. Also, these nations have a combined special air force of 258,710 men, with thousands of fighting planes, bombers, etc. This gives a total of 37,265,846 men that can be put into uniform and put on the field in active service within a very few days. And this is in Europe, alone, and does not take into consideration, Japan, China, or the United States. Remember, too, that the condition is about like a powder barrell, just waiting for some little spark to set the whole works off—and there are plenty of sparks flying over there right now. If war comes, as it seems it may, it will be an easy matter for the United States to steer clear of it. If we want to sell to the warring nations, we can do it on this side of the pond—first come, (with the money) first served, with special favors to none. Then none of the warring powers can kick. The matter of money may change the war picture, however. All Europe, the little countries as well as the big ones, are broke. An army may fight on its stomach, but it takes money to buy food to keep those stomachs full. If Uncle Sam will assure a "hands off" attitude, stay at home and saw wood, and let the others fight as much as they please on the money they raise among them, war cannot last long. However, if our government goes poking its nose into other people's affairs, our nose might get a punch, and then we might get into the scrap. If our national officials will take a ringside seat on this side of the big ditch, and watch the scrap from this side, our people will be grateful. It will be early enough for us to get in when somebody brings the war to us. Our people will scrap quick enough when the fight is brought to us, but will be a bit slow in going out with chips on their shoulders. The most of us can remember 20 years, thank you. And as for war, we wouldn't care for any, at present.

Roosevelt's Fishing Trip

A few weeks ago the president set forth on a vacation and fishing trip, going as far as Hawaii. Of course Uncle Sam was footing the bill, and sent along a warship or two to see that the president was cared for properly. At first, that seemed very foolish, but now that we know the real mission of the president, it isn't so foolish, after all. It was a fishing trip, all right, but Mr. Roosevelt has found time to do something besides fish on this trip. We find that the trip was not for the purpose of fishing so much as it was to visit Hawaii. And here is the reason. The Hawaiian Islands belong to the United States, but the greater part of the people who live on the islands are Japanese. These Japs are loyal to Uncle Sam, so far, but with trouble looming between our nation and Japan, the president decided that a trip to Hawaii to insure the full allegiance of the islanders would not be amiss. Hawaii is a kind of "key position." In case of war between these two nations, control of Hawaii would be a very important item. Whoever was in control of Hawaii would have the privilege of storing munitions and supplies there, and of using the place as base of operations. The other nation would be hard put, with no such base from which to work. Inasmuch as the majority of the people in Hawaii are Japs, it is reasonable to believe that there would be some who would still cling to the mother country, in case of trouble. The president's trip was to make sure of the friendship and allegiance of these "American Japs", for the greater part, any way. If the United States can be sure that the greater part of these Japs would hold true, then the small percentage of loyal Japanese (loyal to their mother country) could be handled. Uncle Sam isn't looking for trouble with Japan, but one good way to insure peace is to keep all our doors shut and barred, and our defense all in good order. Certainly the Japanese would give more serious thought to entering war with us if they knew we were well prepared, than if they had an idea we were asleep on the job, or had grown careless. If President Roosevelt's trip can effect the good expected of it (and we think it can) then his trip will be worth every cent it costs, fishing or no fishing.

$1,000,000 Chinch Bill

The last congress, better know as the "economy session," certainly set a record for economy. Many were the bills they passed, mainly "rubber stamp" affairs, which the president had asked to be passed. Without inquiring into the advisability or merits of the bills, the formality of railroading these bills through the congress was effected, with only a very small per cent of them even being examined, let alone being debated. One of the biggest farces of the whole session, however, was the passage of a bill, providing for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for chich bug control. I am sure the most of us can remember the old time housecleaning days, when mother took the old fashioned wood bedsteads down, took the slats all out, fixed up a pot of boiling water, and proceeded to scald the slats and rails of the beds. This was to get rid of chinches; and if the bugs were pretty bad, she splashed water on the walls and in the cracks to kill the chinches there, too. Now, those days are no more, not with the new method of handling the chinches. Nowadays, our obliging congressmen cooly take a flat million bucks of the overladen taxpayers money and appropriate it to kill chinches. With times as they are and have been for some time, one would think that those fellows would have something on their minds becides chinches. In many cases taxpayers are paying their taxes in installments—they can't get it all together at once—and yet our great national statesmen have the nerve to spend this "blood money" to fight chinches. What statesmen! What broadminded national figures we have! We pay those fellows $10,000 per year for their "labors," and they find time to think of chinches. It's enough to turn a person's stomach to listen to the congressmen make their campaign speeches—listen to their flowery words—listen to them laud their own great deeds "on the floor of the house," and then realize that those deeds included such things as fighting chinches. Shades of Thomas Jefferson! I wonder just what Jefferson would think if he could know how his successors have turned out. Economy congress? Ugh! $10,000 chinch fighters.—Man in the Moon.

HUGHES FOR NEW DEPUTIES

Dewey Hughes, Republican nominee for Sheriff of Chilton County, declares in an advertisement this week, that, if elected Sheriff, in November, he will not use as deputies, anyone who is now or has been in the past connected with the office of Sheriff of Chilton County.

This is a clear cut and positive statement from the Republican nominee which ought to serve to satisfy any who might harbor fears that a vote for Hughes might mean the continuation of any of the present county law enforcement officials or deputies in case he is elected as sheriff.

Mr. Hughes honestly intends to be sheriff if he is electd. He will face the duties of the office on his own responsibility. He will gather about him such assistants as he believes will best serve him in carrying out his lawful responsibility as an official.

We think it wise that Mr. Hughes has acted and spoken in a way that will clearly remove from the consideration any liklihood of any of the old officials remaining in his employ.

The voters have expressed themselves in favor of new men in office. The Constitution of Alabama prohibits a Sheriff from servnig more than one term in succession. It is equally justifiable that deputies should not serve continuously. Therefore, it would seem that, in view of all circumstances and general opinions, Mr. Hughes will act wisely in choosing an entirely new force of deputies and assistants, if he is elected as sheriff in November.

It would appear that the Kansas counties are having some difficulty with various pests. Some are campaigning against chinch bugs, some against bindweed, some against jacrabbits and our own against grasshoppers. Thus far we have heard of no uprisings against mad dogs and candidates.—Lincoln County, Kansas, News.

WHEN GOVERNMENT OWNS

A declaration by the national administration in favor of private ownership and operation would be a stimulant to business generally and would help to restore the confidence of investors, the Illinois Manufacturers' Association says.

The association holds that government ownership is uneconomic and against the public interest. If the government were to take over the railroads "such uneconomic and unwarranted policy would add billions of dollars to the present stupendous and fast-growing public debt."

Consolidation of carriers, however, "should be permitted to develop naturally and logically." In the judgment of the association "public interest would best be served by less, instead of greater regulation of the railroads."

The association urges "the national administration to publish a definite declaration in opposition to public ownership of common carriers in order that the railroads may be relieved of the uncertainty that now exists and that investors may be encouraged to aid in the financial rehabilitation of transportation agencies now warranted by improving business."

It is strange that a belief persists that there is some probability that the federal government may take over the railroads. Economics are agreed that public ownership and operation of the carriers would not solve the problems, but would add greatly to the burden upon the nation's taxpayers.—Charleston News and Courier.

MIDDLE GROUND

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is in favor of the middle ground for planning the future of agriculture because it will be less painful. He says that to go on a strictly nationalist basis would cut down our exports of raw materials and take millions of acres out of cultivation. To go strictly internationalist and wipe out our protective tariffs entirely would increase our exports of raw materials but would ruin American industry. He would take the middle ground, keep some protection and reduce our active farm lands to a moderate degree. This he thinks would hurt industry some and injure agriculture some but would be less painful than a complete move to nationalism or vice versa to internationalism. Of course this is logical. Let us picture for example a big valuable dog, on which an operation seems necessary. To cut off all his nose would be too painful for the animal, and to cut off his tail would likewise be too painful. The compromise is just to slice off a piece of his nose and a piece of his tail which of course would be a lot less discomforting to the dog. Of course he would hurt at both ends instead of one, but perhaps the pain would be so scattered he would not mind it so much. Yet it might seem that the dog's best chance would be to change doctors or run away into the woods where nature possibly would effect a cure without an operation.

A Mankato father says the young man who goes with his daughter must be an awful coward. He never goes home until it is almost daylight.

Vice President Garner says that the late lamented Congress talked less than any Congress on record. Would that we could say that it spent less, too!

We have a hunch that when the time comes when everyone is getting money from the government, Uncle Sam's money won't be worth as much as it is today.

In the Scriptures the use of the term "cattle" often is meant to include "goats." In modern Americanese the term "goats" includes a lot of things.

LAUNCH NEW FIGHT ON BANG'S DISEASE

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama cattle owners may take advantage of the Federal emergency appropriation to the agglutination test for Bang's disease or infectious abrotion according to information from the United States Department of Agriculture.

The first step in having a herd tested for Bang's disease is to fill out and sign an agreement which will be furnished by any Federal veterinarian or state official who is cooperating in this campaign. In this agreement the owner agrees (1) to market or slaughter under state or federal supervision all heifers over 6 months old, cows, or bulls that react to the agglutination test, (2) to confine additions to his herd, as far as practicable to virgin animals and to those from herds known to be free of Bang's disease, (3) to continue blood testing the animals in his herd in accordance with the accredited Bang's disease herd plan of his state, and (4) to clean and disinfect his premises under supervision after the removal of reactors. Other provisions in the agreement prohibit the sale of his right or claim for payment on reacting cattle or the use of abortion vaccines on any of his herd during 6 months prior to testing.

Payments are not to exceed $20 for a grade female and $50 for a registered purebred animal. The receipts from marketing for slaughter also belong to the owner. Participation in the campaign is entirely voluntary on the part of the herd owner.

Work will be initiated in Alabama by Dr. C. A. Cary and Dr. R. E. Jackson as soon as arrangements can be developed.

FARM BOYS AND GIRLS OFFERED CERTIFICATES

Auburn, Ala.—A 4-H club certificate giving credit for one year's 4-H club work will be given Alabama boys and girls who assist their fathers in keeping the AAA Farm Record Books in conection with the cotton and corn-hog contracts.

"If any of your 4-H club boys want to keep these records for their dads, we will be glad to let them take that for their 4-H project, giving them full credit and a certificate for the year's work," writes T. A. Sims, specialist in 4-H club work, to all county agents of the state.

LEGUME SEED SHOULD BE PROPERLY LABELED

Alabama farmers are advised by J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, Auburn, not to buy winter legume seed which are not properly labeled.

Mr. Lowery says that there are certain varieties of vetch which may appear on the market that are not winter-hardy in Alabama. In case this kind of seed is bought and the winter is cold the results will be the loss of a crop of winter legumes. There are other seeds, he advises, that do not make much growth until late. The planting of these seed would make the following crop too late for maximum production.

"Do not turn to the bargain counter in buying seed," he advises. "Buy only seed labeled in strict accordance with the state laws and buy only from firms financially responsible."

FARM FACTS

President Roosevelt is "the best friend to agriculture who ever sat in the White House, declares Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama.

There is less than one puebred dairy bull for every 125 milk cows in the State of Alabama.

Alabama stands first in the United States as the home of quail, commonly known as partridge or "Bob White."

No changes in county allotments under the Bankhead act are contemplated in Tennessee, Alabama or Georgia, Secreatry of Agriculture Wallace states.

Montgomery County dairymen have appointed a committee to work out details of a milk advertising campaign.

Coosa County hog producers are planning to use part of their corn-hog reduction checks to purchase purebred Duroc-Jersey bred gilts.

Community canning plants at every rural crossroads is the goal of one phase of the relief administration's rural rehabilitation program.

PAY LAND TAXES SAYS THE FORESTRY BOARD

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama landowners have every reason to keep their taxes paid up, according to a statement issued by the state commission of forestry. If valuable for no other purpose, there is very little acreage in Alabama that will not produce in the long run substantial yields of forest products that will more than repay the carrying charges on the land.

That this fact is well appreciated throughout the state is evidenced by the small acreage that has reverted to the state for taxes as compared with the extensive areas in other southern states. Recent federal figures on this subject show that the landowners of Alabama have permitted their title to lapse on only 80,000 acres as compared with 11,800,000 in Florida, 1,250,000 in Mississippi, 2,708,000 in Louisiana, 1,880,000 in Arkansas and 920,000 in Texas.

WHO SAID CHICKENS?

Prepare for the fall laying. It depends on how the stock is grown.

The laying hen is the backbone of the poultry business and whether your pullets are going to make profitable layers or not is going to depend largely on how they are cared for during the summer months. Every chick flock that is worth growing is worth growing right, and no matter how fine the breeding may be, if they are not taken care of intelligently, they will not develop the bodies as the capacity for eggs or come in to lay at the right time to make the most of their breeding.

This is going to be a good year for the poultryman who is prepared. The chick crop for 1934 is short. Some hatcheries are 25 per cent short and others as high as 50 per cent short. The only way we can expect good results from pullets is by good management and feeding. Egg production is determined largely by the physical condition of the birds. Growing pullets cannot be expected to develop satisfactorily if they are kept in overcrowded or poorly ventilated houses.

Every year poultry growers suffer losses in stunted growth, delayed maturity and general lowering of vitality because of poorly ventilated quarters. If, when opening doors in the morning, you are met with a wave of hot, stuffy air, you may be sure that you are not taking the right care of your birds. They must have plenty of fresh air if they are to make satisfactory growth.

If we keep their quarters clean and hoppers filled and plenty of water before them at all times, the pullets will take care of the growing. Growing birds must have a growing mash all through the summer. At no time are we justified in taking it away. Pullets from 12 weeks to maturity need large amount of scratch grain, but never is there a time when they can develop as they should on grain alone.

There must be plenty of hopper space for grain and mash. Without a mash they cannot get the necessary proteins, mineral and vitamins to insure healthy growth and the lust physical condition. Do not think you are saving money by eliminating the mash for the most expensive way of feeding growing pullets is by grain alone. No feeding ration is economical that does not mature your birds and bring them into lay at the proper age. Plump, large-framed birds grown in this way will continue to lay at a higher rate and with less loss of birds. We country hoogers are known because what we have for breakfast in the city is ham and eggs. (up or over light.)

PLANTING FOR WILD LIFE IN THE COTTON BELT

In 1933 more than 10,000,000 acres of cotton land were removed from production, and the program of 1934 calls for elimination of an additional 15,000,000 acres. An enormous area, therefore, is available for use in a variety of ways that are in accordance with the policies of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Among uses to which some of this land may be put is planting for wild life. Farmers as a class enjoy hearing the cheery call of the bobwhite, seeing the cottontail timerously come out to browse at dusk, or in other ways sensing the presence of the wild things that help to make farm life attractive. For those who wish to hunt or to permit hunting on their lands, there are the additional rewards for good wild-life management, game brought to bag or revenue derived from the sale of shooting privileges. In some cases recipts from this source pay taxes, and where due attention is given to the matter, larger revenues are possible.

Planting for wild life should be planned with reference to two of the greatest needs of furred and feathered creatures, namely, the need for cover and the need for food. Important and indispensable as food is, yet cover must receive first attention, for regardless of the presence of a plenteous food supply, wild life cannot persist on land without adequate shelter from its enemies and where there is no cover where the young may be safely reared.

Cover for the majority of the small forms of wild life means low, dense vegetation, some of which should be tangled, or stiff and thorny, so that in time of need, the pursued can dive into it to escape the pursuer. The common broomsedge, for instance, is fairly good concealing cover, but in fields of it are much improved for wild life by the presence of rose or berry, brier patches, plum thickets, or honeysuckle tangles.

Planting to improve cover can well be made a double purpose by using food-producing vegetation, and a triple use by carrying it on where erosion control is needed. If only gullies and waste corners of the farm are planted, much can be done to increase cover for wild life. Cover plants for the cotton belt that are useful both as soilbuilder and food producers include greenbriers or catbriers, blackberries, dewberries, the Cherokee rose, grapevines, Virginia creeper and Japan honeysuckle.

Fruit-bearing shrubs or small trees that can be used to provide cover or any available land include red cedar, wild roses, thorn apples, black berries, dewberries, wild plums, sumacs, gall berry or inkberry, wild grapes, dogwoods, blue berries, sparkle berries, beauthberry or Mexican mulberry, elderberry, bleckhaws, and honey suckles.

Plants to be used primarily for food producers may be selected from the preceding lists or may be such additional things as mulberry, hackleberry or sugar berry, wild cherries, hollies, sour gum, and persimmon. Good mast yielders are the shrub oaks in the eastern, and shin oaks in the western part of the region.

Trees and shrubs produce more or less permanent covers and feeding places, but much use is made also of herbaceous plants, annual or perennial, for food patches. Land with alternating areas devoted to feed patches and covers, or in any event with plenty of food available near good covers, is ideal for wild life. Given these factors, with some attention perhaps to control of enemies at times, such land should soon harbor an abundant wild-life population.

Feed patches of a quarter acre to several acres in size are used. The smaller ones are entirely satisfactory, and it should always be borne in mind that proximity to good cover is necessary to full utility of a feed patch. Plants suitable for feed patches are chufa and peanut for wild turkeys, and winter pea, vetches, cowpeas, beggarweeds, Korean and common lespedezas, lespedeza sericea and other species, soy beans, sorghums or various types, millets, beans, bull grass, and Sudan grass for quail. The feed patches are fertilized and cultivated just as in agricultural production of the same plants. Livestock and poultry must be excluded, not only for the benefit of the wild life that may use the feed patches, but because production of some of the suggested plants for use or sale is prohibited under the contracts for acreage reduction that have been signed by the Secretary of Agriculture. Expert advice should be obtained as to the best methods of cultivation and as to tested strains of the legumes, surghums, millets, etc., for each locality. This information can be obtained from the county agent or from the Agricultural Experiment Station.

A farmers' bulletin treating more fully the adaption of farm practices to wild life production has been published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The number is 1719-F and the title, "Improving the Farm Environment for Wild Life." Copies can be obtained at 5 cents each from the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C.

Benefit Payments Raise Farm Income

(By J. W. Fant, County Agent)

Nearly one-third of the income from production of wheat, corn, hogs, cotton and tobacco allotted under adjustment programs now being received on the average, by 3 million contract signers who are cooperating in Agricultural Adjustment Adiminstration programs, is derived from processing taxes. The true price received by farmers who cooperate in adjustment programs consists of two parts. These cooperating growers receive the market price when the crop or animal is sold, just the same as non-cooperating grawers do. Then they receive an addition to the market price in the form of benefit payments when the proceeds from the processing taxes are distributed among them. Benefit payments on allotted production amounted roughly to 43 per cent of the market price the farmer received as of June 15.

The benefit payments to cooperating farmers from processing taxes accounts for 30 per cent of the total income (farm sales price plus benefit payments) such farmers received upon their allotments.

Attainment of better balance in production, both through shorter yields because of weather conditions, and through smaller acreages, supplemented by changing valuation of the dollar, has resulted in improvement in the average sale price of farm commodities from 50 per cent of parity in March, 1933, to 77 per cent of parity in June, 1934, or 54 per cent increase.

Meanwhile, prices paid by farmers have increased at the lesser rate of 22 per cent. Hence, the exchange value of all farm products increased 26 per cent from March, 1933, to June, 1934, and for the seven basic commodities, including benefit payments, the increase is about 70 per cent. The processing tax is the bechanism by which (1) adjustment in production is obtained and (2) agriculture collects a part of its income to supplement market prices and to compensate farmers for their cooperation. The tax, paid to farmers as benefit payments, assures that the major part of the advantages of the program will go to the farmers joining to make it a success, and will not be diverted to those who refuse to cooperate.

Rental and benefit payments to producers cooperating in wheat, cotton, tobacco and corn-hog adjustment programs up to June 29, totalled $226,750,253.29, exclusive of payments on cotton options which totalled $50,585,050.03. The rental and benefit payments are derived from processing taxes collected at the point of processing or manufacturing. It does not mean that the tax falls disproportionately on states where these processing plants are concentrated. The tax is not concentrated in that way, but is spread out as a factor in the price of the product and hence is shared by consumers generally. The tax has the same effect upon consumer price as would a rise in the price of raw material to the extent of the tax. About 19 per cent of the total wheat processing tax was collected in Minnesota. This does not reveal anything about the proportion of the wheat tax paid by Minnesota consumers. It means that Minnesota is an important milling center, and therefore a corresponding share of the tax paid by all American consumers is collected through the mills there, and that is all it means.

Because the cost of raw material produced by farmers ordinarily is a comparatively small factor in the consumer price of the finished product, the processing tax does not greatly influence the retail price. The proceeds are not retained by the government, but go to the farmer. Except for the small proportion retained by the county associations for their local administrative costs, the tax behaves entirely as any other rise in farm price. The tax which adds but a small fraction to the retail price brings a large percentage increase in the farm price. The increase in the price of a loaf of bread attributable to the tax is only half a cent, while the cotton tax raises the price of a shirt a nickel, but the farmers' true price, including benefit payments, has more than doubled for cotton and has tripled for wheat.

Notice Cotton Growers

The Chilton County Cotton Committee and County Agent are very anxious to secure the names and addresses of all cotton growers, producing cotton not now under a 1934-35 cotton acreage reduction contract.

All community committeemen, farmers, business men and others knowing of cotton growers having cotton not under contracts mentioned above are urged to submit the name and address of such grower to Mr. J. W. Fant, County Agent, Clanton, Alabama.

This information is needed in order that such growers can be notified to come to their most convenient point for making applications. This will faciliate the work materially and insure county applications being considered by the allotment board at the earliest date possible.

Mrs. Guy Meriweather, of Anniston, spent Monday here with her sister, Miss Kittye Clyde Austin.

Mr. James Wade spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Johnson, at Brundidge. He was accompanied home by Mrs. Wade, who has been spending several days in Brundidge with friends. Mrs. Johnson also came with them to spend several days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Newton and family, of Mitchell Dam, are spending their vacation of several days with relatives at Pensacola, the while enjoying many interesting amusements of the Gulf coast.

Jasper Robinson Urges Solid Front

The Union-Banner:

Please allow me space to say a few words to the Republican voters of Chilton County. I want to say first that on July 12, 1934, I received a letter dated July 11. I will quote the letter now just as it is written:

"Mr. Jasper Robinson, Verbena, Ala. Dear Sir: At the request of many Republican voters and supporters of Judge Reynolds of the county, we are requesting you to meet at the courthouse in Clanton next Tuesday, July 17, 1934, at 2 o'clock p.m., the purpose of this conference is to discuss the political situation and the best interest of the people of the county. The following has also been requested to attend from your precinct: Dick Plott and Pink Jones. Be sure to attend as this conference will be most important to the people of the county.—Yours truly, J. L. Abbott, J. J. Johnson, W. J. Moates, W. M. Benson."

Now Republican voters, at the time I received this letter I did not understand it, but I could read between the lines some and on the date of the meeting I did not go but on July 20, I was in Clanton and I found Mr. J. J. Johnson and asked him what it was all about, and he told me to let's go into the judge's office and talk the matter over with him.

I asked them to explain the League of Better Government that they wanted me to sign. Now I cannot take time to mention everything that was said but this is what I want to mention. They told me they had followed this bunch as long as they could. They did not say what bunch they had been following, but Mr. Johnson said it just means that we are not going to support all of the Republican ticket. Now, my Republican friends, I will not say any more about this conference, but we have had two primary elections this year and we have nominated a good set of candidates to be elected in November.

Now, let's stick to our party and not be misled by some defeated candidate. I am not saying who I voted for nor I did not say I got all of my votes, but I do say after we have had two elections this year that surely the majority of the voters were right. Now, lest I make this letter too long, I will say to the entire Republican ticket of Chilton County, boys, get busy and let's have a great victory this fall.—Jasper R. Robinson.

Mrs. Daniels left Wednesday to make arrangements to move to Birmingham. The many friends of the Danieles regret that their promotion will take him away from Clanton. For the past year he has been manager of the Spigener Funeral Home here.

Agriculture And The Consumer

(By Rexford G. Tugwell)
Assistant Secretary of Agriculture

The necessity of considering the needs of consumers and using their ability to satisfy such needs as a criterion for judging the present national program appears nowhere more striking than in the efforts to rehabilitate our agriculture. The Agricultural Adjustment Program has from the first recognized the necessity of protecting consumers, not simply as a matter of justice to the general public, but as an aid to farm relief itself.

Before the World War, American farmers were relatively as well off as our industrial workers. The war demand led to greatly expanded farm production, but after the war the markets for this increased output fell away drastically. This caused a severe disparity between prices of farm products and prices of other products and reduced farm incomes greatly. Even at the crest of the business cycle in 1929, farm products could be exchanged for only 91 per cent as much of other products on the average as they could have been exchanged for in the period before the war. During the depression the disparity grew. By February, 1933, the exchange value of farm products for industrial goods had fallen to 50 per cent of the pre-war average. Their exchange value for taxes and credits was even less. The disparity was present in the price of every farm product. It was severe in the export commodities, such as cotton, wheat, hog products and tobacco, where the disappearance or the severe contraction of export demand had built up great excess stocks of commodities.

The immediate cause of this disparity was the pressure of surpluses of farm products on the markets.

Many persons have wondered why the government should be concerned with reducing the production of farm products when there are people who must depend on public relief for food and clothing and who are reduced to a bare minimum of both. To some extent it is true that the disposal of agricultural surpluses is closely related to the consumer purchasing power, and the prices of many farm products are directly dependent on factory pay rolls. But, paradoxically enough, the very existence of a glut of farm products has been one of the important causes of the lack of consumer purchasing power.

The pressure of abnormal supplies on the market tends to upset the delicate balance of price and income relationships. When too much cotton and wheat and pork are forced into trade channels prices received by the farmers dwidle to levels so low that they themselves cannot buy the goods which city workers manufacture. The result is that factories close down and employees are thrown out of work. They in turn are unable to buy the products of other city workers, who also lose their jobs. When the other factors tending to slow up business activity join in there follows the whole vicious downward spiral with unemployment, failing prices, bank failures, business bankruptcies, hunger and suffering. Millions of people, unable to support themselves, are compelled to depend on public support. The nation's economic machine, gorged with an excess of farm and other products, breaks down just as surely as a human stomach gets acute indigestion if too much food is forced into it or if the food is of the wrong sort.

Something like the foregoing is what has happened in the last few years. For a variety of reasons—among them the failure of many of our foreign markets—the exchange relationships between the supply of farm products and the demand for them was deranged. Consider wheat, for instance. If every person in the United States had all the wheat he could possibly eat, there would still have been a surplus as long as production continued at the same rate as in the last few years. With no one to buy this surplus with foreign markets sharply limited, the supplies of wheat piled up in elevators and storehouses, and the carryover attained huge and unprecedented totals. Prices fell to the lowest levels ever in history. Consumers who could or would eat only a certain amount of wheat, had but a sling advantage from this surplus. Millers and bakers obtained their wheat at a much lower figure than before, but flour is only a minor part of the cost of bread. The retail price was but little affected. Over against this small temporary benefit felt by consumers was the serious injury done to them ultimately through the maladjustment of the world price structure and the dislocation of exchange relationships between farmers and city workers.

And when prosperity returns the amount of wheat which people eat is not likely to be greater, and may even be less, than it has been during the depression. This is because when people's purchasing power increases they eat more of other food products which are part of a balanced diet or which they turn to when their incomes are greater. It is not difficult to follow the reasoning that surpluses of farm products have actually contributed to the dependence upon relief; at any rate, it is because of the series of maladjustments initiated by the overproduction of farm products that the government has undertaken to assist in the control of their production. This adjusted production, on the one hand, and restored buying power at home and abroad, on the other, stood out as absolutely indispensable to agricultural recovery. The recovery program for agriculture was based upon these twin requirements.

Congress provided the means for dealing with adjusted production in the agricultural adjustment act. Its stated purpose was to promote the prosperity of the farmer by returning to him a fair share of the national income and to foster national recovery by making the farmers as good a customer of nonagricultural industries and services as he was before the World War.

The act states that it is the policy of congress to approach parity for the farmer at as rapid a rate as is feasible in view of the current consumptive demand in domestic and foreign markets. In other words, consumer needs are to be the gage of the rate at which inequalities in purchasing power are to be corrected. That is the whole agricultural adjustment program must be regulated by the consumer demand for agricultural commodities. It is evident that the act implicitly requires close study of and decisions based upon the actual or potential effect on consumers of every aspect of the program.

It is obvious that no power could raise and maintain prices of many important agricultural commodities whose carry-over stocks were several times normal, until the surpluses had been reduced or eliminated. Furthermore, suddenly pushing up the price of certain commodities, which have long been depressed, before in the new production from less profitable fields and result in new surpluses which would make it difficult or impossible to maintain the desired level of prices and would thus defeat the purpose of the act.

It also was recognized that a hasty scaling of prices would in some instances disrupt consumer-producer relations and would actually reduce consumption to an extent that would do more harm than good to agricultural producers. A reasonable relationship must be maintained between prices and effective demand. Raising prices too rapidly would reduce the purchasing power of consumers and impede national recovery.

The agricultural adjustment act provided for an attack on the problem of the surplus, recognizing this to be the most important problem standing in the way of farm recovery. Ordinarily, the producers would attend to the matter themselves, but circumstances prevent trat. Often there is no escape from the farm, except into the ranks of the unemployd; and low prices compel competing producers to maintain the volume of their output. Farm production in the United States has not changed much since 1924, although the demand has fallen greatly. The only remedy is concerted action under central guidance, a course provided for in the law by several methods, which include the leasing of land, the payment of cash compensation in return for output reductions, the cotton option plan, and marketing agreements to regulate the production, distribution, and prices. The act also makes provision for processing taxes, a means of raising revenue to help accomplish adjustment of production through benefit payments to cooperate producers. The benefit payments are themselves a direct contribution to the incomes of the cooperating farmers.

Along with the crop reduction program, the act authorizes effort to obtain for farmers a larger share of the consumer's dollar. Part of the consumer's dollar now goes to support wasteful and unecessary competition, duplication of selling expenses, a needless multiplicity of services to consumers, dubious credit arrangements, and various unethical practices. Elimination of these wastes should mean better conditions for honest and efficient business, as well as better prices for producers.

Thus the law provides the condition for an agricultural industry in which the forces of production are so managed as not to outdistance the demand and to increase the demand by redistributing purchasing power so that consumers can come more readily into the market. It is a gigantic job, requiring delicate skill in judgment and a technique of administration which we are only beginnig to master.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Vision of Jacob's Ladder.—"And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south; and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And, behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awakened out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not."—Gen. 28: 10-16. One of a series of Bible pictures made by Merian in 1625.

FIFTH AVENUE AND TWENTIETH STREET

THERE'S a pleasant, friendly atmosphere about the Hotel Molton—a delightful informality and unobtrusively efficient service that appeals to discriminating guests. While Molton service is punctilious, it is entirely lacking in that stiff formality one often finds in larger metropolitan hotels. That's why the guests who stop here once, feel like they're coming home when they return to see us.

MUSICALE AT M. E. CHURCH

Music lovers of Clanton were given a rare treat Sunday night when two brilliant artists, Mrs. Roderick Beddow of Birmingham and Miss Beverly Hester, of this city, were presented in a song recital at the Methodist church. Due to inclement weather the crowd was small, but neverthless, it was most appreciative. Mrs. Beddow's voice is a lyric soprano of remarkable sweetness and power. She has appeared here in recital before and will long be remembered for artistry and charm.

Miss Hester, who has delighted Clanton audiences many times with her brilliant style and wonderful technique, graciously consented to accompany Mrs. Beddow. She is spending her vacation here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hester, and will return to Judson College, where she is dean of music, in the fall. Miss Hester is a true artist. Clanton is indeed proud to claim this brilliant and talented musician for her own.

COUNTY PICNIC WELL ATTENDED

Four Thousand People Attend Meeting for County's Citizens

The Ben Sims Grove, two miles north of Clanton, afforded a delightful setting for the county-wide picnic last Thursday, which was attended by a gathering of about four thousand people from all parts of Chilton County, as well as many from other sections of Alabama.

The program as previously arranged and announced by Mr. Fant and Miss Pardue, was carried out according to schedule. Prominent speakers addressed the gathering throughout the day, and many novel and entertaining features added considerable spice to the occasion.

The program was started in the morning with invocation by Rev. R. P. Cochran, followed by group singing under the leadership of Mr. Percy Pitts.

Welcome addresses were given by Judge Reynolds and Mayor Lee Smith, to which an interesting response was made by Mr. D. O. Manning, prominent farmer, of Isabella.

Former County Agent, C. E. Stapp, now of Selma, delighted the large audience with a short address. Mr. Stapp is the organizer of the county-wide picnic, which he began three years ago.

Lloyd Howard, of Thorsby, was present with his accordion, which he manipulated with much pleasure to his hearers.

"Preacher" Salser, the comedy policeman, of Birmingham, occupied several minutes on the program, furnishing a deluge of funny jokes and stories, sandwiched in between some performances with his harmonica.

The work of the Women's Clubs of the County was presented under direction of Miss Ruth Pardue, home agent. The chief item on this part of the program was a speech by Mrs. M. L. Batson, president of the Alabama Council of Women's Clubs.

Several women from different clubs of the county were presented in a dress revue, showing some most attractive costumes made from flour, feed and fertilizer sacks, and costing all the way from two cents to a dollar and a half.

Near the speakers' platform the women's clubs had a booth displaying many interesting articles of canning, clothing, etc., which was a splendid illustration of the work they are doing.

Dr. L. N. Duncan, head of the extension department at Auburn, delivered an address, discussing at length "The New Deal and the Farmer." Mr. Duncan was followed by Congressman Oliver, whose address was received with much interest.

During the noon hour several interesting contests were pulled off, evoking a great deal of fun.

Mr. and Mrs. Royce Smith were given the prize for the newest newly-weds, having been married only two weeks. The oldest-wedded couple present was Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Chambers, who have been married 62 years. They were also given a prize.

The prize for the largest family went to Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Harrison, of Stanton, with twelve children. The hog calling contest was won by C. W. Burgess. Mrs. Zora Guy Smith won the balloon contest. Mrs. J. Lee Smith took the prize in the husband calling contest. The cracker-eating contest was captured by Billy Popwell.

After noon the speakers on the program were Hon. Pete Jarman, secretary of state; Hon. Luther Patrick, of Birmingham; and Mr. J. A. Beaty, of the Farm Bureau Cotton Association.

Mr. Fant and Miss Pardue wish to express their thanks to all who attended, and to those who took part on the program, for the splendid success of the occasion.

Arrested Sunday at his home at 32 Cloverdale Park, Jones was turned over later in the day to Wilcox authorities.

According to reports yesterday, Jones is wanted in Chilton, Conecuh, Butler and Wilcox Counties in connection with the bad checks or drafts, said to have been given in purchasing stocks, bonds, warrants and other investments from indivduals. The Sheriff of Chilton County has been on Jones's trail for several days and the three warrants he sent to the Sheriff of Montgomery County have been passed along to Wilcox officials as hold-over charges.

Sheriff G. L. Albritton, of Wilcox, said Jones was facing three charges in that county. He is alleged to have given worthless drafts on the Land and Title Agency of Birmingham for $318, $100 and $60 respectively. Reports from Clanton were that Alabama Power Company stock was bought with bad checks.

The bond in each case has been fixed at $500 and Sheriff Albritton said he did not think Jones would be able to make bail for the next few days at least. He was to have been tried yesterday at the August term of County Court but the case was continued for 30 days to give the defendant more time to employ counsel and prepare a defense.

Before leaving the local jail Sunday to be taken to Camden, Jones is said to have talked with several friends, including a few lawyers. He made no public statement concerning the charges.

It was at the request of Sheriff Albritton that Jones was picked up here Sunday. The Camden authorities are reported to have traced him from Birmingham to Montgomery Saturday night. It developed yesterday that the three warrants sent here from Chilton County arrived before the Wilcox County authorities had requested the arrest of Jones.

At one time Jones owned considerable property in the Cloverdale District. Before the depression came on, he is said to have sold a large number of lots for dwellings.

C. FENN JONES IN RING FOR MAYOR

Decided To Offer Himself In Municipal Election Of September 17

It will be of universal interest to the people of Clanton to know that Mr. C. Fenn Jones has definitely decided to offer himself as a candidate for Mayor of our town in the municipal election which comes off next month.

According to a statement authorized by Mr. Jones in regard to the matter Tuesday, he said he was definitely made up his mind to enter the race, and will make a formal statement to the citizens of Clanton within the next few days.

It has been generally known for some time that Mr. Jones was seriously considering this action. The possibility of his becoming a candidate has met with the hearty approval of a great number of our citizens, and many have already volunteered their support. Some have gone so far as to suggest that Mr. Jones will be elected as Mayor without opposition.

Mr. Jones needs no introduction to anybody in Clanton. He has lived here more than twenty-five years, and is fully conversant with all problems concerning the public interests of our community. He is an able business man, of a varied and successful experience, and we doubt if anybody will raise a single question concerning his fitness for the head of our city government.

A. & P. STORE IN SALES CONTEST FOR THIS WEEK AND NEXT

Mr. G. C. Armstrong, manager of the A. & P. Store in Clanton, announces that he and his sales force have entered the annual summer sales contest of A. & P. Stores, and that he has set as his goal the attainment of the highest percentage of any store in the Southern territory.

It is remembered in a similar contest last year the Clanton Store was excelled by only one other A. & P. Store in the South.

"I have written the fellow who beat us last year," said Mr. Armstrong Monday, "and told him that we are going to step out ahead this time. The manager and all of our sales force invite our friends to help us go over the top in this event. By so doing we can put Clanton on the map, and it wil be an honor which we will greatly appreciate."

The selling event runs this week and next. Every nickel and dime spent with the A. & P. Store will help Mr. Armstrong and his sales force to accomplish this honor. If they win, they will get a splendid recognition from the A. & P. organization, and a three-day vacation for Mr. Armstrong and his assistant, Mr. Mack Wyatt. They will appreciate the help of all of their friends.

H. F. CHANDLER SHOT BY JOE GRAY

Two Shots Fired From Pistol; One Entered Chandler's Stomach

Joe Y. Gray, 60, a wealthy farmer of West End, Clanton, is being held in the county jail here without bond on a charge of murder in the fatal shooting early Saturday afternoon of Harvey F. Chandler, 53.

Chandler was shot in the abdomen, officers said, shortly after Gray and Chandler had been seen entering the latter's rooms in the old Thornton Hotel Building.

Chandler and Gray had been close friends for more than 30 years, Deputy Sheriff Lewis Gillespie, who arrested Gray said, and when Gray was arrested he declared that he had shot at Chandler twice but didn't know whether he had hit him.

Gray declined to comment on the shooting other than the admission that he had shot at his old friend, Deputy Sheriff Gillespie added.

Deputy Gillespie said he went to Chandler's rooms, shortly after receiving reports of the shooting and found Chandler lying on the bed with Gray sitting beside him holding his hand. The deputy said he removed a .32 calibre revolver, a small knife and a bottle containing almost a pint of liquor from Gray's pockets when he arrested him at the scene of the shooting.

Several empty bottles, the deputy said, were found scattered about the floor in Chandler's rooms.

Chandler and Gray were widely known in Clanton and Chilton County and were regarded by their acquaintances as close friends for many years. They had been seen together in Clanton Saturday morning and were observed by Mrs. Jewel Mims, a nearby resident, entering Chandler's rooms, about 12:30 p.m. A few minutes later, Mrs. Mims said, she heard pistol shots in Chandler's rooms.

Chief of Police Hardy was first to reach the scene of the shooting and said Gray warned him not to enter, threatening to shoot him if he attempted to enter. Shortly afterward, however, when Deputy Gillespie arrived, the officers entered Chandler's rooms and Gray was arrested.

Two shots had been fired, officers said, one entering Chandler's abdomen and lodging in the muscles of his back and the other striking the floor near the side of the bed.

Deputy Gillespie said the gun taken from Gray contained two empty shells.

Twenty to thirty years ago H. F. Chandler was a prominent business man of Clanton. When he was clerk for E. M. Pinckard he was one of the most popular salesmen in Clanton. In this capacity with Pinckard and other firms in Clanton he won the respect and admiration of most people who came to Clanton to trade back in those days. He was elected Mayor of Clanton and served one term about twenty-five years ago. The dead man is survived by three widowed sisters: Mrs. J. M. Morgan, of New Orleans, La., Mrs. M. S. Whitfied, of Montgomery, and Mrs. I. C. Sapp, of Douglas, Ga. His father was J. H. Chandler who with his family moved to Clanton from Newnan, Ga., in 1886. Both his father and mother and a brother, Tom Chandler, died here between 1900 and 1905. J. H. Chandler built the house where Mrs. W. J. Fiquette now lives, and the family made their home there.

Funeral services were held at the Clanton cemetery Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. R. P. Cochran conducting. Martin was in charge. Pall bearers were: W. H. Sartor, Hugh Jones, Tom Littlejohn, H. T. Pipes, J. D. Broadhead and P. D. Wilson.

Joe Gray is a prominent farmer and landowner. He lives a mile west of Clanton.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

"He is just a free-lance." That is what a doctor of divinity said sneeringly about a street preacher. God's work to a great extent has been done by free-lances. The Old Testament prophets were free-lances. Whenever a prophet appeared in Israel it means that things were not functioning right. God had controversy with His people. The prophet took God's side of the controversy. John the Baptist was a free-lance. The Apostle Paul was a free-lance. He did not consult flesh and blood after he met Jesus Christ on the Damascus road. Martin Luther and John Calvin were free-lances. John Wesley was such a free-lance that when they would not let him preach in the church he turned tombstones into pulpits and gave the people the Gospel. The opinion of the writer is that the next great religious movement will be a sane, middle-of-the-road, free-lance movement.

I believe in advertising. I believe in newspaper advertising. I believe in the radio. The Bob Jones College broadcasts over a number of radio stations. It is estimated that one million people hear our programs daily. Our programs are introduced with announcements something like this, "This is the Bob Jones College Program. The Bob Jones college is interdenominational, coeducational and orthodox. It stands without apology for the old time religion and the absolute authority of the Bible. The motto of the college is, 'No college shall excel us in the thoroughness of our scholastic work, and God helping us we endeavor to excel all others in the thoroughness of our Christian training.'" That kind of daily announcement produces interest and we get a great many letters from our listeners.

Some time ago someone who had heard our radio program wrote us an anonymous letter and inquired, "What do you call a Christian college?" That is an interesting question. A Christian college isn't Christian just because it is a church school or just because it calls itself Christian. A Christian college believes something. It believes in the authority of the Bible and the deity of Jesus, His virgin birth, and His incarnation. It believes in the atonement which was made by the shedding of His blood on the cross. It believes in His resurrection from the dead and in the necessity of the new birth. A Christian institution doesn't only believe something, but stands for a certain type of living. It stands for decency and discipline and for authority. It is far more important for a boy and girl to learn how to live than it is for them just to learn facts about life. Remember, we must live somewhere forever. A Christian institution teaches a boy or girl how to live here and how to live forever.

A man lost a very valuable dog and advertised in a newspaper, offering $10 reward for it, but got no replies. He called at the office.

Man—I want to see the advertising manager.

Office Boy—He's out.

Man—Well, his assistant.

Boy—He's out too, sir.

Man—Well, I'll see the editor.

Boy—He's out, sir.

Man—Great Scott, is everybody out?

Boy—Yes, sir; they're all hunting for your dog.

Miss Alma Gentry of the Fair Store is visiting the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago this week. While there she will also buy the new fall and winter lines of merchandise for the Fair Store.

The following correction appeared in a small town paper:

"Our paper carried the notice last week that Mr. John Doe is a defective in the police force. This was a typographical error. Mr. Doe is really a detective in the police farce."

RESEARCH AND ADJUSTMENT

There is supposed to be a conflict between agricultural science and the need to adjust agricultural production. Agricultural science enables farmers to increase crop yields per acre and increase the output of meat and milk per unit of feed consumed. As the users of agricultural improvements increase in number, output increases until prices fall. How can all this be reconciled with the need to make supply and demand balance?

This is an old puzzle but often solved. Again and again people bring it forward as if the solution were unknown. With an air of drawing attention to an unperceived anomaly, a newspaper writer recently declared himself amazed that the technical branches of the United States Department of Agriculture should operate at full blast to perfect crop and livestock production, while the adjustment administration labored simultaneously to cut down the production of cotton, wheat, corn, hogs, tobacco and other products. Here he said, we have futulity worthy of Greek tragedy.

What would happen were farmers to abandon science, or even to use it with greatly decerased inefficiency? They would have to continue plowing, sowing and reaping. But they would use poor machinery, poor technique and poor seed. That would allow pests and diseases to ravage their crops and would harvest inefficiently what remained. By so doing, they would certainly reduce the output. But they would do so at a cost ruinous to themselves. They would increase their unit costs of production out of all proportion to any conceivable gain in prices.

From their beginnings, the United States Department of Agriculture, the state experiment stations, and state extension services have promoted efficiency on the farm. Efficiency in the old sense of the word, however, is not enough. As farmers well know, profits cannot be gotten just by improving plants and livestock, by fighting diseases and pests or by reducing the wastes of marketing. Ordinary technical efficiency reduces only the cost of production. Low-cost production may mean loss to the farmer if it is excessive production. Under present conditions it is necessary also to adjust the output to a changed world market.

Low cost per unit of production, when total production has been adjusted to effective demand, directly increases the farmers' net income. There is a definite limit to the volume of farm goods which can be disposed of under existing domestic and export demands, at a price returning a fair income to the farmer. When this limit is reached, the only sound economic way in which the farmer can increase his actual income is by utilizing the efficient technique of production which lowers his unit cost and leaves him a greater share of the market price which he gets for his goods.

Action taken under the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 enables farmers to plan their production. It seeks to transform blind competition into broadvisioned cooperation and to correct the result of previous mistakes. Meantime scientists continue their research in various problems of farm production. These two kinds of departmental activity must march together.

Agriculture needs not less science in its production but more science in its economic life. It is possible to have a full science, embracing the distribution as well as the production of wealth.

In the last year our farmers have taken their first steps toward matching efficiency in production with efficiency in economic adjustment. As they prod along this path they well realize that the more they have of the one type of efficiency, the easier they will find it to achieve the other. The reason is plain. Efficient production is more dependable and therefore more easily controlled than inefficient production. By emphasizing economic and technical problems equally and by indication, their interdependence, the department advances up a logical path, in which its various activities are wholly consistent one with another.

We might just as well command the sun to stand still as to say that science should take a holiday. Science has turned scarcity into plenty. Merely because it has served us well is no reason why we should charge science with the responsibility for our failure to apportion production to need and to distribute the fruits of plenty equitably. That failure we must charge squarely to organized society and to government. We need economic machinery corresponding to our scientific machinery in precision, in power, and in delcacy of adjustment. Scence has done the first job, and done it magnificiently. It has shown us how to produce. Now it must show us how to distribute what we produce. It must go forward and not back. To production science we must add ecenomic science, without for a moment ceasing to advance the former. Because we have surpluses of certain things does not mean that we have too much wealth or too much power to produce wealth. To suppose that we have it is to imply that man would be better off without the means to make nature do his will.

To produce efficiently is to release time and energy for other uses, adding to the enrichment of life. Not to produce as efficiently as possible would be silly. Not to regulate the total volume of production, to relate it to consumptive demand, also would be silly. No factory is expected to fail, even when producing at less than capacity, to take advantage of new efficiencies. The same reasoning applies to agriculture.

Colonel—Rastus, I understand that you are the father of twins. What have you named them?

Rastus—Well suh, the first Ah named Adagio Allegro, an' Ah'm gonna call the second Encore.

Colonel—I know you are musical Rastus, but why call the second one Encore?

Rastus, Well, Colonel, y'see he wasn't on the program at all.

Lesson for August 12

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:1-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. Romans 13:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Good Preacher and a Bad King.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Country Boy Who Became a Great Preacher.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Standing for God Against the Crowd.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Social Justice as a Universal Duty.

I. Israel's Desolation Predicted (vv. 1-3).

1. The prophet's lamentation (v. 1). Amos lamented over the doom which was to overtake the nation. The prophet is thus represented as entering into the sorrow which was to overtake Israel.

2. The nation's utter desolation and helplessness (vv. 2, 3). Israel is called a virgin because she had never been subdued by any foreign nation (Isa. 23:12). Her falling no more to rise, sets forth the utter desolation and helplessness to which the Assyrians subjected the nation.

II. The Urgent Call for the People to Return to God (vv. 4-9).

God through the prophet said, "Seek ye me and ye shall live." The implication is that while as yet the divine judgments are not executed, an opportunity is offered for them to turn to God. The time to repent is while judgment is stayed. In their turning to God they were called

1. To renounce idolatry (vv. 5, 6). They were to turn away from the places of idolatry—Bethel, Gilgal, and Beer-sheba. The judgment of God was to strike these places. He urged them the second time to seek the Lord, promising them life.

2. To cease to pervert judgment (v. 7). "Turn judgment to wormwood" implies the bitterness to the injured of the perversion of justice.

3. To cease to dethrone righteousness (vv. 7-9). "Leaving off righteousness" means that unrighteousness was allowed to take its place. For the third time he urged them to seek the Lord. In this exhortation the Lord's name is given, with a statement of some of his works.

a. "Maketh the seven stars and Orion."

b. "Turneth the shadow of death into the morning."

c. "Maketh the day dark with night."

d. "Calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth" both in rain and in deluge.

e. "Strengtheneth the spoiled against the strong."

III. The Sins Committed by the Wicked Nation (vv. 10-13).

1. They hated the judge who condemned their wicked practices (v. 10.)

2. They abhorred him that spoke uprightly (v. 10). This probably refers to the prophets themselves.

3. They trampled upon the poor (v. 11). The rich built magnificent houses out of the gains extorted from the poor, but the prophet assured them that God would not permit them to live in the houses nor drink of the wine thereof.

4. They afflicted the just (v. 12). This they did by taking a bribe. What a picture this of our own time!

5. They turned aside the poor in the gate (v. 12). Because the poor had no money they were turned aside. The times were so evil that the prudent would best keep silent.

IV. The Prophet's Plea for Repentance (vv. 14, 15).

No condition in the world, religious, social, or political, can become so difficult that the righteous are shut off from help. The righteous can

1. Seek God (v. 14). Those who seek God shall have with them the Lord of Hosts.

2. Hate the evil (v. 15). It is not enough merely to love the good; evil must be hated.

3. Establish judgment in the gate (v. 15). It was the custom in that day for the courts of justice to sit in the gate of the city. The prophet urged upon them the responsibility of placing honorable men in charge of public affairs.

V. The Judgment to Fall (vv. 16-20).

There is a coming day of retribution. Justice and right shall be vindicated. This will be realized in the day of the Lord (II. Thess. 1:7-10).

VI. Worship Which God Hates (vv. 21-27).

Sacrifices, observance of feast days, and even singing when the heart is out of fellowship with God is most displeasing to him. Worship without holiness of life is an abomination to God.

May Hurt; But Not Injure

Speech Made By Mrs. Batson At County Picnic Thursday

I first want to extend my congratulations to the people of Chilton County in the progressive step of employing a full time home agent. We are living in a new day, a new era, a time of adjustment, when we must adapt ourselves and our conditions to that of a changing world. It is not an adjustment of the few but all. Agriculture, industry, labor, education, finance, all—to a new but sounder basis. An adjustment that embraces folk—one that affects both men and women. You have long had a county agent. Being a woman, it is natural that I feel so keenly, so proudly, the new and equal chances you now are offering the women of Chilton County the services of a home agent and, through her, the services of your extension service at Auburn. I am quite honest when I say that I can think of no way in which you could help the women of this county to accept and fulfill their duties in the new deal.

It is only natural that with your agent comes the formation of your county council. As president of our state council, I am delighted to learn that you have taken this step, and as representative of our other councils, I do welcome you so wholeheartedly into our organization. I sincerely trust that in the years to come we may be of so much help to you and you to us that you will never withdraw. For the benefit of those not so familiar with our work, may I explain what I mean when we say county council. The home agent carries on her work through clubs of women and clubs of girls, organized in the several communities. I understand, here in Chilton County, you have fourteen women's clubs and eleven girls' clubs. These women groups are now organized into a combined group known as a county council. This council has its affairs, and should meet four times during the year. Though impossible for all members from each club to attend these meeting, representatives from each club attends. And then we quite naturally wonder what this group does. The first and foremost object of this county group is to bind more closely together the individual clubs. It is surprising to learn how much these women enjoy meeting, knowing and sharing their problems with each other. This group decides all matters of interest to the smaller groups and sponsors county wide meetings and programs. I am told that Chilton County Council, though quite newly organized, accepted the responsibility of this meeting today, and have already earned some money to offset any expenses. In this alone these women are accepting responsibility, and exemplify untiy, fellowship, leadership and ability. Future years of unthought of accomplishment will teach you what your women can do, when given the chance and a little help.

Just as the clubs are grouped into a county organization, so are our county groups banded into a state group, which we call the Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs. The state organization was only formed back in 1926, so it is still just a growing child. Each year, however, it grows in strength, beauty and character; strength, because its membership has grown from a small few to approximately 18,000 women trained to manage their homes efficiently and economically, using the material at hand. They are beautifying their homes and communities and making them more attractive places to live. They are rearing their families with a trained and careful hand, building citizenship through united community service.

Today our state council has five major objectives which embrace suggestions made through the National Home and Community Department. These objectives are:

1. A Home Demonstration Agent in every County. Our 67 counties each has a county agent but only 42 counties have felt their homes and home life of sufficient importance to afford a trained leader to help these homemakers with their problems. All things must grow from the inside out. I don't think anyone ever saw an apple form from the peel or a rose from the petal but from the core out. Likewise must our citizenship grow from the core, namely our homes.

Is it possible to develop a well rounded citizen in a home that has been denied all beauty and luxuries. Oh, too long, dear friends, have we felt that homemaking was an instinct and that anyone can do it. It is a profession of professions in that it combines seamstress, dietitian, landscaping, interior decoration, business management, teaching and others. Other professions are required to be modern and up-to-date while homemaking, the care of it all, has been so sadly neglected. Now that you have your agent, raise your voice in one accord that your sister counties may have an equal advantage and whatever you do, never allow any forces or factors to take her away from you.

Another of our objectives is: Farm home living which comprises the things we study from year to year to make our living more comfortable, namely: nutrition, food preservation, clothing, home management, curb markets, landscape architecture, child care and training, and art crafts such as basketry, gloves, purses, fans, etc. It is almost unbelievable the results accomplished by the organized efforts of this group of women.

Another of our objectives is citizenship. The average farm woman has been too busy, so she thought, to think whether or not she owed her country a duty. The past few years have made her realize that if she did not owe her country a duty she certainly owed her children a chance in training and education so that when they reached the age to exercise their citizenship rights they would be ready to judge for themselves.

And then we have 4-H club work. Naturally 4-H club work and home demonstration work are so closely allied that it is but natural that we sponsor any movement towards its progress.

And last, but certainly not least, information relative to cooperative marketing and the farm bureau, for after all, we are one big family and the thing that affects the marketing of dad's products affects the family. We know the time has come when we can no more live to ourselves. We must live and help live. Other organizations learned this before agriculturists and for years have grouped together to help each other live. Now the farmer and his family are cooperating with other farm families to buy and sell collectively, which always means better prices.

I sincerely hope that as a council you will study these objectives and use your influence to develop, enlarge and strengthen them.

Again, let me say, we are so proud of you and so happy to welcome you into our group.—Mrs. M. L. Batson, president Alabama Council of Home Demonstration Clubs.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Moses Found by Pharaoh's Daughter.—When Moses was born his mother hid him three months, evading Pharaoh's command that the Hebrew male babies were to be cast into the river. "And when she could not longer hide him, she took for him an ark of bulrushes, and put the child therein; and she laid it by the river's brink. And his sister stood afar off, to wit what would be done to him. And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash herself at the river; and when she saw the ark among the flags, she sent one of her maidens to fetch it. And when she had opened it, she saw the child: and, behold, the babe wept. And she had compassion on him, and said, This is one of the Hebrews' children. Then saith his sister to Pharaoh's daughter, Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee? And Pharaoh's daughter said unto her, Go. And the maid went and called the child's mother. And the woman took the child, and nursed it. And the child grew, and she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water."—Ex. 2: 3-10. From Merian's story of the Bible in pictures.

WHO SAID CHICKENS

If you have pullets now is the time to use good judgment for you want them to produce enough eggs to pay expenses and then some. Partition the yard. Place the undersized to themselves. Give them some extra care, and that will require a change in feed, but it will be worth the extra expense, for you want them to be a uniform size when the time comes for them to be placed in the laying house. This will help you to get uniform eggs.

How well do we remember a few years back. A hen was just a hen, big or little, black or white. She sold for a quarter. Fryers sold per head and not per pound. But a new day has come and we buy and sell by ounces and pounds. The egg market looks us straight in the face and says, "Give us uniform eggs." We can only meet this demand by growing uniform pullets and marketing uniform eggs. We already have a market for quality eggs. That must not only be a fresh egg, but it must excell in size, shape, shell, color and texture, egg yolk condition, condition of white, flavor and nutrition value.

It takes good quality feed to have quality eggs. But as I am not writing about feed now, I will stay off the feed question.

How well do we remember the time that we set out peach or apple sprouts and just waited for the fruit. We had nothing to worry about. Can we do that now? No. We can set the hen and grow the chicks, that is, if the hen has good luck, and the pay we get is any size egg you want to look at. This is O. K., if you only grow them for home consumption, but if you care to help feed the other fellow on chicken and eggs you will have to get off the old way and take a ride on the band wagon headed for better poultry.—J. W. P. Murphy.

This will be a side prize and not an official rodeo award.

Twenty-six states have old-age pensions. Six other states joined the list last year. Before the automobile days people could save something for old age but few can do it now. The puzzler is, who is finally to pay the taxes? Who will pull the public wagon on which everyone is going to ride? When great nations default honest debts, when farm mortgages have to be compromised, when delinquent taxes fill pages, when big cities cannot pay their school teachers, what is going to happen when we undertake to pay everybody?

A lot of fellows would be etter of now if they had spent more time in church back in the boom days and less time at a night club or in a board room watching the Wall Street ticker.

Uncle Sam's ships have gone back to sea, leaving in New York pleasant memories—and most of the pay roll.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

(By Frank P. Litschert

With the coming of another crisis in Austria and the thickening of the war clouds in Europe it behooves Uncle Sam to be all the more careful in avoiding European entanglements. At the same time it is up to the people of the United States to cease permitting themselves to be stuffed with foreign propaganda in behalf of one foreign nation or another will be increasing all the time, as the political rivalries in Europe become sharper. They all want to line up Uncle Sam in the hope that they can caox him into another European holocaust.

It will be well if we follow the advice of that distinguished author and diplomat, Richard Washburn Child, in a recent address at the Rotary Club in Newport, Rhode Island, in which he warned Americans to beware of this foreign propaganda which is becoming increasingly violent. Mr. Childs declared that Europe is now thinking in terms of Napoleon and Bismarck but is acting like salesmen of gold bricks. The bricks, of course, are principally for sale in the United States which has the biggest international gold brick market in the world. As Mr. Childs says: "We have been loaded with the goose stepping of foreign propaganda. We have passed through a period when each of us languished in that national disease in which the fever is to cast the mote out of the other fellow's eye after the other fellow has got both of his fingers stuck into ours. * * * There never was a time when more money was being spent abroad to prepare goose stepping for American geese.

"We accept advice from abroad and banquet those who give it whether the messenger be a real foreign or an American who has become so. Foreign universities give them degrees and foreign governments bestow upon them brass and enamelled orders of the Sap.

"All in all one would believe that foreign nations could let our public opinion on foreign policy go balmy just by itself. But no, now is the time when the business of importation of foreign-made propaganda is flourishing. Particularly it should stop in a period when the world is ticklish and every nation would like to drag the United States into playing on its side in games we do not know and do not want to know. They tell us that this is a world in which interdependence of interests forbids isolation. Whereupon each and every one of them enters a political or economic contest to see how isolated they themselves can be.

Outlining modern political and military startegy as practical in Europe, Mr. Childs said: "The greatest modern war startegy today is to make trouble between any two of one's competitors or potential enemies. Next to that the skillful players go inside another nation and finance and finesse revolution and discontent there. It is a sneak war and there is no armed invasion. The Kellogg pact is an old fashioned promise. No one who even fears actual war talks about solemn contracts. They talk about cannon and cartridges and stirring up labor and revolt.

"What they want of us in that whirlpool of intrigue or in the force of international consultations which result in meaningless memoranda is hard for us to see. If, however there ever was a time when we should stop minding their business for them is now. One cannot, therefore, at this period and under these conditions have half the backbone of an American unless he says, 'mind your own international business and mind it behind an impregnable defense.' Every professional pacifist should kneel before such a defense as the one way to peace."

Here is excellent advice and advice worth remembering and following. With Europe in its present state of dangerous ferment let us do three things: mind our own business, keep our defenses in good order, and turn a deaf ear to alien propaganda no matter what the source.

THE RIGHT TO CRITICIZE

It needs to be said in very plain language that American citizens are neither selfish nor unpatriotic because they criticize policies of the New Deal. Under the Constitution they are guaranteed freedom of speech and of the press. If criticism ceases, then we will have gone back to the days of the divine right of kings, when the monarch could do no wrong, even though the empty form of the Constitution is still kept on the books.

Members of the Administration have gone out of their way to condemn and flay critics of those in control of the government. President Roosevelt himself, in a recent speech, after summing up the accomplishments of his administration thus far, said that the overwhelming majority of farmers, workers and manufacturers do not deny these gains. Rather, he added, the doubting Thomases are of two groups—those who seek special political privileges and those who seek special financial privileges. A selfish minority, he went on to say, will always combine to think of themselves first and of their fellow beings second.

But since when has it become selfish to express one's opinion concerning the wisdom of controversial economic issues? Critics may be, and many of them are, primarily concerned with the future of their country and the welfare of their fellow men. Practically all the measures of the New Deal are along economic lines the merits of which are patently matters of judgment and not of patriotism. To say that it is patriotic or unselfish to believe in the Agricultural Adjustment Act or even the National Industrial Recovery Act is hokum; it is a matter of estimate, of opinion, of a correct decision.

Nor are critics of such measures necessarily under compulsion to propose substitutes. The critic of government policies or measures is not required, under Anglo-Saxon traditions, to offer a plan. In the long experience of the English race, the lesson has been learned that there are frequent occasions when the wisest thing to say to government is no. If a man is about to jump out of a window, it is not necessary to find something else for him to do; to stop him is sufficient.

We live under a party form of government in this country, and it is the duty of the minority party, as of all men who put country above political considerations, to criticize. It is true that in Great Britain there have been coalition governments at various times, and these have resulted in a considerable truce as regards criticism. But such agreements meant, of course, that each party had an actual share in the administration. There is no such coalition in this country, and, consequently, the minority party with us not only has the right but the absolute duty to criticize.

Never was there a more sustained effort by a minority party to criticize than that which the Democrats conducted for the four years 1928-1932. Indeed, it was so generally recognized as being effective, by friend and foe alike, that it came to be known as the "smear Hoover" campaign. Perhaps this criticism was well based; perhaps not. But just because the shoe is on the other foot now, the leaders of the present Administration cannot in fairness turn around and brand all criticism of its plans and policies unpatriotic.—Saturday Evening Post.

PETTYFOGGING?

The NRA still has its critics and these evidently are not being diminished to any great extent by some of the attorneys representing the government, when questions pertaining to the violation of the NRA provisions are brought into court. Proof of this was furnish the other day in press dispatches commenting on a hearing held in the United States District Court in Baltimore. The Greif Company, clothing manufacturers, succeeded in getting in federal court an injunction temporarily restraining the NRA officials from inflicting on them certain penalties for alleged violations of the act.

In a subsequent hearing on certain phases of the case, Judge William C. Coleman in the U. S. District Court sharply criticized the attitude of certain of the attorneys representing the NRA in the hearing before him, and he charged them specifically with "evasion" and "pettyflogging". The NRA, it is said, was represented by a dozen or more lawyers.

In announcing his decision continuing the restraining order until September, Judge Coleman said in part:

"We have here a vivid example of a complainant who in good faith has been unable to learn how or where to proceed. He made repeated efforts to learn from the authorities the method of procedure he should follow, and could not. I am satisfied that these efforts were made in good faith and that the complainant has the right to resort to this court at this time. I am not attempting to pass on the validity of the law itself, or the particular sections to which objection is made.

"The court cannot refrain from deprecating the attitude which has been shown here today on the part of the various representatives of the government. Instead of an attitude of willingness to meet these issues which are new—and we are now blazing a trail—there has been a cloud of pettyflogging on the part of the various representatives of the government where there ought to have been a willingness to meet business men fairly and squarely on these vital issues and thrash them out in a court of competent jurisdiction."

THE FARM BONUS IN ENGLAND

The British government, in the way of a subsidy, has paid $22,500,000 to 76,500 wheat growers; but the brain trust will note with amazement that the money was paid for wheat that was grown and not for wheat that was not grown.—ndianapolis News.

Exactly. While the AAA is encouraging farmers to reduce their acreage, paying them for wheat they do not grow, and charging the cost to the consumer of bread, and flour, Great Britain is stimulating wheat production in England. The result is that the English farmer benefits by any increase in price which may come from acreage reduction in the United States. While our own farmers and consumers are holding the bag. It will do little good for Uncle Sam to try to reduce the world wheat surplus, if other nations take advantage of his action to raise more wheat for world consumption. The result in England is only a straw to show which way the wind is blowing. Already there are indications that Argentina is going to kick over the traces on wheat reduction, while the German and Italian governments are encouraging greater wheat production by their own farmers. Uncle Sam still retains his title as the international Santa Claus.

Those who claim that prisoners are being pampered with radio sets in their cells evidently haven't been listening in lately.

A new and more destructive type of boll weevil has been found in Arizona. And all this time government agents have been looking for him around Chicago somewhere.

Who Said Peaches?

There are peaches and more peaches but the best I have seen this year came from the orchard of Harmon Headley, on Clanton Route 7. Last year I went out to Mr. Headley's place, and I have never seen a more beautiful scene than that peach orchard. I carried some of them all the way to Cullman, and showed them to scores of people, and they were objects of admiration everywhere I went. I have seen the peach section of Georgia, which has become famous from one end of the country to the other, but I have never seen any finer peaches even there than those raised by Mr. Hadley. Last week Mr. Headley brought in a sample hamper of his fruit, and as was the case last year, they were some of the finest I have ever seen. In the past, I have seen fruit tree salesmen, with their books showing beautiful pictures of fruit, and I have often heard this remark: "Those pictures are pretty, but you can't raise fruit that will look like that." Mr. Headley's peaches are as pretty as any pictures in nursery books that I have ever seen. But they don't just happen to be that way. Mr. Headley has gone agout his peach business in a systematic manner. He bought good trees; he set them right and spaced them right; he sprayed and pruned them and worked them as carefully as he could, and according to the best methods. There are no weeds between his trees; there are no worms in his peaches. All this has meant work, and lots of it. But he has gotten results. Mr. Headley told me last year, that he had no trouble disposing of his fruit in the markets of the nearby cities, even though loads and loads of peaches were on every hand, and their owners unable to dispose of them. Quality is easily recognized, and buyers will buy quality products and pay top prices, when they will not buy poor quality stuff at any price. I wish every farmer in Chilton County would go to see Mr. Headley's orchard and talk with him about it. He is very enthusiastic. He knows he has a market for all his fruit, and the future is bright for him. It might be the same way with many others, if they would adopt Mr. Headley's methods. I intended to go out and make pictures of Mr. Headley's orchard to keep at the Union-Banner office, but was hindered. Go to see this orchard. You will see what can be done here in the fruit line, although this is not supposed to be a good fruit region. Take a tip from Mr. Headley: "Grow quality products, and a ready market is waiting for you."

Jesse Frank Foshee

Clanton has another champion—Jesse Frank Foshee. Jesse attended the Citizens Military Training Camp at Fort McClellan, near Anniston, this summer, and came home with a boxing championship. His medal is a small silver boxing glove, on which is engraved: "Champion, C. M. T. C., 1934." He was put in the "unlimited" class, that is, all entrants above 160 pounds, and, no doubt, met some stiff competition. There are trainees at Fort McClellan from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Florida. Jesse Frank is justly proud of his record at camp this year, and Clanton is proud of him. He expects to attend camp every year until he has finished his four years there; then, by enlisting in a reserve corps for one year, he will automatically become a second lieutenant in the regular army, in case he should be called to the colors. He expects to attend college this year, but, so far, has not decided whether it will be the University of Alabama, at Tuscaloosa, or at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn. Jesse is keen on athletics—plays football, basketball, and tennis, and should make a good man wherever he attends college, besides his boxing. He is a clean sportsman, and a good one—A fine fellow to know.

The End of the Line

Believe it or not, this is the end of the line. After this week there will be no more Man in the Moon. In the future, if I should want to write on some question, I will do so, but the column will not be regular from now on. If I have any regular readers, I am deeply grateful for them. If this column has done good, I am glad. If it has caused any harm, or has caused any ill feeling, I humbly beg the pardon of any person so affected. I want to express my sincere appreciation for the favorable expressions extended in regard to some articles that this column has carried; also for the criticism that has been offered. It is impossible for anyone to please everybody, and I feel that this criticism has, at times, been of real worth to the column. I have tried to express a clear cut and impartial view of all questions of moment, without fear or favor. I have offered praise where I believed praise was due, and I have offered criticism where I believed constructvie criticism was in order. I have tried to be fair, and I do not believe a single person can cite one instance where unfair advantage was taken. And so, with a feeling of satisfaction in that I have done my best, and, perhaps have been of some worth while help, I am closing this column. Best wishes to all from "The Man in the Moon."

Remember the old fashioned girl who used to blush when the wind blew her skirts above her shoe tops?

The fellow who worked sixteen hours a day for twenty years and made a little money has now come to the point where he can see the government beginning to tax that money away from him to give it to the fellow who wouldn't work and save his money when he had a chance.

THE PICNIC AND POLITICS

Some have drawn the conclusion that the county-wide picnic last week smacked too much of politics.

That is a serious charge, which, if in anywise justified, will certainly and surely destroy an institution that has been planned for a good purpose, has served a good purpose thus far, and ought to be kept clear of all political color.

We do not believe those who have planned and fostered the county-wide picnic have had any political motives in mind. Rather, we feel sure they have realized the danger of getting politics into it and have sought to avoid that danger.

From the beginning, when Cohen Stapp started the annual picnic, he made it clear that politics should not enter in and detract from or destroy the finer and higher purposes of the plan.

In his speech at the opening of the picnic last Thursday Mr. Stapp repeated, very wisely and timely, his warning against this danger.

Whatever of politics at or in the picnic program last week that may have impressed anyone must have come from the "New Deal" speeches of some of the visitors. And it must be admitted that some of them did bear somewhat the color of politics.

This fact is regretted. We will, of course, have politics in Chilton County. We always have had, and always will have. But we should not have it mixed up in occasions like the county picnic. Speakers who come here on such occasions should leave their political speeches at home. Our people prefer to hear them under different auspices.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

One of the questions most frequently asked nowadays, where the economic future of the country is concerned, is what is to become of our railroads and other utilities? The problem is one which will bear a great deal of study and it is now engaging the concern of economists both inside and out the federal government.

The railroads have had their share of trouble during the depression. They have had to buck the decline in business and increased competition from trucks. They were given a small increase in freight rates but this was of doubtful value at a time when the price level generally was falling. Since the bottom was reached and the slow climb commenced many railroads have succeeded in getting from the red into the black but they are by no means out of the woods. They have been compelled to extend an increase in wages, adding to the operating costs in the sum of $156,000,000 a year. They have been compelled by a law passed by Congress and signed by the president to put into effect a compulsory pension agreement which, it is said, will cost them $66,000,000 a year. Again, the increase in prices due to the NRA recovery program has added another $135,000,000 to operating costs.

It is not to be wondered therefore that the future of the railroads looks somewhat uncertain. The case of the utlities is little better. They have been confronted with rising costs and reductions in rates, and what is even more serious with the threat of increased government competition. Not long ago the newspapers carried dispatches to the effect that government competition, by publicly owned power plants, would be used to "force" nation-wide reductions in rates.

All of this sounds fine, but how about the holders of the securities of the railroads and other utilities? They are not all millionnaires. They can be found in nearly every walk of life all over the country. Many of them have their life savings invested in these securities. It would seem that the present tendency is to force the nation and its utilities as rapidly as possible toward government ownership. If additional cost burdens are piled on the railroads and other utilities the time may come when they can no longer carry the load. Then the cry will go up from our radical brethren to the effect that the time has now come to take over the railroads and utilities because private capital can no longer handle them. Indeed, it seems that a great many of our so-called experts are now looking forward to that moment, and greet each added burden to the railroads as hastening the day when government ownership will come about.

Little thought has been given yet as to who will pay the taxes when this day comes about. Our railroads and other utilities now pay a big share in the upkeep of our government, federal, state and local, through taxation. When the government takes them over somebody will have to make up the difference. It will be the small taxpayer, of course. He always gets it in the neck in the end.

And those of us who remember something about federal railway administration as it occurred during the war will not be anxious for a repetition of that experience.

ENGLAND GIVES U. S. A FEW TIPS

An interesting comparison with American methods of business recovery and government finances is provided by the budget speech of England's Chancellor of Exchequer Neville Chamberlain. His job campares with that of the United States Secretary of Treasury.

England is winding up its fiscal year with a surplus for the government over expenditures of 39 million pounds or slightly better than 200 million dollars. The American deficit this year will be around four or five billions of dollars.

While this country is talking about piling more taxes on its citizens * * * the British Chancellor announced a reduction in income tax rates of 2½ per cent to 22½ per cent.

England's income tax is still the highest in the world, so it is not time yet to emigrate, but the significant thing is that the rate is coming down instead of going up as threatened here.

That tax reduction pays and sometimes increases the government's revenues was proved in the case of Britain's levy on beer drinkers. The tax on beer last year was cut a penny but the revenue from that source increased this year 25 millions of dollars.

On the income tax reduction, Chamberlain made this pertinent comment:

"I have no hesitation in saying that the relief which would confer the most direct benefit to the country and have the greatest psychological effect and impart the most immediate stimulus to trade and employment would be a reduction in the standard rate of the income tax."

American legislators should take notice.—Leslie Gould in the New York Evening Journal.

In Iowa every person over twenty-one outside of poorhouses, destitute persons on payrolls, must pay a tax of $1 this year for 65-year old pensions. Next year everyone must pay $2. A pensioner receives $25 a month.

It is our humble opinion that very few fortunes are made on the golf links or around the board room of a broker's office.

Cohen Stapp sends word that the first bale of new cotton was on the Selma market on Tuesday. It was consigned to Dallas Compress Co., and sold for 33 cents a pound. Mr. Stapp says his company offers a premium of three cents a pound above the market for the first bale iinned in Chilton County.

The two Toms, Rockett and Taylor, are now owners of the Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company, with all of its branch stores in Clanton and several other towns in this section of the state. Mr. Dewey Rockett is manager of the business. This is one of the largest and most successful pusiness concerns in this section of Alabama. Its operations extend to and concern a vast number of people who are consumers of the products they handle.

There will be another dog day in Clanton right away. The Town Council are working on plans to offer inoculation for about 500 more dogs against rabies. Definite announcement as to date and other details will be made in ample time for everybody to be informed.

Somewhat unexpected was the transaction last week involving the sale of the business interests of Mr. Roland Taylor to Mr. Tom Rockett. Mr. Taylor began business here a few years ago with only a small amount of capital. The sale of his interests involved a figure which we imagine would look big for a single business transaction for Clanton. He has been a keen business executive, has worked hard, and has enjoyed a splendid measure of success. Yet able and active, it is not likely he expects to retire from business. His many friends hope that his future plans will not take him away from Clanton.

The death of Mrs. Glennie Lamar Phillips removes from Clanton one of the most charming and lovely women of our time. Hers was the soul of peacefulness, reflecting the ever living light of God's love according to the finest human exemplification of His divine plan. Many are the friends who count it one of the large blessings of life that they were privileged to know and to love this good woman.

The county-wide picnic last Thursday was attended by a crowd of people estimated at four thousand. The program was varied and interesting. Particularly impressive was the presentation of the work that has been accomplished by the Women's Clubs of the county. Some of the "New Deal" speeches sounded too much like politics to suit some of the folks. While, on the other hand, I guess there were as many who liked that part of the program.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stapp, now of Selma, were especially glad to see them at the picnic. Mr. Stapp's speech started off the program in his usual impressive and cheerful manner. Stapp is the founder of our annual picnic, and it is pleasing to note that those who come after him are seeking to keep the occasion perpetuated according to the hopes and purposes of the founder.

Clanton schools open on Monday, September 3. This applies to both the County High School and the Grammar School. The local board of trustees are making their plans for the opening and it is expected that everything will be in order by September 3. Dr. W. L. Prof. Abrams, principal of Clanton Grammar School, has been away this summer. He was here this week looking after some matters concerning the opening of school. He will be back a few days next week.

The school trustees express great concern about the condition of the old building at the grammar school. It is not fit to put children in, but it is necessary to use some of the rooms. The people of Clanton should do something about this condition. The trustees hope to find a solution for it this year, and the people will be asked to back up the plan when it is finally determined.

Well, the weather is pretty dry around here but it doesn't seem to have reduced the crop of wild oats.

FARMERS URGED TO SAVE FEED

Farmers of Alabama and the entire South are urged to save all the feed they can possibly harvest this summer and fall, especially hay crops, corn and various kinds of straw. It will be financially worthwhile for farmers to do this, say economists and crop men of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Farmers who are in the habit of buying hay for work stock when the spring cropping season comes around are likely to find a shortage in 1935, based on the present outlook," declare the economists.

MAKES MONEY GROWING AND MARKETING PECANS

Cahaba, Ala.—Clifton Kirkpatrick is making money each year growing pecans.

"There are five points to consider in the producing of pecans and the obtaining of a satisfactory yield," he said. "They are: pruning and thinning trees, fertilization, spraying by dusting, proper sanitation methods, and cultivation."

Mr. Kirkpatrick has made an average yield of 310 pounds per acre for the past three years on a fifty-acre orchard of 27-year-old trees.

COTTON LEAF WORM OUTBREAK

Auburn, Ala.—Advance information that cotton leaf worms, which are well known to cotton growers, are on their way to Alabama has been received by Prof. J. M. Robinson, head of the department of entomology and zoology of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, who thinks that cotton in South Alabama is now sufficiently developed to avoid damage by cotton leaf worm attacks.

"Unfortunately," he said, "the earliest outbreaks in former years have occurred in the north portion of the state where cotton is much later. If they should appear by early August substantial damage may be done unless poison is applied as directed by the county agents.

APPLICATION MUST BE MADE BY AUGUST 20th

Auburn, Ala., August 7.—The Alabama Allotment Board has set August 20 as the deadline for receiving applications for individual allotments and tax exemption certificates under the Bankhead bill.

The Board—composed of four successful farmers, J. L. Edwards, Selma, chairman, John V. Matthews, Huntsville, L. S. Fluker, Livingston, W. H. Robertson, Loachapoka—held its initial meeting Wednesday and made plans for pushing forward the work as fast as possible.

After the meeting Chairman Edwards said that the Board is attempting to work out temporary arrangements so that cotton may be ginned in south Alabama before actual certificates can be issued. He also stated that certificates will be issued before cotton picking begins in most of the state.

"It is very important that all farmers make application for individual allotments and tax exemption certificates before August 20," Mr. Edwards said. Unless applications are received by that time it will be too late for the farmer filing the application to receive individual allotments and tax exemption certificates.

Every detail that will help speed up the work is being attended to by the state allotment board and officials of the state extension service, including county agents and cotton committeemen in every county.

CRIMSON CLOVER GOOD CROP

Auburn, Ala.—Crimson clover is an excellent winter legume and has created considerable interest among the farmers of the Sand Mountain region and in the Limestone Valleys, advises J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, who says that at present crimson clover appears to be the best solution to the winter legume seed problem, especially in North Alabama.

"It is more difficult for beginners to succeed with crimson clover than with hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas," he writes. "Consequently, a farmer should not attempt to grow this winter legume unless he is willing to begin on a limited scale and to increase his acreage only after he gains experience—moreover, he must not be discouraged by occasional failures."

ALABAMA PARK FILMS MADE BY GOVERNMENT

Montgomery, Ala. — "Saving the Beauty of Alabama," a motion picture of developments under way in Alabama's park system, is complete and ready for distribution, Conrad L. Wirth, assistant director of the national park service has announced.

"This particular film," adds Mr. Wirth, "is one of the first of a national collection to be completed; and it is well done, presenting thoroughly and with much human interest the Alabama State Park story. It shows the boys at work and gives a good picture of park camp life."

Distribution of these films, five of which are now finished, will be among Emergency Conservation Work camps assigned to the development of state parks and to any commercial theaters considering them of sufficient interest to their audiences. Because Alabama has awakened to the growing public demand for the preservation of natural scenic beauty and the facilities for its enjoyment and has taken unusual interest in the plans to develop a nation wide system of state parks, Washington and Alabama Park officials expect a number of theaters to contact the state park division of the national park service in Washington at once.

Six parks are being developed by the Emergency Conservation work in Alabama: Geneva, in Geneva County, near Hacoda; Cheha, in Cleburne County, near Oxford; Little River in Monroe and Escambia Counties, near Uriah; Weogufka, in Coosa County, near Weogufka; DeSoto, in DeKalb County, near Ft. Payne and Gulf State park in Baldwin County, near Foley. In addition to these the Lagoons State Park in Montgomery County is being developed by the Alabama Transient Bureau.

This state park movement, now under way with 268 camps assigned to state park work in 40 states, is carried on under the supervision of the state park division of the National Park Service with emergency conservation work funds and in cooperation with the state.

Because it is directed at personal happiness, it has become probably the most popular trend of recovery. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is particularly impressed. Wrote he to president Roosevelt about state parks: "I doubt if any other branch of the work can be of greater benefit or of benefits of more lasting value to the whole American people."

The moving pictures are the living record of the movement. After serving their immediate purpose they will be stored away for posterity, a highly educational collection, always the property of the people.

Visit PICTURESQUE MOBILE

• the city that has been under five flags

This summer, visit Mobile—Alabama's beautiful and historic city on the Gulf Coast . . . Having flown the flags of five nations, this picturesque city is rich in early Alabama history . . . At Dauphin Island in Mobile Bay, the Spanish landed in 1519, followed by the French in 1699. Mobile has seen a procession of explorers, pious missionaries, soldiers of France, Spain and England. In the War Between the States, Mobile was one of the chief ports of the Confederacy. Old forts Gaines and Morgan, so active in the Civil War, still stand guard on Mobile Bay. There are many quaint and beautiful old buildings surviving from the French regime . . . Modern Mobile is a beautiful city in its own right. Its parks, and its Azalea Trail, winding through the city, are famous. In addition, Mobile offers the motorist excellent surf bathing, splendid deep-sea fishing and sailing.

Motor through Alabama this summer. Standard Oil service-stations and dealers in Standard Oil products offer the motorist every convenience all along the way. New and interesting road maps (in color) free of charge.

Herbert Lowery Writes On Issue

Editor Union-Banner:

Have just finished reading Mr. Jasper Robinson's letter which appeared in the August 2nd issue of your paper, and would appreciate space to comment upon some of the things revealed therein.

Mr. Robinson's letter was self-explanatory. Anyone can see the motive behind the letter written to him (Mr. Robinson) by the committee composed of Abbott, Johnson, Moates and Benson. But to save me, I can't see how anyone could have the "gall" to ask a Republican to revolt and repudiate his own party for no other reason save that certain candidates were defeated in the primary.

Mr. Robinson stated in his letter that upon asking Mr. J. J. Johnson what it was all about he was told by Mr. Johnson to "let's go to the judge's office," and according to Mr. Robinson's letter, he had been asked to sign "The League of Better Government," and was then told by Mr. Johnson, who it seems, went right to the point by flatly stating, "We are not going to support all the nominees."

Well, Mr. Johnson, we voters would like to know just whom you and the so called L. of B. G. are going to support. Why don't you rename your secret society "The Secret Seven," instead of L. of B. G.? It would be a more appropriate name, don't you think so?

I noticed that Mr. Johnson said to Mr. Robinson, "Let's go into the judge's office," and I just wonder why? Surely, surely, Mr. Reynolds, whom the Republican party and the voters of this county has honored by electing him to a total of 24 years as judge of probate, could not turn his back on them. We, the Republican voters of this county, are expecting Mr. Reynolds to do as he has always done heretofore, and urged all other Republicans to do, and that is to call on all the boys to get behind the ticket and put it over. To do otherwise would not only be traitorous but downright ungrateful.

Mr. Reynolds, we have every right to believe, was defeated fairly and squarely by as honest and as capable a man as Chilton County has. I refer to Mr. J. Z. Mims and by all means he and the other defeated candidates should "practice what they preach" by forgetting party prejudice and indifferences and rally behind the banner, helping us put the entire ticket over this fall. Some great writer has said: "It is better to be a good loser than to win."

Where can we get better men to fill our various offices than men like J. Z. Mims, Akins Collins, W. G. Culp, Dewey Hughes, W. T. Bean, Percy M. Pitts and others, who are our nominees? Think it over and as Mr. Robinson said in his letter, let's all get behind the ticket and put it over this fall just as we have done heretofore, in spite of a few, who seemingly, would "rule or ruin."

I have written this letter as a private citizen and a voter, of my own free will and accord, without any solicitation from anyone whatsoever, and my only motive in writing same is that I like to see right rule supremely.

I hold no malice nor ill feelings toward anyone. I simply want to do my part to elect the entire Republican ticket this fall.—Yours for justice and right, H. W. Lowery.

CANE CREEK

We had a revival at Cane Creek last week. One like we haven't had in a long time before was had. Bro. Wm. E. Robinson, our pastor, did the preaching. He really got things moving around Cane Creek. He did some excellent preaching. He is such a good consecrated man. People came from far and near to hear him. We were sorry we didn't have room in the building to hold the people. Our house was about one-half the size it should have been. We got 28 members, 23 to be baptized. Baptismal services will be held Sunday morning at the spring near the church building.

Next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days. Let's everyone come out. I am sure we all feel like going as we were blessed so in our meetings. We want to thank the people for their good behavior during our meeting. Everyone was so interested and were as quiet on the outside as on the inside. We are fortunate to have a pastor like Bro. Robinson. Everyone likes him. He organized a booster band for the children. They are really interested. They are proud to have something to do.

Delene Willis entertained the Boosters Sunday afternoon. Games were enjoyed then watermelon was served to a large number. We had several new members in Sunday school Sunday. We had 58 present; also our B. Y. P. U. is still growing.

We are looking forward to go to Pates Chapel next Sunday to B. Y. P. U. Convention.

We greatly missed Mr. Rennie Robinson and family from Sunday school on account of little Lamar Robinson was sick. We hope him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. W. J. Lambert is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Lee Yates, of Cooper, this week to take in their meeting.

THEY FOUND IT DIDN'T PAY TO TRY TO DO WITHOUT IT

By T. E. Harris, DISTRICT MANAGER

SOUTHERN BELL Telephone and Telegraph Co.

It is surprising how many people, when ordering telephones, say they found it just didn't pay to try to get along without telephone service in the home. It is embarrassing they say, to be continually borrowing a neighbor's telephone and yet when you haven't a telephone of your own it seems as though day after day things are continually happening which make it necessary to use some kind neighbor's telephone.

There are times, too, when you would like to be able to call and talk to some friend in privacy and without interruption, or the feeling that you are holding someone else's line too long, and the only way you can do that is to have a telephone of your own.

Not having a telephone isolates you, and as a result of your friends not being able to conveniently reach you by telephone, you are very likely missing many pleasant social gatherings that you would otherwise be asked to attend.

In fact, the telephone fits so closely into every activity of life and is relied on to such an extent in the carrying on of all social and business affairs that trying to get along without telephone service seriously handicaps all of your and your family's activities. It narrows the opportunities of all for a fuller enjoyment of life. In addition, the home without a phone is lacking in protection in case of emergencies.

It has been truthfully said of the telephone that nothing else gives so much in added pleasure and protection at such small cost.

"Can we play at keeping store in here, mamma?"

"Yes, but you must be very, very quiet."

"Oh, all right, mamma. We'll pretend we don't advertise."

REPUBLICAN VOTER URGES ALL TO SUPPORT THE TICKET

Please allow me space in your paper, Mr. Editor, to urge the Republican voters of Chilton County to stand by the entire Republican ticket in November and let's elect every nominee that the Republicans chose in the two primaries just past. We have as good men as the county affords for the various offices. Some of the defeated candidates seem to be a little out of sorts. From his actions it seems that it is hard for Judge Reynolds to step down and take a back seat, but folks, we have supported him for over twenty years and have stood by him as boldly as true voters could, and now it looks as though he is going to turn us down and not support the full ticket. After the Republican party has made him what he is, surely he will not desert us now and in the pinch of the game allow his strength and influence to go to some of the Democratic nominees. I am 32 years old and have always supported Judge Reynolds, except six years ago I voted for Tom Littlejohn in the primary. But now Mims is my choice.

Voters, think seriously over this League for Better Government scheme. I am glad that the people are not as badly dissatisfied as Judge Reynolds and his four disciples are. The Republican party was all O. K. until after June 12th when defeat came to the judge; now is this his way of expressing thanks for the life-long support we have given him? At least two Reynolds suporters, or I presume they were Reynolds supporters, were nominated and will appear on the Republican ticket, and it looks as though all Republicans should be satisfied. Sincerely.—R. J. Coggins, Clanton R. 3.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

PEACHES are the outstanding fruit in this week's market, and they must be enjoyed now if at all for there will be practically no late peaches. The price is low and the quality excellent. Home-canned peaches, peach preserves or pickled peaches will all be appreciated next winter.

Other especially seasonable and low-priced foods in market are tomatoes, sweet corn, cucumbers, carrots, beets and Boston type lettuce. Iceberg lettuce is exceptionally high. Bartlett pears, seedless grapes, fresh prunes, plums, oranges, cantaloupes, watermelons and new apples are all moderate in price and plentiful.

Dairy products are feeling the effects of the heat and drought in decreased production and increased cost. Butter, cheese and eggs are all affected.

The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus:

Low Cost Dinner

Luncheon Meats Vegetable Salad
Watermelon Pickles
Hot Biscuits Butter
Sliced Peaches
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Jellied Chicken Vegetable Salad
Sliced Tomatoes
Rolls and Butter
Peach Cobbler
Coffee (hot or iced) Milk

Very Special Dinner

Melon Cup
Broiled Steak Mashed Potatoes
Stewed Okra
Tomato and Celery Salad
Rolls and Butter
Peach Spanish Cream

PLYMOUTH PASSES ENTIRE 1933 OUTPUT ON JULY 26

Detroit, July 29.—More Plymouth automobiles have been produced already this year than during the entire year of 1933.

This was the announcement yesterday of B. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the board of the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

During the 12 months of 1933, biggest in Plymouth's history, and more than 100 per cent greater than the production of 1932, a total of 261,088 units were built at the Plymouth factories.

With the introductions of 1934 models, Hutchinson said, it was necessary to speed production to the greatest capacity of the factories to meet demands. The result was that in less than seven months the 1933 record was exceeded.

Increased buying in the low price field was also indicated in registrations for the first five months of this year, made public yesterday. The three leading low priced cars registered 72.6 per cent of all cars.

Last year during the same period, these cars registered 67.5 per cent of all cars.

Plymouth showed a substantial increase in percentage of total business, Hutchinson pointed out. Whereas during the first five months of 1933 Plymouth registered 13.8 per cent of all cars purchased, this year the figure has grown to 16.2 per cent, an increase of 2.4 per cent over last year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Renfro Mullins and daughter, Jean, accompanied by Mr. Edwin Mullins and Mrs. Frank Scott, of Huntsville, left last Saturday for a few days visit to the World's Fair in Chicago.

FAIR PLANS BIG FARM PROGRAM

Barn Dance, Rural Events Featured at Chicago Aug. 11 to 18.

Chicago.—Four million persons have entered the gates of the new World's Fair since it opened here May 26. Most of the throngs that have thrilled to the new spectacle, the new "foreign villages," which offer in themselves a "tour of the world," the new shows and the new free entertainment projects, are city dwellers. Chicagoans, visitors from other cities all over the United States and visitors from foreign countries have poured in, in large numbers.

But the real farmer-visitors' invasion of A Century of Progress has not yet begun. It will reach its peak when the Fair celebrates Farm Week, from August 11 to August 18, inclusive.

Last year Farm Week accounted for the largest single week's attendance of the entire Fair. Plans to make the celebration interesting and important to farmers are even more elaborate now than last year, according to the events division of the exposition.

WLS Barn Dance at Fair.

Saturday, August 11, will lead off the program with a massive farm parade, including bands, farm implements, machinery and equipment and farm animals. Depicting the modernization of agriculture, it will be one of the longest and most comprehensive pageants of the entire exposition.

Sunday, August 12, will see special music and farm programs interlinked with the observance of Chicago Incorporation day, with Chicago acting as host to the out-of-town multitudes.

Rexford Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, has been invited to be the principal speaker of the Farm Organization day program Monday. Tuesday will be Farm Radio day, with the entire WLS "Barn Dance" presenting a program in the Court of States; 40,000 persons saw this event in 1933.

Prof. A. O. Boswell closed out a very successful singing school up at Jackson Chopel last Friday afternoon. Several visitors attended the closing exercises, consisting of class singing and a few talks by the patrons.

WILLIAM S. VARE PASSES AWAY AT ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J. Aug. 7.—William S. Vare, Republican national committeeman and for years the colorful leader of the Republican organization in Philadelphia, died suddenly at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, at his summer home here. He was 66 years old last December.

In ill health for the last six years, the former congressman suffered a relapse about a week ago from the heat. This was revealed Monday night by his son-in-law, Dr. John J. Shaw, who said earlier Tuesday he had shown improvement.

Vare suffered a heart attack and passed away in twenty minutes.

Vare, who was elected to the United State senate in 1926 and was refused a seat after a three-year fight on charges of excessive campaign expenditures, was stricken with a paralytic stroke in August, 1928. For many days his conditoin was critical, but he rallied to continue his fight for the seat in the senate.

J. MELL MARTIN IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Thanks Expressed To Many Who Pledged Their Support

The name J. Mell Martin will not appear on the ticket in the coming city election as a candidate for mayor of Clanton. Mr. Martin made it definitely know this week that he has decided not to become a candidate because his business will not permit him to devote as much time to the management of the city's affairs as he believes would be necessary to a successful administration should he be elected.

In a statement to a representative of the Banner, Mr. Martin expressed his sincere appreciation to the scores of persons who have urged his candidacy and to them he pledged his every effort for the upbuilding of Clanton, declaring that he stands ready and willing to lend his services in whatever manner may be considered valuable for the best interest of the town and its citizenship.

"I feel deeply grateful to those who have been kind enough to express this confidence in me and my ability to serve our city, and regret exceedingly that my business affairs will not permit me to offer my candidacy. I have always had the keenest interest in the success of every program which I believed tended toward the upbuilding of our city. Had I sought pay for the work I have done on various occasions in what I considered the behalf of my fellow citizens of Clanton, I could not ask greater recompense than I have received in this expression of confidence from my friends."

Since removing to Clanton fourteen years, ago, Mr. Martin has always been a leader in every program for the promotion of improved conditions in the town. As a leading member of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, his influence has been widespread and his efforts have been untiring.

During recent weeks, Mr. Martin stated that approximately 150 persons have seen him, or called him on the phone, and urged him to enter the race for mayor.

Mr. Jones will keep that part of the land lying next to his home, but intends to cut up the part on which the church building now stands and back toward the creek to be used as cemetery lots. Mr. Jones says that there will be about thirty-five choice cemetery lots, size 20 feet by 20 feet, to be disposed of to any who want to buy them.

GRAY PRELIMINARY TRIAL HELD ON TUESDAY MORNING

The preliminary trial of Joe Gray, charged with killing Harvey F. Chandler on August 4th, was held at the courthouse Tuesday morning in the justice court of J. L. Wilson. ISABELLA BOY MAKES GOOD PROGRESS IN SCHOOL WORK

Very often a young fellow from Chilton County attains credit in his school and college work and conducts himself in other ways that makes us folks here at home feel proud of our products. This and more is the case with Oliver O. Manning, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Manning, of Isabella community.

The young man in question finished high school at Isabella in 1930, when he was 19 years old. Four years later, in May this year, he took his degree from Auburn. After spending a month or so at home he went up in North Carolina and stepped directly into a teaching position at the Prospect school, a vocational institution out from Monroe. The schools up there start earlier than ours, and he has already launched out on the year's work as vocational teacher. His present address is Route 4, Monroe, N. C.

We are glad to note the spectacular progress of this young Chilton County man, and predict for him a great success in his chosen profession for which he has fitted himself by his eight years of schooling.

NEW WHOLESALE GROCERY FIRM

Will Occupy Two Wade Buildings Next To The Railroad

The two Wade business buildings next to the railroad tracks on Second Avenue are being remodeled and repaired for the purpose of accommodating a new wholesale grocery concern which will open for business about the first of September.

Plans are being executed by a crew of workmen on the job this week, which will furnish warehouse room, storage and office space for the new concern.

While full details of the new organization are not given out at this time, we are privileged to state that the name of the new concern will be the Clanton Wholesale Grocery Company. It will be backed strictly by local capital, and will be operated by a Clanton man who has had twenty-one years successful experience in the wholesale grocery business.

Another important phase of this new business, it is pointed out, is the fact that it will be strictly and exclusively a wholesale business, catering in its sales and services, strictly to local merchants and supplying their needs with many of the most popular and widely known standard lines of merchandise.

Clanton's retail merchants will no doubt welcome this wholesale concern in our midst.

Candidate for Mayor of Clanton

C. FENN JONES

Makes Statement To Voters Of Clanton In Behalf Of His Candidacy; Promises Best Of Ability For City

Following is a statement from Hon. C. Fenn Jones, prominent retired business man of Clanton, in behalf of his candidacy for Mayor of Clanton in the election to be held next month:

To the Voters of Clanton:

A few days ago a friend of mine handed to me a written request that I become a candidate for Mayor of Clanton which is signed by 65 of the good people and property owners of our town promising me their support, and in addition to those who signed this request, I have been encouraged to do so by many whom I met on the street from time to time. I have never wanted public office or to be very active in politics, being content to attend to my own private business, but have always supported men I believed to be best fitted for public duty and endorsed laws and policies I believed to be best for the general good of the State, County and City.

I would not ask for the Mayor's office now were it not I believe the majority of the people will be pleased for me to have it. I have truly not sought the office and did not agree to enter the race until I became convinced the people were willing for me to have the honor. Just how correctly I have judged you on this subject will be determined on election day in September.

I reflect with a bit of pride over the position I took on matters of public interest covering a period of over thirty

To The Republican Voters of Chilton County

We wish to call to your attention the fact that we are fast approaching the general election when the voters of the county will choose their public officials for the next four or six years. Organization of the campaign committee in the interest of the Republican nominees has been perfected with full and able representation in every Beat in the county.

It is the purpose of the campaign committee here to bring to the attention of every citizen the importance of choosing wisely the men who will be your public servants in the future.

We earnestly solicit the support of every voter for the Republican nominees. We do this in the sincere belief that the election of the Republican ticket will be to the best interests of our county in the future.

The Republican voters have nominated the men whom they wanted to be their candidates—men whom the majority of the Republicans thought most capable and best fitted to serve. We now most sincerely appeal to every Republican to stand by the nominees and help elect them in November. Especially do we hope that all the candidates who were defeated in the primary will remain as true to their party in defeat as they would have been in victory.

The Republican party has served our county well in the past. In its principles and policies we believe our people will continue to find the best government and the best service for our public welfare. We can make our party as successful and as serviceable in the future as it has been in the past, if the Republicans will continue to give their whole-hearted and unselfish support to the duly nominated and elected candidates of the Republican party.

We especially urge the members of the campaign committee in all Beats to be on the alert every day from now until the election in November. The opposition seems to be very hopeful of our defeat. They cannot win except by Republican voters voting the Democratic ticket. Let us be not deceived into the camp of the enemy. The only place for a Republican is in his own party, and we do not believe very many of our people will think of being led astray.

Republican Campaign Committee,
M. D. FOSHEE, Chairman.
W. M. WYATT, Secretary.

(Paid political adv., by Republican Campaign Committee.)

Twelve clubs have been invited to participate in the series which will continue for eleven days and will feature a dozen games, which Mr. Marcus declares will be the most interesting and sensational baseball contests ever staged in this section.

The tournament is being sponsored by the Clanton club and will feature the following teams: Plantersville, Randolph, Maplesville, Isabella, Jemison, Marbury, Titus, Clanton, Cane Creek, Cooper, Coca-Cola (Montgomery), and Independence.

During the semi-finals the following schedule has been arranged: Monday, Plantersville vs. Randolph; Tuesday, Maplesville vs. Jemison; Wednesday, Isabella vs. Marbury; Thursday, Clanton vs. Titus; Friday, Cane Creek vs. Cooper; and Saturday, Coca Colas vs. Independence.

With one team eliminated each day, the six winners will be matched in a three days series and the remaining victors will vie for first place in another two days series.

Fifty dollars will be awarded the winning team in the entire tournament, it was announced. Each participating club will share in the gate receipts at the rate of forty per cent in the games in which they engage, after expenses and a five dollar entrance fee has been deducted, Manager Marcus explained.

Every game will be played strictly according to professional rules, he stated. Four umpires will be engaged and the rules of the tournament will not permit any players to switch from one team to another during the series.

Two all-star teams will be selected from the twelve clubs for a play-off game. The winner of this contest will be entered in a state-wide tournament to be held in Birmingham later in the season.

PLANS TO KEEP DOWN MOSQUITO

Outline of Campaign Which Is Being Pushed In the County

It will be of interest to the public to know that Clanton and Chilton County officials, cooperating with the State Health Department and the Alabama Relief Administration, have arranged to inaugurate a mosquito control program. Mr. L. M. Matthews is director of the campaign for Chilton County. Under him are six men, three of them to work in the Clanton territory, and one each at Thorsby, Jemison, and Maplesville.

The work will be directed principally toward control of the mosquito which transmits dengue (breakbone) fever. Cases of this disease have recently appeared in a neighboring state. Health officials consider an intensive mosquito control program essential to preventing possibility of spread of the disease in Alabama.

Mr. Matthews, director of the work here, makes the following statement addressed to the citizens of the towns and communities in which this important work is being done:

"There are many kinds of mosquitoes. One type caries malaria and another dengue and yellow fever. Others do not carry any disease, but exist as pests on account of their biting habits. The mosquito which carried dengue fever breeds in and about houses. They annoy people a great deal and in order to get rid of them, it is necessary to have regular close inspection of all premises in town.

"Every householder must do his or her part in preventing mosquito production. Mosquitoes lay their eggs on the surface of standing water. The eggs hatch into wiggle-tails which become mosquitoes in about one week. The dengue fever mosquito will breed in most anything about the house that will hold water.

"Let every householder join in this fight on mosquitoes.

"Let's do this:

"Have nothing in or out of the house holding water exposed to mosquitoes which is not screened or emptied once a week.

"If you must catch water for laundry purposes, screen the receptacle or put a film of kerosene (coal oil) on this water once a week, say every Saturday. This will keep the mosquitoes from laying eggs here, or will destroy them, if already laid.

"Every Saturday go over all parts of the yard, house, and out buildings and get rid of any and all standing water. Look into and unstop roof gutters and down spouts after rains.

"Don't let spigots in the yard and garden run unnoticed. Check the cut off cocks and meter boxes.

"Mosquito control workers will be kept busy in all parts of town. Please offer every assistance to them. Report any complaint of mosquitoes to your control worker at once. There will be some mosquitoes left if each householder does not cooperate fully in this program.

"Let's truthfully advertise this town as the place without mosquitoes where dengue fever can not gain a foothold."

Important Notice To Cotton Growers

Must Get Exemption Certificates Before Next Monday

County Agent, J. W. Fant, gives out the following statement which is of very much importance to growers of cotton in Chilton County:

"Most of the farmers in this county have made application for tax-exemption certificates and farm allotments pursuant to the Bankhead Cotton Act approved April 21, 1934.

"However, there are a few farmers in the county who are growing cotton this year and who have not yet signed applications.

"It is very important that every farmer who grows cotton have some tax-exemption certificates. People who come in the following classifications should make application: (1) owner (2) cash tenant (3) standing rent tenant (4) share tenant or cropper operating an entire farm.

"No applications will be accepted after Monday night, August 20. Those who do not make application before this date will have to pay tax on all cotton sold this year.

Alabama's Historic State Capitol at Montgomery

Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn

The southern portion of Alabama is unusually rich in spots of interest and tradition. Through this section the Spaniards, DeSoto and DeLuna, left their mark. It was the scene of many bloody conflicts with the Indians, and one does not go far before running across the trail of that interesting character and rugged soldier, Andrew Jackson . . . It is said that all Alabama roads lead to Montgomery. This beautiful old Southern city is known as "The Cradle of the Confederacy." Under the portals of its stately capitol, Jefferson Davis took his oath of office. It boasts many lovely old homes dating from early days. Everywhere throughout this section, the visitor is well repaid with beautiful scenery, and interesting reminders of the state's turbulent history.

Ginners of County Called To Meet 27

Cotton ginners of every county of Alabama have been called to meet in a series of county conferences beginning Monday, August 20, at the request of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. At these meetings a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue will be present and explain provisions of the Bankhead Cotton Control Act as it affects the ginners. In addition to ginners, bankers and business men, farmers and other interested parties are invited to attend.

Many ginners, it is reported, are lacking in information as to the provisions of the Bankhead Act, while others have been misinformed on the subject. The law is really far more simple in operation and easier to comply with than many ginners have been led to believe. Deputy Collectors who will attend the county meetings are thoroughly trained men who recently attended a school of instruction at Birmingham, at which all points of the law were explained by an instructor from the Bureau in Washington. They will be prepared to give a detailed explanation of the workings of the law as it affects the ginner, and to answer any questions.

All ginners are urged to be on hand for these meetings in their respective counties. Under the law, the ginner is responsible to the government for the tax due on cotton ginned by him, and he must file a monthly report with the Collector of Internal Revenue at Birmingham. Ginners should become thoroughly familiar with what is required of them before the ginning season opens in full swing.

For the purpose of enforcing the Bankhead act, the State of Alabama has been divided into ten zones, with a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue stationed in each zone. Each of these deputies will handle the county meetings in the various counties located within his zone. The conferences will therefore be in the nature of get-together meetings of the ginners and the federal tax agent for their county and district. J. W. Pharr chief of the field division of the internal revenue service of Alabama, with headquarters at Birmingham, will have general supervision of the conferences and it is hoped that he will be able to attend many of them.

The conference of ginners of Chilton County has been called for Monday, August 27, at the Courthouse in Clanton at 10 o'clock.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Moses and the Burning Bush.—Moses kept the flock of his father-in-law. One day he led the flock to the mountain of Horeb. "And the Angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed. And Moses said, I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt. God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, Draw not nigh hither; put off thy shoes from thy feet; for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."—Ex. 3: 2-5. God commanded Moses to return to Egypt that he might lead the children of Israel out of bondage. This is one of a series of pictures engraved in 1625 by Matthew Merian.

INFORMATION ABOUT POOL COTTON IS GIVEN OUT

Cotton consigned to the cotton producers' pool, which, since July 31 may be sold at the discretion of the pool manager, subject to approval of the secretary of agriculture, will not be dumped on the market, sacrificed or marketed in any manner calculated to unduly disturb the spot market or general economic condition, the agricultural adustment administration announced.

Under provisions of the pool agreement the approximately 1,950,000 bales held by the pool could not be sold before July 31 at less than 15 cents a pound basis middling 7-8 inch. As the price of cotton has not reached this figure since the pool was formed, none of the actual cotton has been sold.

The following telegram concerning pool cotton has been received by County Agent Fant from Oscar Johnson, manager of the cotton producers' pool in Washington:

"Cotton pool now developing plan whereby holders of participation trust certificates will be able to tender them to pool manager who would purchase certificates and pay them market value. Suggest you advise holders of certificates not to sacrifice them as they are worth current market price of cotton, less ten cents per pound and small carrying charge. You will be advised immediately of details of plans of tendering certificates and receiving disbursements."

Mr. Fant states that people in Chilton County who are holding cotton option certificates will be immediately notified from his office as soon as the above plan is perfected.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

In all of the complications and threats of war in the recent Austrian outbreak one familiar name was missing. It remained for a diplomat of Yugoslavia to rescue that name from contemporary oblivion. The statement given out by the Yugoslavian legation in Berlin said in part:

"The Yugoslav government is of the opinion that, in case of special complications, the League of Nations is the only competent authority to decide on the Austrian question as an international problem. Every other one-sided measure or intervention would be a violation of peace treaties and could produce further consequences."

But there has been no disposition on the part of the great powers interested in the Austrian situation to refer the problem to the League for settlement. The failure to do so can only mean one thing, and that is that the big nations of Europe have lost confidence in the League as an instrument for assuring the peace of the dark and bloody continent. We have had threatened intervention in Austria by most of the great powers, each seeking to enforce what it claims to be for "the good" of Austria. But the League of Nations has been unhonored and unsung. The suggestion made by the Yugoslav delegation is the first to the effect that the matter might properly be referred to the League for adjudication. This would of course be true if the League possessed the confidence of the world and especially of the great powers interested in Austria. Since this is not the true state of affairs we have scarcely heard the League or the League Court mentioned since the present crisis broke suddenly on Europe. Quite a comedown for that great international organization which was to abolish war, enforce the triumph of justice everywhere and make the world safe for democracy.

The fact is, of course, that the League has failed in every great crisis which has beset the world, since the organization was set up at Geneva. It has been steadily losing prestige. The Manchurian fiasco, in which Japan openly defied the League, almost brought about its collapse. It is more than probable that the Austrian difficulties will demolish whatever prestige as an instrument of peace that it has left.

While the League continues to collect world statistics and give them publicity at stated intervals, and to perform other functions of a more or less important kind, it has now become evident that as an instrument of enforcing peace it is a failure. The trouble is, of course, that the great powers which form the potent influence in the organization only want peace if they can get it on their own terms. They realize that they can best get this by relying on direct negotations or military operations, and not on endless debating in the League of Nations.

There would seem less reason than ever, therefore, why Uncle Sam should embrace membership in the League or in its Court, but more reasons why he should remain aloof from these two international political organizations. The future of Europe does not look any too rosy. Uncle Sam, with his drouth, his mounting deficit, and his prospect for higher taxes has enough at home to occupy his attention for the next several years. Let Europe solve its own problems. And if, by any unexpected chance, the League can help more power to it. From afar, we give it our best wishes. Bue we wish to remain afar.

NO PROFIT IN SCARCITY

The editor of this paper always wants to get up and snort when he reads statements in the papers that, while the yields of crops are lower, the price is better, so farmers will obtain as much money for a small crop as would have been obtained for a big one. Papers are now putting out the joyous reading matter that the 1934 wheat crop will bring in as much money as the big crop of 1932. What of it? Can you feed money to the milk cows and work horses? What's a few extra dollars, if it all has to be sent away for feed? Any farmer is better off with a granary full of wheat at 30 cents; plenty of corn at 20 cents and great stacks of alfalfa at $2.00 a ton than with wheat at a dollar a bushel, corn at 60 cents and alfalfa at $10 a ton, when he hasn't raised enough wheat on the place for seed, corn killed by bugs and hot winds and alfalfa dying on the ground. Of course, what everybody would like to see is big yields at high prices. But if you can't get both good yields and high prices, it's better to get big yields at low prices than no yields at all at high prices. So we snort when we read that the small crops of this year are better than the big crops two years ago, because they will bring in more money. We'll take the big yields every time.—Clay Center Times.

REDS BUSY PLOTTING IN U. S.

Communists have taken advantage wherever possible of labor disturbances in the United States to sow the seeds of revolution, according to the current issue of the National Republic which says in part:

"Announcing to the NRA in Washington that 'we will write our code in the picket lines,' the reds set forth to make their threats good. General strikes have followed and a nation-wide strike is in the making. They consider the local strikes as drills for the 'big event,' the proletarian revolution climaxing with a 'Soviet America' which they now boldly proclaim as their immediate goal. The trade Union Unity League, with its hundreds of special unions for each trade and each race, and with its thousands of locals spider-webbing the nation today, is Moscow's special agency for this angle of the red drive for a nation-wide revolt and the overthrow of the United States government. The T. U. U. L., a direct branch of the Red International of Labor Unions in Moscow, the International Labor Defense, a branch of the Red International Aid of Moscow and the Workers International Relief, and numerous other communist agencies, including the Communist Party of the United States, supplies the money, legal defense, strikers aid, propaganda and paid agitators and organizers for the red revolt in the United States. These groups are playing havoc with the nation's effort to revive business and reemployment. There is hardly an industry that it not touched by the hand of Moscow in Moscow's drive to 'prevent capitalist stabilization' in America. Such action is not only witnessed in the United States, but in Germany, Poland, Rumania, Japan, Cuba, Mexico, France, England and China. It is part of Moscow's scheme to hold the rest of the world back until she advances and to wreck the capitalist system while communism comes to the forefront, to throw men out of work in capitalist nations, to put more men to work in Russia and at the same time to blame it all on capitalism to win workers to communism.

"This long arm of Russia is felt from Los Angeles to New York and from the borders of Canada to Mexico. The United States government has taken little recognition of the real source of the nation's labor strife until recently. The affair in Minneapolis seemed to have caused some little awakening when the governor of that state was forced to make order out of chaos by enforcing martial law through an army of national guardsmen. The Toledo affair that followed the socialist mayor's playing with radicals, forced the governor to send troops, followed by twenty U. S. Department of Justice agents, who arrested a number of agitators who had swarmed by truckloads from the other communist centers to the scene of action and the battle royal that followed took deaths in its wake.

"Not only have the communists worked diligently among the factory workers boring themselves into prominent positions in 'rank and file' committees of non-communist unions but also among farmers and dock workers, government relief organizations and practically every trade. An attempt is now being made to penetrate the army, communication, transportation and public utilities ranks. These are the most vital points they wish to penetrate, for through these they can cripple and strangle the entire nation in hope of forcing it into submission of communist leadership. They propagandize the workers into believing that poverty reigns under a capitalist system. In this they hide the meager wage and food card system of pay for seven days a week in Russia where the government controls labor as well as industry, lands and production.

The communists work with planned programs. They have a map for each action and this is caried out to as far as a 'Manual of Arms for the Proletarian Revolution in the America.' Strikes are carefully prepared in United States' looking forward to a 'Soviet advance and carried out. A terror campaign accompanies it, and a defense, agitation and organization program follows. They pride themselves as having 'grown out of struggles' and having greatly increased forces through them. 'Class against class' is their motto. They paint all other organizations as 'partners in industry' and as 'traitors to the workers.'

THE ARGUMENT CONTINUES

For some time we have been told by a great many statesmen that Big Business was not unfriendly to the NRA, that is was the little fellow who was being hurt and who was putting up the protest against the rules and regulations of the Blue Eagle. But if we are to believe that the United States Chamber of Commerce represents what is usually termed "Big Business," then we have some indication that the more important scions of trade are not so satisfied either.

At any rate there recently appeared in Nation's Business, official magazine of the U. S. C. of C., an article by Willard M. Kiplinger which had some caustic things to say about the NRA. In part, Mr. Kiplinger wrote:

"It's no news to say that NRA, in both politics and its internal organization, is in the worst mess ever seen around this town. It started blithely on a picnic and worked gradually into a riot of confusion.

"The plain truth is that there is no satisfactory plan as yet for enforcement of the codes. There is no definiteness in NRA's price policy.

"The trouble is and always has been due to the temperamental incompetence of the man at the top. Bellowing is no substitute for cool planning."

General Johnson himself is said to have been somewhat chafed at the criticism and it is expected that there may be an early and blasting reply. Business leaders over the country are now seeking to substitute self-government control, and it is expected that there will be some interesting moves at Washington in the near future. In the meantime the congressional political campaign is approaching and there can be little doubt that the people of the United States will have plenty of opportunity to hear the NRA, the AAA and other government commissions and agencies fully discussed from every angle before the snow flies again. The honeymoon seems to be over.

A British inventor claims to have developed a dingus to tell whether two persons are in love and to what extent, but marriage solved that problem long ago.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

They say that nowadays everything is going to Washington. Well, how about the American League Pennant, for instance?

We hope it doesn't turn out that little Austria has so many "good friends" among the great powers that they pull her to pieces.

Charles Dressen, new manager of the Cincinnati National League baseball team says that a few weeks ago in Little Rock he fell asleep and dreamed that he was to become manager of the Reds, That wasn't a dream, it was a nightmare.

There is a steady drift to the left on the part of the so-called minor radical parties in the United States, according to the National Republic, which says in its current issue, concerning this ominous political development:

"Right upon the heels of the socialization of the Farm-Labor Party, which took place at its national convention held in Minneapolis early in April with its program declaring for the abolishment of the capitalist system in the United States, government ownership of natural resources, machinery of production, transportation, communication and other basic industries (factories, mines, water power, packing plants, public utilities, etc.) was launched, the Socialist Party took similar action. The Socialist Party, of which the Farm-Labor movement is no less an adjunct than the Socialist Party is of the communist movement in the United States and world at large, the Farm-Labor being the kindergarten, and the Socialist Party the high school for the Communist Party, also swallowed the Marxian program, hook, bait, sinker, line and pole and most of the angler himself.

"In its national convention held at Detroit early in June, the Socialist Party declared itself in favor of replacing the 'bogus democracy of capitalist parliamentarianism' by a 'workers democracy.' The charges were so strong against the American constitutional system that a committee of Chicago Socialist lawyers were delegated to change them in 'form but not in substance,' so as to avoid possible prosecutions under the various anti-sedition laws. This means, of course, that the Socialist program will now be veiled to hoodwink the people.

"The youth will now be urshered into the Socialist Party, the age limit having been lowered from twenty-one to eighteen, but they will not be allowed to vote in the party caucuses until they reach the age of twenty-one. An ironclad control over socialist organization membership and rigid disciplinary means were adopted. The dues for membership were raised. The executive committee ordered agents to proceed to Minnesota to obtain still closer cooperation with the Farm-Labor Party.

"The Congressional campaign of all three of the above mentioned movements will carry the same plan for the 'abolition of the American constitutional system' and the setting up of a 'cooperative commonwealth' (a socialist-communist system) for 'use and not for profit.' All classes, colors and creeds are being appealed to in order to 'unite' and achieve power to transform the system of government in this country and in the world. Banks, natural resources and all key industries would be put under socialist ownership by the Socialists. This is also the program of Communists and Farm-Laborites. They pledged to vote against all 'capitalist' wars and defense measures, which is for the purpose of disarming the existing government. Means of production and distribution, so as to transfer the wealth of the owners to the producers, would be attempted through the 'abolition of the profit system.' Pending the realization of the Socialist 'Cooperative Commonwealth,' which is set forth in a new constitution for the 'socialist cooperative commonwealth of the United States,' written to replace the American Constitution, the Socialists pledge themselves to work for further legislation to 'increase taxes,' while the present system of government exists. They would do this by increasing levies on inheritance, income and banks, which money they claim will be spent for old age pensions, social insurance, such as insurance for the unemployed and the sick, insurance against crop failures, etc.

"It called on workers and farmers to 'organize for power' and to 'uphold measures moving towards a thorough-going socialism,' not only in our country, but throughout the world."

NEED OF INITIATIVE

Give business a chance, let initiative have its day. When the wheels of industry turn as of old, unemployment fades. It is the keeness and alertness of business working for profits that keeps the mills and factories going.

Under a socialistic system there will be no courage, there will be no initiative, there will be only a slowly dying, paralyzed industry. This idea that the codes bring relief to labor except as a temporary measure is a snare and a delusion to the workingmen of America. Socialism cannot help workingmen. Under it they become slaves of the fanatic. They enter a serfdom in which all progress dies. It may seem hard to be obliged to work in order to live; it will be infinitely harder to be prohibited from work in order to exist. —Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts.

DEDICATED TO MRS. PHILLIPS

In the passing of Mrs. Glennie Lamar Phillips, of Clanton, Chilton County has lost one of its most forward-looking and useful citizens.

A daughter of the late Doctor and Mrs. William H. Lamar, of Auburn, and granddaughter of Rev. John Bowles Glenn, when she took up the work of a business woman at Clanton nearly half a century ago, she did not neglect her heritage of civic pride and altruistic spirit.

Without neglecting her duties as a mother and wife, her talent of leadership soon asserted itself in civic and religious, as well as in business circles of what was then the heart of a saw mill industry of a comparatively new county, whose county seat had yet to develop its social and religious, as well as political standards.

Her childhood associations with her pioneer grandfather, who migrated from Georgia, after the Indian war and became one of the founders and the first President of the Board of Trustees of what is now know as the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and the ideals which she received from worthy representatives of the Lamar, Glenn and Allen families were ever present to guide in her contacts with all classes and conditions met with in the evolution and development of what now constitutes Chilton County, with its established places of business, public schools, churches, and standards of living. Its citizens of all classes and conditions in life, as well as her chldren and grandchildren, rise up to call her blessed.

The history of this development in Chilton County would indeed be incomplete without the name of Glennie Lamar Phillips.

General Thomas D. Thatcher sharply criticized the NRA and General Hugh Johnson came back with the reply that Thatcher was "obviously a Republican." That's the first time we ever knew General Johnson to compliment anyone who disagreed with him.

Prof. Tugwell's latest speech indicates that as a "crack downer" he isn't in the same class with his friend, General Johnson.

It is said that impatient parents in the drougth country no longer reprimand their children by telling them to dry up.

WE CAN'T ESCAPE TAXES

It is generally admitted that by the end of the fiscal year 1935 our federal deficit will have reached the staggering sum of thirty-five billions, which is nine billions above the peak of the war time national debt. It is also generally realized that somebody will have to pay the bill. This will be done in one of two ways or both—inflation or taxation. In either event the ordinary citizen will pay his full share. If we have inflation he will pay by property loss and economic suffering. If we pay through higher taxes he will not escape.

The peculiar thing about taxes is that the ordinary citizen who owns little or no real estate or other tangible property thinks he can escape the payment. "I should worry about the deficit, let the rich man pay," he is apt to say. Yet there is no American who can escape paying his share of taxes. All must bear part of the burden. The truth was well put recently in a statement by Dr. William Bennett Munro, of the Executive Council of the California Institute of Technology.

"The untaxed American is a myth. No one who occupies property, owns a car, smokes tobacco, drinks beer, goes to the theatre, eats three meals a day, rides on a street car or goes through the other motions of daily life gets by untaxed. Yet there are people who think themselves non-taxpayers when at least ten per cent of their earnings go for taxes. They are victims of the great American delusion. Of itself government earns no money. Every dollar that it gets for its support must come from some one who does the earning. To do this it must tax production, all production, which means that both producer and consumer share in paying the bills."

Paste this on the wall and think it over as you read it. The government cannot manufacture real money out of air. It earns no money, is in fact the poorest "business man" we have, of necessity, because it is designed for service rather than profit. The government can only get its money from the people by taxing the people. The rich cannot be made to pay it all. When big industry is taxed the burden is passed on to the consumer in the way of higher prices. This is true no matter whether big business embraces a manufcturing plant or a public utility. Business can only get the money with which to pay taxes off the people themselves.

We heard a lot last year about processing taxes levied on wheat and hogs for the benefit of the farmer. The professors and other theorists told us that the tax would be absorbed by the packer and the big millers and bakers. Well, do you think it has turned out that way? If you do, just compare the price of a bag of flour now with the price a year ago, and then do the same thing with pork products. A nice ham will cost you just about double what it would have cost a year ago.

Once again the consumer is forced to pay, just as he always pays. Perhaps he doesn't know he pays the taxes but he does it just the same. If some clever means could be found of assessing all the taxes on the rich it wouldn't be long until the rich would disappear. Even their assets wouldn't stand up long against the gigantic cost of our government, federal, state and municipal. But such means has not been found and probably never will unless we can find a way to change the laws of nature. So the poor consumer will go on paying the big share of the taxes whether he knows it or not.

But he at least ought to be told what he is doing and what is ahead of him. Those who keep telling him that he won't have to pay the cost evidently proceed on the theory that what he doesn't know won't hurt him.

THE WISE OLD FARMER

The wise old owl should surrender his mantle to the wise old farmers who collected plentifully from the benign government for plowing under certain specified crops to keep prices up, and then planted their vast acres to potatoes upon which there was no ban, thereby causing such a glut in the potato market that the same over-generous government is compelled to buy their potatoes at the top price of $1.75 a bushel in order to maintain potato prices that will permit potato farmers to live.

It all seems a very silly procedure that the government (the people) should pay for destroying crops in order that the consumers (the people) should be compelled to pay more for their food, so that the farmers could get as much for part of their crop as they could have received for the whole of it. By this process the people pay for destroying the crops and also pay higher prices because the crops were destroyed. Just to complete the ludicrous picture the farmers pulled a fast one and planted so many potatoes that the regular potato farmers were imperiled. So the government (the people) comes across again and pays to take the potatoes off the market so the consumers (the people) cannot take advantage of the lower prices that might have resulted. Maybe the farmers come out even, but how about the people who pay for all the foolishness in the end?

And who is this poor farmer after all? Is he not a business man engaged in farming? If the farmer business man should be nursed along by the government at public expense why should not any other business man who has tough sledding get a lift? Who is it that helps the ordinary business man when times are hard, when floods rage, when fire razes his factory or people won't buy his goods? What more claim has a farmer to government subsidy than the rest of us who pay the bills? It strikes us that the farmer engages in farming from choice and should stand on his own feet and stop squawking. If he cannot make his business pay it is "just too bad." No one worries about the poor grocer, the dry goods merchant, the hardware man, the monument maker, or the factory owner who goes into debt and loses his business, or the poor taxpayer who loses his house because he has to pay so much for food, clohting and other things that he cannot raise money for his taxes.—Dorchester Argus-News.

The Man on the Corner
Some Sights He Saw—and Some He Saw Not

Clanton was well represented on the Gulf of Mexico last week end. Mr. and Mrs. Kin Vinson and children and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Wyatt and children spent a few days at the Oaks on Bon Secour River. Sam Powers and John Hollis were members of a party of Alabama Power Company executives at Gulf Shores.

We spent Saturday at Bill Morrill's Bear Point Camp on Perdido Bay, fishing in the Gulf of Mexico. At the same time Mr. Powers and Mr. Hollis, with their party, were fishing in the Gulf. The fish were in a striking mood, and catches were plentiful.

Dr. Parrish reports that considerable work of repairing has been done on the Clanton Grammar School building preparatory to the opening of school on September 3. This may patch the old building up so it can be used, but there still remains the obligation of the people of this community to do a big job and make our Grammar School building more comfortable and adequate to meet the needs.

As I came down town Monday morning after being away for four days I spied the Merry-Go-Round being erected on the Wilson lot. My first thought was that it might be the new postoffice building already started. As I rounded the corner I saw workmen throwing planks and bricks from the Wade Building. Maybe that's the new postoffice started I thought.

Visited the airport Monday afternoon with Dr. Gragg. Did not get up in the air, however. Indications are that work on the project is going forward splendidly at this time. It appears that those in charge of the work now really understand what they are to do toward making the flying field what it ought to be.

Our mayor's race is assuming more definite aspects this week. Fenn Jones comes out with a definite announcement of his candidacy and a fine statement of platform policies. Mell Martin makes the positive statement that he has declined to run. It is only a short time till the city election, which comes off in September. What about councilmen? Let's not forget we have got to have some of them.

People in this neck of the woods are feeling good over future business prospects. Looks like things will begin to hum as soon as cotton comes in, and it will not be long. Many business houses are expanding and improving their facilities. A new wholesale grocery house will be in operation soon after the first of September. The signs are good, and folks are feeling better.

GHOST STORIES BY OFFICIALS

According to Arthur Krock, New York Times Washington correspondent, a flood of "ghost" writers in the capital are preparing speeches for the big shots of the administration to deliver in the coming weeks. Every bureau and department has at least one of these super-newspaper men whose business it is to do nothing else but prepare speeches for their principals to make. Even the President has help of this kind and takes advantage of it. So when we read a speech made by any of the "higher-ups" we can be sure that it was probably written by someone else. Even the most striking phrases, which may seem characteristic of the particular speaker, have been coined by some "ghost".—Portland Press Herald.

In his recent radio address Prof. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, spoke about our surplus crops which the rest of the world no longer want, while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace insists we can get back our world markets by tariff adjustments. Now how about it? Have we lost our foreign markets for good, or have we? It occurs to us that the AAA boys ought to get together at this time and arrive at some decision before thy go any further.

Hitler has so much power now that he can tell the Reichstag to throw away its rubber stamp.

The two big problems seem to be to find jobs for the unemployed and to keep those who are working from striking.

Well, we may not have so much vegetation this year but we have a lot more regimentation.

It was announced by the Public Works Administration from Washington Monday that Clanton's application for $32,000 for a city hall and water works extension had been approved and allotted by that body.

These dividends will aggregate approximately $585,000 and dividend checks will be mailed on September 29 for the $7 and $6 stock and on October 31 for the $5.

HOW TO PRODUCE GOOD EGGS

The consuming public is anxious to secure the best eggs and is willing to pay in accordance, yet many producers stick to the old idea that an egg is anything with a shell around it, and pay little attention to the consuming public. Consequently many inferior eggs are sold to consumers and the consumption is thereby curtailed. This, of course, will jeopardize those who are trying to establish a reputation by marketing good eggs.

The following suggestions will help poultry producers to get good eggs:

Keep healthy, vigorous hens. Well bred hens lay more eggs and larger eggs.

Feed hens properly on a well balanced ration.

Produce infertile eggs.

Keep large, roomy nests, with clean nesting material. Provide one nest for each five hens.

Confine hens to house when yards are muddy to prevent dirty eggs.

Grade eggs and keep for home use all cracked, dirty or small eggs.

Market eggs twice a week, especially during summer months.

Keep eggs in a cool, dry place.

Gather eggs once or twice daily.

Pack and ship in a standard egg crate, using the standard pack.

SCHOOL MEETING CALLED AT THOMAS JR. SCHOOL

Kelley, Ocie Devaughn and J. B. Jones, trustees.

Due to the fact that so many families are canning at the present time, it will not be possible to accept any produce after ten o'clock in the morning.

Only sound, firm fruit of uniform ripeness should be used for canning.—Kittye Clyde Austin, Director of Relief.

PASTURING IN CLANTON

You have always heard "There is nothing new," but what about this? Have you ever before heard of people bringing their work stock from the country into town for pasturage? Well, just that is being done right now right here in Clanton. That reminds us of what somebody said a year or so ago about grass growing in the streets. This grass is not in the streets but it is in town all right—enough for a hundred cows and mules to graze on and rich grazing too.

Mr. C. D. Foshee who lives in northeast Clanton has brought three mules out from his farm near Billingsley into town to pasture them. He is keeping them, together with several head of cattle, in his pasture on the old Joe Gore place on Black Snake creek, in the corporate limits of Clanton.

It is interesting to note that other owners of creek flats in Clanton are doing the same thing. Judge Reynolds has lots of cattle on his pasture just below Lay Dam Road on each side of the ditch. Also Sam Johnson is using his low land extensively for grazing in that part of the corporate limits between his home and Poley Bridge Creek in southeast Clanton. Just across the creeks, or ditches, from the town limits the landowners are doing the same thing. Dr. Parrish has a fine pasture on his land, so has Willie Crowson, J. W. Cagle and others.

The ditching of our swamps has made this possible, which is one of the finest things that has come our way in late years. These low lands, which have heretofore been only breeding places for mosquitoes, have been turned into the finest pasture lands in the county. The grass growing on them will support a large herd of cattle and mules.

BILL HODGES ENTERTAINS

One of the most delightful affairs that the younger set has enjoyed this summer was a picnic given by Bill Hodges at Gulledge's camp on Blue Creek last week end. The guests enjoyed swimming, dancing and other sports during the evening. Chaperones for the party were Mrs. Lee Smith, Mrs. Irene Rasberry and Mrs. W. Z. Hodges.

ROBBINS RAISE HERE

It has been reported that a rare occurrence has happened in this county this summer, in that a pair of robbins have remained here and raised two sets of young this summer. Robbins usually come here in the winter and leave out in the early spring.

Reese Baker of Concord community reports that a large bunch of Robbins used in some trees near his home last winter, and when the group left about the first of this year one pair chose to remain. Since then they have raised two sets of young. Their nest is in a tall pine near Mr. Baker's home. When the hen is sitting the male bird carries food to her and she scarcely ever leaves the nest.

Mrs. H. C. McDonald of Wetumpka was in Clanton Monday and Tuesday visiting friends. She returned to her home with Mrs. Whitley McDonald, who spent Tuesday here.

Lesson for August 19

AMOS DENOUNCES SELF-INDULGENCE

(Temperance Lesson).

LESSON TEXT—Amos 6:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live: and so the Lord, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken. Amos 5:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When People Are Selfish.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Amos' Famous Sermon.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Dangers of Self-Indulgence.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Destruction Through Indulgence.

Our lesson is a temperance lesson and applies to other things than indulgence in intoxicating liquors. Our age is intoxicated with the love of pleasure, pursuit of gain, and various kinds of self-ambition.

I. Israel's Reckless Security (vv. 1-3).

They were blind to the perils that surrounded them. They trusted in the mountains of Samaria for their protection. They regarded their city as impregnable. They seemed to have regarded the utterances of Amos as the dreams of a fanatic. The same blunders are being made in America by those who are depending upon money and armaments instead of righteousness as the national defense.

II. Israel's Extreme Luxury (vv. 4-6).

Periods of prosperity are always characterized by luxury. The luxury of Israel expressed itself in:

1. Extravagant furniture (v. 4). They had beds of ivory—perhaps wood inlaid with ivory. 2. Indolence (v. 4). Many lazily stretched themselves on their couches—lived lives of indolence. Such is the way of many in America today.

3. Feasted on delicacies (v. 4). The implication here is that they had their dainties out of season. They bought what they desired, regardless of what it cost.

4. Adorned their feasts with music (v. 5). They sang idle songs—even invented musical instruments for this purpose. How like the times in which we live! By means of the radio, vulgar and even licentious sentiments are carried to our ears through the noble art of music.

5. They drank wine (v. 6). They were not satisfied with ordinary drinking vessels—they drank from bowls, indicating excessive drinking. They were so mastered by the intoxicating cup that their feasts which were adorned with the refinement of music ended in drunken debauchery.

III. Israel's Failure to Grieve for Joseph (v. 6).

Joseph here stands for Ephraim and Manasseh, his two sons. Ephraim became the principal tribe of the northern kingdom, so Joseph is used as a synonym for the nation.

IV. The Inevitable Consequence (vv. 7-11).

1. They shall go into captivity (v. 7). The northern kingdom was the first in sin and therefore first to go into captivity.

2. The calamitous circumstances of the siege of Samaria (vv. 8-11). The city with all its inhabitants was to be delivered up to its enemies.

a. Israel, the first in rank as well as first in numbers and power, went first into captivity.

b. Their revelry to cease (v. 7). There was to be a rude awakening from their drunken carousals.

c. God's judgment upon the city in strange contrast to his love for Jacob (v. 8). Men, women, and children went into captivity at the hands of the Assyrians.

d. The surety of God's commandment (v. 11). The destruction was to be universal. The rich and the poor, the large and the small were included. God has sworn that his judgments shall fail. He is a God of justice. He is also the God of hosts, the controller of the whole universe, therefore none can escape. Though God sometimes waits long, he does not forget.

V. Israel's Ridiculous Conduct Exposed (vv. 12-14).

1. It was as absurd as plowing upon a rock with oxen. Their hard hearts were as unresponsive to the call of God as rocks are to the plow of the farmer (v. 12).

2. Their boasted power as a nation (v. 13). Outwardly the nation was characterized by great wealth and splendor. This all was to pass away with the stroke of divine judgment.

3. A nation raised up against them (v. 14.). God raised up the Assyrian nation to punish Israel. The very fortified cities which they boasted of, Amos tells, would be taken away and used against them.

Nearness

Nearness of life to the Saviour will necessarily involve greatness of love to him. As nearness to the sun increases the temperature of the various planets, so near and intimate communion with Jesus rates the heat of the soul's affections toward him.—Spurgeon.

Heavenlies

The man who thinks in terms of the heavenlies, and lives as he thinks, will never be found walking "in the counsel of the ungodly."

Clarence Parrish of Birmingham was visiting his brother, Evan Parrish, here the first of this week.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The writer has just returned from Chicago where he has been doing some special evangelistic work. I heard more about Dillinger in Chicago than I did about any other character, dead or alive. Dillinger was a criminal of the worst type. He was a wicked murderer. He had no conscience and yet he was a hero in the estimation of a great many people.

"Do you believe in total depravity?" someone asked me recently. Certainly I do. Why not? The Bible teaches it. History proves it. Man is born in this world without God in his heart. He has no spark of divinity in him. Man in his natural state is liable to do anything. Every boy who attempts to live without God could become a Dillinger provided he had the elements of physical courage which Dillinger had. When a man becomes a Christian he is not really made over again. He simply has something imparted. He becomes a dual being. He has the old nature and a new nature. The Bible teaches that we are to reckon the old nature dead. Some Bible teachers believe in the eradication of the old nature by the power of the Holy Ghost. Others teach that the old nature may be held in subjection by the Holy Spirit who indwells our bodies. Whatever may be the right teaching in this particular, I am convinced of one thing. God wants us to live a victorious life. That is the privilege of every Christian.

"These things write unto you that you sin not." That is God's standard for every Christian. I have never claimed sinless perfection, but I have never told a child of God that he has to sin. There will be enough sinning in this country without any encouragement from the pulpit. "But if any man sin we have an advocate with the father." God asks us for the best, but His grace provides for the worst.

ALL DAY SINGING AT MINERAL SPRINGS TO BE NEXT SUNDAY

There will be an all day singing at this place Sunday, August 19th, and we invite all singers and lovers of music to come and be with us, and let's not forget our books and a well filled basket.

Our revival will begin here on Sunday night. Rev. W. E. Robinson will do the preaching. Everybody is invited to attend.

Mr. S. R. Powers and Mr. John Hollis attended an outing of Alabama Power Co. officials at Gulf Shores last week end.

PATES CHAPEL

The B. Y. P. U. Convention met at Pates Chapel Sunday evening at 2:00 o'clock. A large crowd was present, which we were glad to have, and a good many churches were represented. Cane Creek won the banner again. Come on the rest of us and let's get the banner next time. The convention will be held at New Salem in November, the second Sunday. We were glad to have the pastor and good speakers with us Sunday evening, and cordially invite you all to come back again.

Our revival closed August 5th with a great success. We got eight new members for baptism and two by letter. The converts were as follows: Misses Carrie Bolton, Ludie Mae Willis, Faye Hayes, Alice Hayes, Linnie Bell Robinson, Icy Blow, and Mr. Grady Sewell, of Birmingham; and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Rainwater, by letter. Rev. M. Lockhart rendered some wonderful sermons, which were enjoyed by the entire community, and the surrounding communities.

Mr. N. Hayes and daughters, Mrs. Fred Button and Miss Bessie Hayes, of Loxley, were visitors in this community the past week end.

Miss Zemma Hayes, who has been visiting relatives and friends at Loxley, returned home Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Champion and chidlren were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Hayes, their sons and family, Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Hayes, and son, Aubry, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hayes.

Miss Ludie Mae Willis from near Dawson, Ga., is visiting her sisters, Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Maddox of Thorsby and Mrs. Lee Hayes of Pates Chapel.

STREAM-LINED DANCING

Chicago.—It's the "stream-lined fox trot" this season. The creation of Josie Corbera and Elliot Vincent, here for the convention of the Chicago Convention of Dancing Masters, the dance gets away to a "free-wheeling" whirl, glides into a "knee-action" strut and concludes abruptly with a "hydraulic break."

CENTER HILL SINGING

There will be an old-book singing at Center Hill all day on the fourth Sunday in August. Everybody is invited to come, bring your dinner and help us in the program.—J. E. Cobb.

Miss Glennie Mahan and her friend, Mr. R. J. Edge, of Montgomery, spent the past week end with friends in Clanton. On their return to Montgomery they were accompanied by Miss Maude Mahan.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

FIVE CLUB GIRLS WILL BE GIVEN FREE TRIPS

Auburn, Ala.—Five 4-H club girls of Alabama will be given free trips to the National 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago, Ill., about the first of December.

These five girls will be named at the State Short Course for 4-H Club Girls to be held in Auburn, August 21-25. They will be the winner, in the health, dress revue, home improvement, and bread contests to be held during their stay here.

When announcing the free trips, Miss Bess Fleming, State club girl leader, also made it known that prizes will be given to winners in clothing, foods, food perservation, and home improvement judging contests.

In addition to participating in contests, the girls will swim, attend picture shows, attend community singings, and receive instructions on flower arrangements, first aid, and many other useful undertakings of the farm.

Plans have been completed for nearly 300 girls of 44 counties in the State to attend the Short Course.

FERTILIZER MEN TO VISIT STATION

Crossville, Ala.—Fertilizer manufacturers of Alabama will meet at the Sand Mountain Sub-Experiment Station at Crossville on August 21 to study the experimental work in progress at that station.

They will visit the sub-station upon invitation of Dean M. J. Funchess of the Alabama Experment Station, Auburn, who has expressed his desire that all manufacturers of the State will make it a point to attend the meeting.

COTTON PLANTERS GET $34,691,288

Auburn, Ala.—The Government has paid cotton planters of the South a total of $34,691,288 this season with indications that the total amount will reach about $130,000,000 by the end of the year.

Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the Alabama Extension Service, reports that Alabama cotton farmers have to date received $34,412,918 for reducing their cotton acreage this year. Only two states—Texas and Mississippi—have received larger payments than has Alabama.

COTTON WILL NOT BE DUMPED ON MARKET

The 1,950,000 bales of cotton being held by the government in the producers' pool will not be "dumped" or permitted "unduly" to disturb the market.

The cotton became eligible for sale on Tuesday, July 31, but farm administration officials assured farmers and the trade that this cotton will not be dumped or forced on a weak or unwilling market.

"This pool cotton," says Oscar Johnson, manager of the pool, "will be marketed in an orderly fashion in accordance with sound business judgment and with a view to avoiding competition with normal trade channels. We have no intention of dumping or sacrificing this cotton. Our fixed purpose is to liquidate the pool account as early as practicable in a manner which is consistent with good business principles. When and if any of this cotton is offered for sale the public will be advised and the trade given an opportunity to purchase."

NATIONAL FOREST LANDS ARE NOW BEING EXAMINED

Montgomery, Ala.—The first step leading to the establishment of additional National Forests in Alabama is the location of purchase units having definite boundaries within which acquisition will be made, according to a statement received by the Alabama Commission of forestry from the U. S. Forest Service. Mr. W. I. Stevens, regional forest inspector with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., has begun he work of locating such units.

In the southern states there are millions of acres of land suitable only for timber production. Under recent and current economic conditions much of this area can hardly be maintained and developed by private owners or by the state. In many of such cases the solution is found in the creation of national forests.

Great impetus was given this movement by the president's allotment of twenty million dollars for the purchase of additional lands to be included in such forests. All lands, however, may not be suitable for the purposes of the federal government. The areas selected will be required to conform to many conditions and circumstances. The state commission of forestry, Montgomery, Alabama, has issued a circular of information No. 16, for the benefit of landowners who may contemplate having their lands included in national forests. This circular will be mailed to inquirers upon request.

A card from Dr. Leroy Mims says he is now stationed at Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., and adds: "I am now seeing the sights of the big city." His present address is 2067 32nd st., Astoria, L. I., N. Y.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—Fayette County sportsmen have banded together to protect game on both sides of the Sipsey River, which crosses that county, by creating a Sipsey River Game Preserve.

Organization was completed at a meeting addressed by Game Commissioner I. T. Quinn and attended by 75 hunters, fishermen and landowners in Newtonville August 10, at which plans were made for establishing the preserve and patroling the area.

W. W. Gravlee, of Fayette, was elected president of the association; C. C. Smith, of Newtonville, Route, vice president and John Kuykendall, of Fayette, Route 4, secretary-treasurer.

Twenty-five landowners of the Sipsey river basin participated in the meeting and a committee was appointed to list lands, in cooperation with the owners, which will be included in the preserve. Decision was made to appoint a game protector who would be instructed to put up markers and exercise the authority of a warden.

"The Sipsey river basin is a wonderful area for the propagation of game and is suitable for deer, turkeys, squirrels and includes good quail territory," said Commissioner Quinn. Hunting will be prohibited where species are scarce to allow them an opportunity to increase.

WHO SAID POULTRY

Because egg production is normally low in the bulk of the flocks throughout the country in late summer and early fall, poultrymen and flock owners who are able to get eggs at this season find them very profitable. Egg prices are on the increase during this period and ordinarily reach their peak in the early part of November. So it pays to use such methods in handling the flock as will produce plenty of good marketable eggs during these months.

The use of early hatched pullets is one way in which production may be maintained during this period. One of the important points in the management of these pullets is to see that they are properly housed and are fed a good laying mash, for best results cannot be obtained if they are allowed to remain on range after laying has started. The house should therefore be made ready for them at once, and the pullets placed in them if laying is soon to start.

Since these early pullets are likely to molt in late October, November or early December, it is well to take all precautions to prevent this molt if possible. This is best done by keeping them in good condition of flesh through feeding well at the same time that egg production is increasing. It is unwise to force production at the start. Let them come into production normally.

Where there is no tendency to lose weight, but production either drops off or does not gain the way it should, the regular laying mash may be moistened with milk or water, preferably milk, and fed once a day in addition to keeping the dry mash before them all the time, as additional milk may be added to the ration to encourage production. Whatever methods are used to maintain production or body weight should be used one at a time and not all at once, for they will be more effective in this way. It is possible in this way to keep these birds laying for several months, providing, of course, they have the breeding for egg production in back of them. With only a slight neck molt in the fall and possibly in the spring which will not interfere much with egg production.

In addition to the suggestion given it is necessary to plan the year in advance. This will permit hatching the pullets so they will start laying at the desired time and it will permit providing sufficient housing space to take care of all the stock.

APPLICATION MUST BE MADE BY AUGUST 20th

Auburn, Ala., August 7.—The Alabama Allotment Board has set August 20 as the deadline for receiving applications for individual allotments and tax exemption certificates under the Bankhead bill.

The Board—composed of four successful farmers, J. L. Edwards, Selma, chairman, John V. Matthews, Huntsville, L. S. Fluker, Livingston, W. H. Robertson, Loachapoka—held its initial meeting Wednesday and made plans for pushing forward the work as fast as possible.

After the meeting Chairman Edwards said that the Board is attempting to work out temporary arrangements so that cotton may be ginned in south Alabama before actual certificates can be issued. He also stated that certificates will be issued before cotton picking begins in most of the state.

"It is very important that all farmers make application for individual allotments and tax exemption certificates before August 20," Mr. Edwards said. Unless applications are received by that time it will be too late for the farmer filing the application to receive individual allotments and tax exemption certificates.

Every detail that will help speed up the work is being attended to by the state allotment board and officials of the state extension service, including county agents and cotton committeemen in every county.

SEEK NEWSPRINT MILL IN ALABAMA

Meeting Of 100 Industrialists At Ala. Power Bldg. Sets Wheels In Motion

Under the leadership of President Thomas W. Martin and T. D. Johnson, Manager of the New Industires Division, the active influence of over 100 Alabama industrialists, educational leaders, bankers, chemists and foresters has been marshalled toward the establishment of mills in Alabama to make newsprint and other paper out of Southern pine.

The program looking to the making of newsprint and other white paper out of Southern pine by the process which the famous chemist, Dr. Charles Herty, has developed in his Savannah, Ga., experimental plant, got under way with the calling by President Martin, Theodore Swann and E. J. Smyer of a meeting at the Alabama Power Building Auditorium.

Out of the meeting came the formation of the Alabama Conference on Paper Products from Alabama, of which Thomas W. Martin was elected Chairman, Julian McGowin, Theodore Swann, Col. Page S. Bunker were named Vice-Chairmen, and Ashton B. Collins, Secretary.

Resolutions were adopted mapping the program of the Conference, and the cooperation of the University of Alabama, Alabama Polytechnic, Alabama Industrial Board, Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, Birmingham-Southern College, Associated Industries of Alabama, and Alabama Mining Institute were pledged.

MONTEVALLO GARDEN LIGHTING JOB DRAWS PRAISE OF VISITORS

Much is being heard these days about modern lighting and how greatly it enhances beauty, comfort and efficiency in home, office and factory. But recently in Montevallo two A. P. Co. lighting experts put on a demonstration of what modern lighting can do outdoors. They chose for this display the lovely grounds and garden of the Petersen home in Montevallo. With skillfully arranged lighting effects they created what the Montevallo Times described as "a veritable sylvan fairyland which won the admiration of all visitors."

The whole effect — indescribably beautiful—demonstrated that modern lighting now has a new role. Our lighting department will be glad to tell interested inquirers more about it.

Commission Makes Further Reduction In Domestic Rates

Cost of Electric Service Is Reduced by $25,000 Yearly

August 1st the Alabama Public Service Commission issued another order affecting the rates applicable to some 73,000 urban residential customers served by Alabama Power Company, further reducing the cost of the service in the amount of $25,000 per year, beginning with bills dated September 1, 1934.

The new rate plan inaugurated by the Commission last September seems to have become popular as a similar rate form has been adopted by Commissions in California, Georgia and Tennessee, as well as being acknowledged as satisfactory to Tennessee Valley Authority. Approximately 80% of the customers now receive directly or indirectly the benefits of the low "objective" rate, the remaining 20% of the customers being billed under the "present" rate. The new "present" rate is much lower than the rate which prevailed prior to the Commission's order of last September.

The Commission's order removed entirely the room charge from the "objective" rate and in October, 1936, when the "objective" rate supersedes the "present" rate for all customers, the room charges will have been entirely abolished. As a practical matter the room charge is by this order abolished for 80% of the customers and this percentage is steadily increasing as shown by the records during recent months.

The reduction in rate will be enjoyed by some 94% of all customers served whilst the remaining 6% will receive some slight increases in their bills. Considering the increases, however, the cost of service under the new rates will be much less than prior to the Commission's order of September, 1933.

The further reduction in rates of this company and the abolishment of the room charge should be thoroughly acceptable to the users of residential electric service in the State.

ATTENTION! UNEMPLOYED TEACHERS

I have been informed through official communication from Washington that federal aid will be available for the paying of a weekly wage to unemployed teachers who are in need, for services rendered through the educational authorities of cities and counties of Alabama in giving instruction to persons over sixteen years of age enrolled in elementary and high school classes, vocational classes, classes organized for illiterates, in the teaching of nursery schools, in organized recreational activities, and in the training of unemployed crippled citizens.

Unemployed teachers, both white and colored, who are in need and who hold valid certificates, or who have in the past taught under valid certificates even though they have since expired, should call upon their county or city superintendents of education, or make request of the State Department of Education, Montgomery, Alabama, for survey forms entitled "Information Concerning Unemployed Teachers," on which to give information necessary for consideration and for their employment under the provisions set up by the State Department of Education and the Alabama Relief Administration authorities.

This survey is being made in order to effciently plan the State's program. It does not guarantee employment to every unemployed teacher.

Persons reading this notice will call it to the attention of any unemployed teachers of their acquaintance. Immediate action is urged.

This survey is being made as a project of the Alabama Relief Administration. The relief office of Chilton County has approved Mr. Percy M. Johnson of Jemison, Alabama, to make the survey. Every teacher both white and colored, who has not already been assigned to school work for next year should arrange to see Mr. Johnson and file with him an application for employment in this special education program. Mr. Johnson will be at the following places on the dates and at the hours stated.

Clanton, superintendent little's office, August 20, 23, 25 and 31.

two years since I came to make Clanton my home. At that time hogs, goats and cows moved on the streets as tho their doing so was a benefit to the town and the people should give them right of way without complaint, but finally we voted them off, and beginning with this first step toward having a clean town next came the question of a water system. The proposition was submitted to the voters during the administration as Mayor of the late Dr. E. A. Matthews, and if my memory serves me correct there were only thirteen votes cast against it, and if Dr. Matthws could speak, he would support my statement that I was not one of the unwise thirteen.

I was one of the first to connect our store with the small electric light plant of the late Joseph P. VanDerveer, and many men here today remember I took an active part in getting the Alabama Power Company to furnish the town with lights and power from Lock 12. They agreed to serve us on condition that Clanton buy the right of way, and several men including myself signed a note for $2000 payable to The Peoples Savings Bank, the money to be used for buying the right of way to Lock 12. I was chosen pay master by the men on that note and while the late W. W. Fox and others were busy securing the right of way I learned that the Alabama Power Company was not requiring other small towns to furnish rights of way, and I called on President Martin of the Alabama Power Company and told him I did not think he was playing fair with Clanton. He made a satisfactory explanation of the different conditions, but stated he did not want the people of Clanton to have that impression and asked me how it would suit me if the Alabama Power Company would assume $1000 of the cost and we take care of the balance be it more or less. I promptly accepted his offer and when the matter was closed the cost of the right of way was $1900 leaving $900 for the men on that note and others who would assist to pay.

The next wonderful and necessary improvement to force its way into our town was the paved side walks, paved business section, and the sewerage system. Ex Mayors Dr. V. J. Gragg and J. B. Atkinson will tell you I gave them and their councilmen my whole-hearted support for this necessity which many property owners opposed but who would not today have it taken up even without expenses to them and the original cost returned to them. This improvement cost me $1,738.66. and it is paid.

Following this advancement toward a real good City came the question of installing a filtering plant for the City water. Surely no one has forgotten how extremely objectionable the water was especially after being heated. Ex-Mayor Hart and his councilmen know I encouraged them to build the plant and suggested that the price of the water be raised sufficient to pay for the plant in a reasonable time, and I insisted they not follow the rule of the State and many Cities of creating a debt and leaving it unpaid for the tax payers to pay interest on a whole life time, but when the plant was paid for to reduce the water rate. I am informed the plant is now paid for and you will recall the water rate was reduced by the present administration.

Not many days ago the voters were given an opportunity to register their approval or disapproval of borrowing some money to extend the watermains and to build a City Hall. I voted yes on both propositions. I want all the people to have good pure water and fire protection just as cheaply as the town can afford to furnish it. While we could do without the City Hall, yet it is really needed, and if I am correctly informed, having it will not add but little to the present cost of the City Government.

It seems to be a fact the only way the public, or we as a people, can obtain public improvement is by the use of the credit system, but I want you to know I would not be willing to use our credit for anything we need beyond our ability to pay. Our debt could be so great it would require our present income almost, to pay the interest, the result would be higher taxes, and God knows I do not want any more taxes on myself or you either. It provokes me very much, it brings tears to my eyes, it causes me to feel rebellious against the powers that be, and have been, to read of and see the homes of men being sold to pay a tax debt assessed against it by a system I think is wrong, and on account of the waste, extravagance and dishonest use of the public funds by some men we elected to office.

If I am elected Mayor I shall endeavor to enforce the laws of the City with justice and fairness to everyone, having sympathy for and showing mercy to the offender according to his ability to undestand, and I shall conduct the business affairs of the City with the same careful judgement and economy I used in my own private business with the hope of reducing our water rate and our taxes, but on account of the contemplated improvements recently voted, and the fact there are still unpaid debts created by former administrations, I fear a reduction in our present tax rates cannot be wisely done.

In the future, as in the past, I shall lend my influence to those things I believe tend to build good character and a higher class citizenship, and support all propositions of improvement to make our City a better place in which to live, consistent with sound business judgement and our ability to pay in taxes for such improvements. The churches and schools have felt my support all along the way. I subscribed to, and paid, to the building of the Baptist Church $600.00, to the Methodist Church $800.00, to the Presbyterian Church 500.00, and the other churches of the town I think received amounts in keeping with the value of their buildings. I have heard it said recently that the Grammar School building is inadequate to take care of the classes, and that the old building is unsafe and unfit for use. Efforts to correct this condition will have my sympathy and cooperation to the limit of the City's duty and ability to assist.

I recite all the above facts to refresh the memory of my old friends who may have forgotten my position on these matters of advancement in our City and of public concern, and I give it as information to the young voters and the people who have moved into our City during the past few years that they also may know of the keen interest I have shown in the growth of our City and the assistance given.

With reference to the present Councilmen I have a high regard for them as men of honor, business judgement and integrity. They and Mayor J. Lee Smith have served the City well, and I am sure we could, and would work together most pleasantly and their re-election at this time would please me, but I am informed one or two of them may not ask for the position again, therefore I desire to say to you I feel and believe I can serve agreeably with any set of councilmen you will elect, and I have no names to suggest to you, but I hope you will elect men of sane business judgement and whose honesty is not questioned. The affairs of Clanton are your affairs, the money the Councilmen use and spend is your money, and you should safeguard it as tho it were your own personal money and your private business. If all men and women would vote with that idea of protection to the public interest, there are hundreds of men who would never have held office or a position of trust in the state of Alabama.

I would be proud to represent you as your Mayor and will try to conduct myself in such manner as not to hurt your civic pride, and keep myself in good appearance so you will not be embarrassed to designate me to a stranger as the Mayor of your city. One gentleman said of me, I am informed, and perhaps he spoke in kindly jest, that he would appreciate me more if I would get a little dirt or dust on me occasionally. To this friend I wish to say that it is said. "Cleanliness is Next to Godliness", and because I love to live in the right and close to God I shall endeavor to keep clean, both in character and appearance whether I am elected Mayor of Clanton or not.

C. FENN JONES.

Negro Fugitive Finally Killed

Escaped Convict Is Shot To Death After Desperate Break

Carbon Hill, Ala., Aug. 17.—Shot to death as he reached for the pistol he used in the slaying of one man and the wounding of another, Sam Holley, negro desperado, today paid with his life for his crimes.

Holley had been the object of West Alabama greatest manhunt in recent years since Tuesday night, when he overpowered Police Chief H. T. Beasley of Winfield, and seriously wounded the officer with a knife.

The thoroughly aroused countryside turned out 500 strong for the manhunt. Aided by bloodhounds, they tracked the desperado through the foothills and twice came up with him, only to have him shoot his way to freedom.

The first encounter resulted in the death of Ernest Long, Winfield, a member of the possee, and the second gave Deputy Sheriff Jack Sparks a bullet in the leg, and Holley a bullet in the left arm.

Today, Tom Wakefield of Carbon Hill, was informed that Holley was at a spring, three miles from Carbon Hill.

He approached the desperado's hiding place warily and surprised him. "What are you doing here, Sam," Wakefield asked.

The negro's reply was a quick grasp for the pistol he took from Chief Beasley. But his motion was his death warrant. A charge of buckshot from Wakefield's shotgun dropped Holley before he could fire.

Holley escaped from a state convict road camp near Winfield and it was on his arrest as an escape that he wounded the Winfield police chief who is still in a serious condition in a hospital at Amory, Miss.

FOURSQUARE MEETING

Evangelist W. E. Thurmond is doing some fine preaching each evening, where a revival campaign is in progress at the church of the Foursquare. Right from the first service, people came down the isles and expressed a desire to become disciples of Jesus Christ.

Rev. Thurmond seems to be at his best and is bringing forth messages that are stirring the hearts of his listeners. He declares that the people must pray, pay their vows, be neighborly, turn from their wicked ways, or they shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven. The church asks that the general public give this man of God a hearing each evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Canning Furnace Hit By Lightning

Walter Anderson and Joe Mims Narrow Escape Shock

Walter Anderson brought in three mangled tin cans Monday morning to illustrate what happened when the canning furnace in Beat 16 was struck by a bolt of lightning last Friday afternoon about five o'clock. The cans were ripped and torn into shreds.

The furnace was located at the home of Mr. Billy Adams, and was the relief canning center for Beat 16.

Mr. Anderson and Joe Mims were working at the furnace, and the following account of the occurence is given by Anderson:

"The furnace was fired up and in operation. On the furnace we had a tin tub in which were forty cans of vegetables. Joe Mims and I had just turned to walk away from the furnace when the lightning struck. After the blast only fourteen cans of vegetables were left in the tub. Three of the cans were torn to pieces and the others scattered all about the place. The furnace was badly damaged. No one was hurt. It was a brick furnace with a stovepipe flue. We have been using it for relief canning in Beat 16 for several weeks."

State Claims County Owes Gasoline Tax

Bill For $11,654.65 From State Tax Commission Presented To County Commissioners Here Last Saturday

The State Tax Commission claims that Chilton County owes the State of Alabama $11,654.65 for tax on gasoline that has been bought by the county and which was "used indiscriminately for operating county road equipment and distributed to individuals for use in private cars."

Accompanying the claim, which was sent to probate judge L. H. Reynolds, last week, is the following letter from Mr. A. B. Tucker, chief clerk of the Gasoline Department of the State Tax Commission:

"Enclosed herewith I am handing you a claim against Chilton County for tax on gasoline withdrawn from storage or sold by your county from February 1, 1932 to June 30, 1934, on which the State tax has not been paid.

"In view of the fact that this gasoline was used indiscriminately for operating county road equipment and distributed to individuals for use in private cars, I am charging the State tax on the entire quantity received during that period.

"Withdrawals prior to February 1, 1932 are still under consideration and a decision as to the taxability on such withdrawals will be reached as soon as the proper study is made.

"I will thank you to bring this matter to the attention of your county board at next meeing and advise me as to the action taken. If the validity of the claim is questioned, I would like to discuss the matter with a representative of the board at any convenient time. I would prefer having a member of the board in this proposed conference."

The claim of $11,654.65 against the county, transmitted with the foregoing letter of explanation, sets out in detail the following, under date of August 17, 1934:

"Chilton County to the State of Alabama, Dr.

"Tax on 56,533 gallons gasoline withdrawn from storage February 1, 1932, to November 1, 1932, at 5 cents per gallon, $2,826.65.

"Tax on 147,135 gallons gasoline withdrawn from storage November 1, 1932 to June 30, 1934, at 6 cents per gallon, $8,828.10.

"Total tax, $11,654.65.

"I hereby certify that the above account is true, correct and unpaid to the best of my knowledge and belief. —A. B. Tucker, chief clerk Gasoline Department, State Tax Commission.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of August, 1934.—Julia Kleuge, Notary Public.

"Note—Of the above 203,668 gallons of gasoline withdrawn from storage by Chilton County during the period covered by this claim, evidence shows that 9,789 gallons were delivered into personal cars, and 114,748 gallons delivered into county equipment. Evidence on file in this office also indicates that some of the gasoline claimed to have been delivered to county equipment was, in fact, delivered to private persons. Due to this, the tax is charged on the entire quantity received."

Cruise got Plantersville's lone extra base hit, a double. Five errors helped to defeat Martin, all of them coming with men on bases.

The elimination series of games in this tournament will take all this week, with semi-finals and finals to be played next week.

W. M. DEVAUGHN'S SCHOOL

A card from Prof. W. M. Devaughn says: "My school at Cooper is fine and getting better. There are 66 on roll now. I think we will have our concert at Clanton Friday night week. Tell everybody to watch next week's paper, for announcement will be made for sure then. Our visiting afternoons during the school are Wednesdays and Saturdays."

We are glad to learn that Prof. Devaughn is planning on having his concert at Clanton. He had one all set and primed to put on here a month or so ago, and it was rained out. We hope him better luck this time. It will be worth attending, and everyone may rest assured of that.

Those from Clanton who visited the world's fair with the Alabama Press Special were: Mrs. Billie Smith, Mrs. George McCain, Mrs. Barney Burnett and T. E. Wyatt. The special left Birmingham over the Illinois Central on Friday afternoon and returned Tuesday afternoon. The entire press group stopped at the Hotel Sherman while in Chicago.

In the second elimination game of the tournament, Tuesday afternoon, Maplesville defeated Jemison 16 to 6.

Jemison drove Potts to the showers in the first inning, when they scored two runs off a double, a base on balls, and a single. Tucker replaced him, and held Jemison well in hand except in the eighth frame, when three hits and an error counted for three runs, but by that time Maplesville had already iced the game away.

Maplesville drove Reynolds out in the third, when they batted around and kept up the firing against Scott, scoring three in the fourth. A. Littleton took up the mound duties, but was rifled out in the fifth, giving over to E. Littleton, who fared little better. The four pitchers Jemison used gave up 14 hits, walked five, hit two, and had six errors committed behind them. Potts and Tucker gave up 14 hits, walked two, hit one, and had only two errors behind them, these coming in the last part of the game.

Some kind of record was made by D. Hayes, lead-off man for Maplesville, who struck out five times. His brother, J. Hayes, got four hits out of five trips up. Glasscock and Durbin led for Jemison, with three out of five.

Miss Mary Ellis Resigns Position

Will Take Up Child Welfare Work In Chambers County

Miss Mary Ellis has resigned her position as Child Welfare Superintendent of Chilton County, to take effect Thursday, August 23. She has already accepted the position of Child Welfare Superintendent of Chambers County, and will take up her new duties at LaFayette on September 1st.

Miss Ellis gives as her reason for resigning the work here that she was offered a better salary by Chambers County, and the refusal of the authorities here to meet the amount she was offered there.

As she gives up her work here Miss Ellis makes the following statement:

"I hope that the work of the Child Welfare Department will be continued in Chilton County. It is very important, and there is a most vital need for it among our people. I have enjoyed the work in Chilton County while I have been superintendent of Child Welfare, and I most sincerely appreciate the friendly cooperation of all the people with whom I have come into contact."

Miss Ellis will go to Montgomery the week of the 27th for a conference of welfare workers, juvenile court judges, school attendance officers and superintendent, planning to take up different phases of the work before the opening of schools.

The many friends of Miss Ellis will regret to learn that she will leave Chilton County. She is specially trained for the work she is engaged in, and it is unfortunate that we can not retain her in this important position.

Mosquito Control Is Getting Results

Many Breeding Places Here In Clanton Have Been Destroyed

A fine measure of progress in the mosquito control program in Clanton and community is reported by Mr. G. D. McKinney, director of the work, who has recently succeeded Mr. Matthews in that position.

We have literally destroyed millions of mosquitoes right here in Clanton during the past week, Mr. McKinney stated Tuesday. He reports finding many mosquito breeding places right in the business section of town where people have not heretofore thought to look for them. According to Mr. McKinney, conditions around Clanton with respect to mosquito infestation, will be very different in a short time, if the people will give the proper degree of cooperation to him and his workrs.

It is pointed out that water containers on the graves at the cemetery in Clanton has been found to be one of the most prolific breeding places for mosquitoes. Barrels have been found at many places literally full of mosquitoes or wiggle-tails. Many concrete pools have been found infested, as well as hundreds of old tin cans and various water containers at junk yards.

MRS. E. B. DEASON DIED ON SUNDAY

Will Be Buried at Verbena at Three o'Clock This Afternoon

Mrs. Alice Strock Deason, wife of Hon. E. B. Deason, former Probate Judge of Chilton County, died at noon last Sunday at her home in Boulder, Colorado.

The body will be brought back to the old home at Verbena and buried this afternoon (Thursday,) with Martin in charge.

Funeral services will be held at the Verbena Baptist church at three p.m.

Mrs. Deason is survived by her husband; two sons, William E., age 23 and Charles S., age 21; one sister, Mrs. M. K. Prescott, of Indianapolis, Ind., five brothers, John A., William H., Judson and Dr. C. S. Strock of Verbena, and S. J. Strock of Birmingham.

Mrs. Deason was born in Verbena September 30, 1878. After her marriage to Judge Deason on September 7, 1909, she lived in Clanton until September, 1918, when the family moved to the West on account of the health of her husband.

While she lived in Clanton Mrs. Deason took a leading part in the activities of the Clanton Baptist church, and always exercised her good influences in behalf of civic affairs. She was loved and admired by all who knew her.

The Strok family is one of the pioneers in Chilton County. They settled at Verbena in 1825. Direct connections extend to the Johnson, Gowan and Mullins families of Clanton.

We have no way of knowing how many are coming and do not know how many to prepare for, so you will have to bring a picnic lunch with you.

The purpose of this "Homecoming" is to give an opportunity for all former residents of the home to meet, and to better acquaint the Masons and Eastern Stars of the State with the wonderful work they are sponsoring in caring for the unfortunate Masons' widows and orphans.

We expect to have during the day various forms of entertainment, consisting of band music, a pageant, and oustanding speakers.

If you have any donations that you would like to make to the home you may bring them at this time.

Moulton Pastor To Appeal Case

Sentenced to Life Imprisonment On Charge of Killing

Moulton, Ala., Aug. 19.—Facing a life term in prison for the slaying of Frank Pickens, 82-year-old deacon of his church, the Rev. L. P. Royer, Baptist minister, waited in his jail cell here today while his counsel laid plans for an appeal.

The minister was convicted by a Lawrence County jury late last night on a charge of first degree murder and his punishment fixed at life imprisonment.

Collapsing when the jury read its verdict, Mr. Royer today was reported able to move about his cell after being treated by a physician last night.

Judge W. W. Callahan is to pass sentence tomorrow and filing of an appeal motion from the jury's verdict is scheduled at that time, S. A. Lynne, of defense counsel, said today.

The jury deliberated less than three hours before finding that the minister killed Pickens on a highway near Moulton on July 23 while the deacon was en route to town on a mule.

The minister, testifying in his own defense, denied any connection with Pickens's death and his son, William, 14, who the state said was with the pastor in an automobile when the deacon was slain corrobrated his father's testimony that they did not see Pickens on the day he was slain. The minister said he and his son were picking black berries.

The state introduced testimony regarding a quarrel between Pickens and the minister which followed the deacon's request that Royer resign as pastor of the First Baptist church and also presented testimony of Aileen Sharp, a negro girl, who said she saw the minister level a shotgun at Pickens while the two were talking on the highway.

The girl said she fled from the scene and that a moment later she heard a shot fired. Other state witnesses testified to having seen the minister near the slaying scene.

The minister appeared to be calm throughout his trial but collapsed when the jury brought in its verdict.

County Farm Agent's Notes

IRISH POTATOES FACE A MOST SERIOUS PEST

The Irish potato industry of Alabama faces the most serious pest ever found in the state, declares B. P. Livingston, chief of the plant industry division of the state department of agriculture who reports that the Irish potato tuber moth has been discovered in Cullman and Jefferson Counties and that seed potatoes containing these moths have been scattered in some other north Alabama counties.

The moth was brought into Alabama on seed potatoes shipped into the state from Hastings, Fla.

Mr. Livingston and Commissioner Storrs are calling upon all seedmen and potato growers of the state to cooperate with the department in exterminating this pest. The agriculture department has several men out scouting the northern part of the state loooking for seed potatoes infected with the moth. As fast as the potatoes are found they are condemned and destroyed.

The larval or worm stage of the moth bores through the potato and makes it unfit for human consumption. It also destroyes the germination qualities. The moth not only attacks the potato under ground but it also works upon the plant above the ground. There are four stages of the life history of the insect, namely: the egg, lava or work, pupa and adult.

WINTER LEGUMES ARE THE BEST COVER CROPS

Auburn, Ala.—Actual experience has taught Alabama farmers that winter legumes—hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas—are the most profitable winter cover crops for farmers to plant, advises the Alabama Experiment Station.

"Vetch and Austrian peas should be planted either during the last half of September or the first half of October," says Dean M. J. Funchess.

"Hairy vetch should be drilled at the rate of not less than 20 pounds of seed per acre and winter peas at the rate of not less than 30 pounds per acre.

"Both these legumes should have a liberal applications of phosphate at planting time. Apply super-phosphate at a rate of 400 pounds per acre, or the equivalent in basic slag. Basic slag may be mixed with the seed and inoculating soil and put through a fertilizer distributor, but super-phosphate may kill the inoculation if used in this manner. Basic slag also contains lime which has been shown very beneficial to winter legumes.

"Hairy vetch and Austrian peas must be inoculated if being grown on the land for the first time."

BANKHEAD ACT WILL NOT DELAY GINNING

Auburn, Ala.—Under arrangements worked out by the State Allotment Board the Bankhead act will not delay the ginning of cotton in Alabama this fall.

The Board has sent interim or temporary emergency tax exemption certificates into all south Alabama counties to permit farmers to gin their cotton as fast as they get it picked. Board members express the belief that they will be able to distribute the exemption certificates to north Alabama counties before cotton picking time; however, if they find that they cannot they will also send interim certificates into that section of the state.

Under the temporary arrangement each farmer can gin, under oath, about one-half his estimated allotment.

FARMERS ADVISED TO SAVE EVERY FALL PIG

Auburn, Ala.—"Save every pig farrowed this fall," advises F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist, Auburn.

"With an abundant feed crop in prospect all over the state farmers should save every pig farrowed this fall to help consume it. Hogs are our best market for much of our feedstuff and surplus pigs will be in demand all over the state," says Mr. Burns.

County agents of the state are also advising farmers to save all their fall pigs. The agents have important suggestions to give farmers about handling sows which are to farrow in near future.

Ex-Sheriff John L. Gore, of Beat 12, was among the visitors in Clanton Monday.

CHEVROLET PRICES HAVE BEEN REDUCED AS MUCH AS $50

Drive it only 5 miles and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car

CHEVROLET The exceptional popularity which Chevrolet has enjoyed for many years has naturally had its effect on Chevrolet prices. Large sales have enabled Chevrolet to maintain consistently low purchase prices, which were recently lowered even further. As a result Chevrolet now offers you the lowest priced six-cylinder automobile obtainable—a big, comfortable car with Fisher Body styling and refinement—safe, weatherproof, cable-controlled brakes—the smoothness and economy of a valve-in-head, six-cylinder engine—and typical Chevrolet dependability. In offering this car, and the Master models, at substantially lower prices, Chevrolet hopes to repay the motoring public in some measure, for consistently placing Chevrolet so high in public favor.

OHIO 4-H GIRL WINS AN AUTO ON 111-WORD STORY

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Miss Marcella Rhoades, 4-H Club girl of West Mansfield, Ohio, is winner of the first of three Plymouth 4-door De Luxe sedans which are being given to 4-H Club members of the United States in a short story contest conducted by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work in cooperation with the Chrysler Motors Exhibit at A Century of Progress.

She did by writing a 111-word story on what she would do with such a car, should she win one, to advance 4-H Club work. Her story reads:

"Many boys and girls cannot belong to a 4-H Club as they have no way of getting to the meetings. With a Plymouth car I could take them to meetings and other 4-H activities. I would be able to give special attention to crippled boys and girls. I would plan 4-H projects to fit their needs. I would take my own club in the car to give entertainments to shut-ins. As a community service I would load the car with fresh vegetables and fruits and with the help of my club, can them for the needy. I would help promote a 4-H program for young people aged 21 to 35 years."

Miss Rhoades is 18, and has been an outstanding club member for 6 years. She won first place on a complete school girl's outfit at the National Club Congress in Chicago.

Stories were deposited at the Chrysler Motors building at the World's Fair personally by club members from 15 states in the contest for the first car. A second car will be awarded Club members after August 15, and the third one after September 1. A car will be awarded the best story deposited by a local 4-H Club Leader previous to August 10, and another after September 1. Stories must be written on coupons which may be obtained from local leaders or at the 4-H booth at the Chysler World's Fair Building.

CHEAHA WATER RESERVOIR IS THE HIGHEST IN STATE

Montgomery, Ala.—The highest impounded water in Alabama is in the reservoir constructed by the men of an emergency conservation work camp on Cheaha State Park, according to data established by the engineers of the Alabama Commission of Forestry. Cheaha Mountain on which the park is located reaches an altitude of 2,407 feet above sea level. The masonry dam of the reservoir is at an altitude of about 2,150 feet.

The park developments planned by the commission of forestry include the construction of cottages and other facilities for the use of visitors and recreationists. The problem of a water supply was quite acute until it was determined that this lofty watershed was of sufficient extent to permit of a storage of several hundred thousand gallons when impounded in the rocky basin now converted into a reservoir.

Mrs. J. C. Page and her daughter, Peggy, spent last week as the guests of relatives in McMinnville, Tenn.

MANY FAMILIES ENROLLING IN THE TVAC PROGRAM

The Tennessee Valley Associated Cooperatives, an agency of TVA, has launched nine cooperatives and prepared plans for an additional four, Arthur Jackson, manager, of TVAC, announced today in giving his annual report to the Tennessee Valley Authority board of directors.

In explaining the work of the TVAC, Mr. Jackson said: " Families enrolled as members total 1,953 and 3,750 more are expected to join the going cooperatives by the end of the year. The four projects awaiting approval provide opportunities for 2,150 additional families. Most of the cooperatives are in mountain communities where distress ante-dates the depression and where as high as 70 per cent of the families were on relief or on the borderline. The cooperatives, encouraged and inspired but not created by TVAC, seek rehabilitation; not relief.

"TVAC received $300,000 FERA money on March 12. It had appropriated $87,750 of which $25,754.12 had been allocated by June 30. All advances are loans, not secured by lien, but insured by TVAC control of management and books and by the moral fibre of the aided populations. Extreme care in analyzing suggested projects from the point of view of need, feasibility, and type best suited to the locality has been exercised. The Cooperatives now under way are estimated to yield $166,000 additional income to members during 1934 and $571,400 during 1935, the first full year of operation. Most of the income is to come from products hitherto wasted. Fruit, berry, and vegetable canning; seed potato cultivation, flour grinding, dairying and handicraft textiles are the leading activities."

MT. SPRINGS NEWS

We had a good report for our Sunday school last Sunday, and a good crowd out for the morning preaching services. There was one addition to the church Sunday morning, Jr. Lily, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lily, and was baptized Sunday evening at six o'clock at the Mt. Springs pond. We went from the baptizing to the Christian Endeavor and preaching services. The crowd was rather small on account of the rain, but we had an excellent program and a grand sermon by our pastor.

There will be a singing here on Wednesday night. Everyone is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Rutherford and children were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Giles Sunday and also visited Mr. and Mrs. George Kilgore.

Mrs. Betty Williamson and granddaughter, Mary Edna Giles, arrived home Sunday after spending a week at Ft. Deposit, Ala., visiting relatives.

We were glad to see Mr. Robert Gentry out after being so sick last week.

We hope our Bible Class teacher, Mr. Johnnie Plier, will be with us again soon for we miss his good work.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carroll were visiting in this community last Sunday.

LETTER FROM R. I. VARDEN

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you please give me space in your paper to say a few words about my condition?

I have a tolerable fair crop, but that is all. I am in a bad shape. I was struck with paralysis the third day of this month in my left side.

I am not begging. I thought if I had any friends and they felt that they wanted to and that it was right to help me a little. If they don't, it will be all right.

I am in my 70th year, and it is the first time I ever called for any help. My son Ollie is here staying with me to help me up and down. He is 24 years old. He can't get out to make any arrangements.

He took pity on me and stayed with me. I am just like a helpless baby, can't help myself at all, and I sure will appreciate anything that anyone could do for me.—R. I. Varden, Clanton, Ala., Route 6.

Strange as it seems, the unprecedented drouth in the West this year is apt to act as a deterrent to those who have been industriously demanding monetary inflation for the United States during the past several months. Of course, the drouth has added greatly to the number of the critics of the AAA farm policies. Many of these critics have gone so far as to say that nature is punishing us for the plowing under of crops and destruction of pigs last year. To the answer that the drouth would have destroyed the crops anyhow they respond that, even with the drouth, many parts of the country have fairly good crops this year, and that had it not been for the crop reduction program, these sections which have been favored with rain, would have raised enough to have taken up a part of the slack in the dry weather districts.

Be that as it may, there is some evidence that the drouth is going to have a drying effect on the inflationists, strange as this may seem at first thought. The reason is that the loudest demand for inflation has come from the farm belt, where it has been asserted that we needed the price level of 1926 to bring the farmers back to where they could begin ot break even again. But the drouth has started us on the way to 1926 prices and there are some economists who believe that, if the dry weather continues, the 1926 price level for farm produce may be reached and passed before the winter is over. With this prospect in view, the demand for inflation loses a great deal of its impelling force. If inflation was needed to lift prices to their 1926 level and Dame Nature is going to do this anyhow, then why "monkey" with inflation? so its opponents ask.

The fact is that a great many people are beginning to fear that, even without the imaginary benefits of inflation, there is going to be a great deal of hardships among the salaried and working classes in our cities and towns this fall because food prices will be so high. With this prospect imminent it is difficult to see why there should be any reason for flirting with the idea of inflation. For the first effect of inflation is artificially higher prices for commodities. This is usually followed by a fever of speculative buying which looks like prosperity, and this in turn by a collapse which brings ruin and suffering to all except the gamblers in the stock and commodity markets. And if the weather man is bringing higher prices for commodities without the dangers of inflation, why take a chance on artificial remedies? That is a question which a great many leaders of public thought are asking themselves, and the answer is apt to have a deterrent effect on the inflation propaganda.

The AAA economists told us last year that lower production was necessary to bring the farmer out of his troublec. We are about to see this theory put to the test. Certainly there is lowered production this year. It will be followed by higher prices and lessened demand, and whether it will "do the job" for the farmer remains to be seen. The trouble is often when prices are high the farmer has little to sell and there are fewer people who can buy and, of course, you can't sell what you don't possess. Perhaps, after all, it would have been sounder procedure to encourage the people to buy by free competition and attractive prices rather than by restriction and higher prices. The next few months will tell the story.

WERE THEY STRONGER?

The troubles we have been going through the past four years wouldn't have discouraged our fathers and grandfathers a quarter as much as they have us. Were they made of sterner stuff or have we been coddled too much? They went through tough times without government aid and didn't have the government to tell them to plow under a third of the crop, kill the pigs and cows, but by hard labor worked themselves out of what we now call a depression. They didn't call it depression but danged hard times.—Stillwater, Minn., Gazette.

As the President passed through the drouth district he noticed signs bearing the inscription "You gave us beer, now give us water." He was quite frank to say that the water problem was much more difficult since it was not one which could be controlled by human agency. But perhaps Mr. Roosevelt is too pessimistic in the matter. We have a hunch that the Brain Trust will find the solution of the problem of making it rain when it should. In fact we would be willing to bet a dollar to a doughnut that all Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel has to do is to take his piece of chalk in hand and write H2O, and there you have it—Water!

A Criticism and A Creed

(Reproduction of an Editorial by William Randolph Hearst in the Atlanta Georgian.)

President Roosevelt has a complicated and highly technical job to perform.

We all want to help him in every way.

The question merely is what is the best way to help him?

There are, perhaps, two ways:

One way is to approve everything that he does regardless of whether we believe it to be right or wrong.

The other way is heartily to applaud everything we think is beneficial, but to debate policies we believe to be harmful and try logically to convince him that he should pursue a different course.

There is something to be said in favor of either way of helping Mr. Roosevelt, but for a newspaperman it would seem that the only honest way is the second way, the discriminating way.

Mr. Roosevelt may not pay a great deal of attention to the newspapers, but he may pay some attention to them.

And, if the newspapers mislead him, they are not helping him and, what is even more important, not helping the country.

There can be no proper question of Mr. Roosevelt's purposes. The only intelligent criticism would be of his methods.

Is he taking the right way to put his good intentions into practical operation?

To begin with, has he the right kind of sound and sincere, capable and experienced men around him?

If you are ill, you get the best and most practical doctor or surgeon that you can find.

If you want your house strengthened or beautified, you get the most competent and experienced architect or engineer that you can find.

If you even want your plumbing attended to or your dog doctored, you get competent and experienced people to do it.

Why not apply that principle to politics?

Why call in a lot of visionary theorists and let them experiment with serious situations? Why say, "Well, if these plans do not work we will try some others?"

Are the other plans to be furnished by the same visionary theorists?

We cannot experiment too much with ANY important situation.

We cannot be like the aviator who bought a parachute.

"Suppose this blame thing doesn't work?" said he.

"Oh, bring it back and we will give you another," replied the seller.

We cannot always bring the parachute back.

We are not always in a position to try "some other plan."

If inexperienced surgeons cut off the wrong leg, they may be willing to try another experiment on the other leg, but that does not help as much or give us our legs back.

Moreover, at the rate our government is dissipating the country's resources and putting us into debt, we will not be able to try another and more practicable plan.

After the visionary theorists have exhausted our Treasury and destroyed our credit, we will have to spend the rest of our lives paying for their failure.

A practicable plan NOW is what we want—not a lot of visionary theories now and a practicable plan when it is too late.

And you men who are working on the roads need the practicable plan for PERMANENT benefit just as much as the businessmen do.

President Roosevelt's illustrious namesake and predecessor once wrote to a captain of industry: "You and I are practical men."

There was no just criticism of that expression, no proper complaint of the idea it conveyed.

We all want practical men at the head of business and industry and particularly at the head of the nation's business.

We want honest men, but practical men.

We want practicable plans for the conduct of the nation's affairs and for the improvement of our individual conditions.

What do we mean by a practical plan?

According to the dictionary, "practicable" means "workable."

That is what we need—not visionary and sometimes revolutionary theories: not impracticable and sometimes unpatriotic experiments, but homely, American, workaday, workable, practicable plans.

Fantastic innovations are of dubious value.

Good intentions are not sufficient in themselves.

An old proverb says: "The road to hell is paved with good intentions."

We may be full of good intentions and still be on the road to hell.

Sometimes it looks as if we were.

The sublime self-confidence and self- satisfaction of the theorists are not altogether reassuring.

They suggest too much the old story of the pilot who took charge of a ship to steer it into a safe harbor.

"Do you know the channel thoroughly?" asked the captain.

"You bet I do," said the pilot. "I know every rock in the harbor."

"There," said he as the ship struck, "there is one of them now."

You and I, fellow citizens, are practical men, and we want practical pilots.

We are like the man who was engaging a chauffeur for his automobile.

"How close can you go to the edge of a bridge?" he asked the candidates for the position.

"Oh, within about a foot," said one.

"Maybe within an inch," said another.

"I don't know," said a third. "I always keep on the safe part of a bridge."

"You are engaged," said the owner. "I don't want any chauffeur making dangerous experiments with my property and my life."

Fellow citizens, maybe we, too, want chauffeurs who will stick to the safe part of the bridge—the good old American part which has carried us safely over so many depressions for so many years.

Maybe, if we get too close to the experimental edge, we may go over and into the stream. Then it might be too late to "try another plan."

I do not write as a reactionary—good Lord! Think of what the reactionaries have called me in my day.

I am not even a conservative, unless a conservative is one who desires to "conserve" American principles and institutions.

I am definitely progressive, but a practical progressive like dear old Theodore.

I was a progressive before Franklin D. was born.

I advocated the remonetization of silver; and when the reactionaries took their advertisements out of my papers, because I was supporting Bryan, I thanked them and told them they had given me that much more room to support Bryan in.

I advocated the election of Senators by the people and the direct primary.

I advocated woman suffrage; and, in fact, I have in the past fifty years of my newspaper activities supported every sound progressive man and measure before the American people.

My father before me was a progressive. His only creed was "the public good."

My mother's creed was "public education" and "human sympathy."

I would not sacrifice one jot or tittle of those principles. In fact, I am so devoted to truly American ideals that I want to be sure that we are attaining them and retaining them through practical American men and means.

I want to be sure that we are preserving the American principles and the American methods my forefathers and your forefathers labored to create.

I am positively a progressive, but primarily an American, and I do not believe in radical revolution, either in theory or in the un-American practice of minority rule by force and violence.

I and every other progressive believe in the welfare of the workers.

We believe in good wages and good working conditions.

But we believe, too, that the American industries and industralists that have given American labor the highest standards of wages and of living in the world are also worthy of the consideration of enlightened government.

These industries and industrialists should be appreciated and encouraged to further achievement for the benefit of labor and for the advantage of the whole people.

They should not be discredited at home and abroad by unfair accusation which can justly apply only to a miserable few.

I am a militant progressive, and I do not believe in protecting crooked businessmen any more than I believe in protecting crooked politicians.

Yet I do not believe in holding crooked businessmen up to America and the world as typical examples of American national life.

Put the crooks of all classes and conditions in jail. Put more of them in jail. Put all of them in jail.

But encourage honest business and stimulate honest businessmen.

That is the best way to create national prosperity and the only way to create permanent employment.

I stand solidly for proved American practices and policies and principles.

I am opposed to revolutionary theorists.

I am averse to inexperienced surgical experiments on the vital parts of our industrial anatomy.

I am equally averse to ill-considered architectural experiments on the foundations of our American house and home.

I do not even think it helpful to tinker unscientifically with the political plumbing or wise to try fool theories even on the dog.

Anyhow, I prefer a good dependable domestic dog to any unbalanced, speculative political theorist, and I wish our good President would get rid of his revolutionary Communist advisors and unpractical, un-American experimentalists while we still have money enough left to feed the dog.—William Randolph Hearst, in the Atlanta Georgian.

THE PEOPLE WANT TO KNOW

Wherever you go are groups, large and small, discussing economic conditions, government and taxes.

The American people are asking questions that are increasingly awkward for politicians and brain trusters to answer.

When American people ask questions they usually find answers.

They want to know why it costs so much to govern us? Why so many politicians and political jobs? How much is spent in crime prevention? How much is spent in regulating non-criminals? How impoverishing the rich will enrich the poor? How limiting production will increase the country's wealth? How increasing prices benefits the poor? Which adds most to the world's progress, muscle or brain?

If our unemployed cannot find jobs producing necessities because of over-production why can they not be put to work producing luxuries on a quantity basis to trade for the necessities they require? Where the brain trusters got more brains than we have? What can we do about it?

The next organization may be one of taxpayers and they can answer that question.

Does the government possess the best brains in the nation? Is it more demagogic than honest? Has human nature changed lately?

Do we belong to the government or does the government belong to us?—Frank A. Garbutt in Los Angeles Times.

A certain editor in a nearby town has moved his press over against the door and is having his meals sent in at the window since he let this get in a society item: "Mrs. Catt's popularity is evidenced by her mangy friends in this vicinity."—Altoona, Kan., Tribune.

BRAIN TRUSTERS TAKE NOTICE

Beginning last December, Western railways covering 134,000 miles started an experiment with reduced passenger fares. There was to be a trial of six months. The time has now been extended for a year and a half.

After a lapse of nearly eight months the companies are able to measure results of their experiment. It has proved satisfactory to the railroads and to a much greater degree to the public.

For the first six months' period the number of passengers increased almost 33 per cent. Mileage traveled gained more than one-quarter compared with the corresponding period of last year.

And the railroads earned 4¾ per cent more revenue. Cheaper fares thus appear to be in the nature of an excellent bargain for companies and for customers.

Is this not a good hint for the Brain Trusters who seem to think that boosting prices of commodities will produce a return of prosperity? Their theories have failed in all directions to yield promised results, whereas, this railroad experiment with a definite reduction for a commodity price has brought home the bacon.

The difference, of course, is this: Professors deal only in theories, while hardboiled railroad presidents must handle facts as they find them.—Philedelphia Inquirer.

Professor Lerner, speaking before the Summer Institute for Social Progress in Massachusetts, said that the Roosevelt "honeymoon period of drifting along hopefully" is now over.

The professor probably thinks the time has come when we will have to stop gazing at the New Deal moon and try to figure out where the money's coming from.—Philadelpria Inquirere.

NAPOLEON LAURELL

There are many interesting and appealing facts about the life and career of Mr. N. Laurell, whose death occurred suddenly at his home in Thorsby about a week ago.

Mr. Laurell was born in Bruzaholm, Sweden, July 26, 1861. He lost his mother at the age of four, and lived with his father's parents until his father brought him to this country at the age of six and a half years. He lived in Chicago until the age of eleven, witnessing the great Chicago fire. His father re-married and moved to Marseilles, Illinois, where he grew to manhood and received his education in public and private schools.

In 1906 he came to Birmingham, being identified with the Schaeffre Manufacturing Co., of this city. The next year his family came to make their home there. He became a member of the Congregational church of Birmingham, whose pastor at that time was Dr. Geo. Bates, to whom Thorsby is greatly indebted in a large way for the establishment of the Thorsby Institute.

In 1913 Mr. Laurell accepted a position as manual arts instructor at the Central High School, Birmingham, which is now Phillips High School. He remained in that capacity for over twenty years. Over a year ago he resigned and retired to his home in Thorsby, where he planned to spend the rest of his life quietly.

He was a member of Thorsby Congregational church; a member of Birmingham Lodge 757, A. F. and A. M.; Cyrene Commandery Knights Templar; the Shrine; and Epsilon chapter, Iota Lambda Sigma fraternity.

TWO CONSTITUTIONS

The United States has two Constitutions, according to T. Scott Offutt, distinguished jurist and judge of the Maryland State Court of Appeals. One of these is a written constitution and the other is unwritten and sanctioned only by the will of the people, according to Judge Offutt, who says, in part, in an interesting article on "Our Two U. S. Constitutions," in the current issue of the National Republic:

"In theory the three great divisions of the power of the state, executive, legislative and judicial, are equal and coordinate. In fact that is fiction. Each in turn has had its day of supremacy, swelling or waning with the strength of the men who used the power. In the beginning through the genius and force of Marshall for a time the judicial division was supreme; later through the grim ferocity and ruthless fanaticism of such men as Stevens the legislature was supreme, and finally when the executive power was in the hands of such leaders and masters of men as Lincoln, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson, it overshadowed the other branches. Nevertheless until late years the predominance or subordination of one or the other of the three great divisions was casual, transitory and fortuitous. And while since the Civil War there has been a constant spread and growth of executive power at the expense of the judicial and legislative branches of the government, it did not until recent years seriously disturb the balance of the system erected by the federal Constitution. Nevertheless there has persisted the age-old ceaseless struggle between man and the state, between the democracy of the West and the despotism of the East, between socialism or communism on the one hand, and individualism on the other, between a government of law and a government beyond the law, in which the advatage has heretofore been increasingly with the state, and the gap between the written constitution and the actual constitution has been steadily widened. As an inevitable incident of that process as the rights and privileges of the individual were absorbed by the state, so also all the powers of the state tended to become more and more concentrated in the executive department thereof.

"So there has emerged the second great trend in the evolution of our government, the subordination of its legislative and judicial branches to the executive.

"Keeping step with the demolishment of the remnants of state sovereignty and the disappearance of limitations on the power of the state, the power of the executive has grown until now it subordinates the other branches. The growth has neither been steady nor continuous, but nevertheless that branch of our government has kept what it gained, and as opportunity offered taken more.

"In a country so extensive as ours, and so diverse in the character and nature of its inhabitants, resources, trade, industry and commerce, the importance of that development upon our form of government is far more real than apparent. Perhaps the bitterest controversy of the Constitutional Convention was the protection of the small, poor, weak and remote states against the interests and demands of the wealthy, populous and powerful, and its approval by the small states was only secured because their peoples believed that by the provision for equal representation in the Senate they received that protection. And so long as the legislative and executive branches were equal and coordinate, each supreme in its own sphere, their confidence was justified. But as it rarely happens that the executive will be taken from any but wealthy and populous states, the influence of such states in the national government must increase and that of the weaker states decrease in the same ratio as the power of the executive increases.

"The natural and logical result of such a policy is to give to states, sections, factions and interests an influence in the national government proportioned to their voting strength and effective force rather than to any provision of the written constitution."

Those European nations have a lot of money to spend for propaganda but not one penny to pay on what they owe Uncle Sam.

CRACKS DOWN

The New Jersey tailor who wanted to fix his own price for pressing a pair of pants and the New York grocer who sold bread-and-milk at a bargain have a companion in independence, Mrs. Katheryn Budd, of Brooklyn. Mrs. Budd desires to make artificial flowers in her home, where she can, at the same time, look after her two children.

Until the NRA "cracked down" on her Mrs. Budd earned a fairly good living in this way. To go to a factory to cut and sew the flowers, as the New York State Director of the National Emergency Council insists she must do, would mean spending long hours away from her children, and possibly necessitate the employment of someone to look after them. Mrs. Budd is a widow.

But personal circumstances count little when bureaucrats tangle over a conflict of authority. The State Labor Department, which granted Mrs. Budd's permission to work at home, has objected to the National Emergency Council's interference, and all parties are headed for the courts to thrash out questions of constitutional rights, conflicts of laws, inter- and intrastate commerce. All parties, that is except Mrs. Budd. She sits at home hoping her savings will last out the storm.—Detroit Free Press.

Clanton will be represented by a large party of fishermen at the Alabama Deep Sea Rodeo next week. Those who are registered for the party are Dr. C. O. Lawrence, Barney Burnett, Dick Kemp, George McCain, Loren Smith, Dr. Abernathy, of Moundville, will also be a member of the Clanton party. Dick Kemp has carried a pocket full of fish hooks for the past month in preparation for the event. It is reported that Barney Burnett has been seen digging worms every day for the past week.

Much concern has been expressed about the claim of the State Tax Commission that Chilton County owes the state $11,000 for tax on gasoline that has been used by the county since 1932. The situation is considerably spiked by the charge that the gasoline of the county has been "used indiscriminately for operating county equipment and distributed to individuals for use in private cars." If these charges are justified by facts and the record, those who are responsible for the gasoline business will be brought to strict account by the people of the county.

INTERVIEW WITH A FARMER

1.—"How's things on the farm, Cy?"

"Purty good, I guess; I won't know for certain until I hear from Washington."

"Hear from Washington?"

"Yep. They keep the books. I get a quarterly report on how I've been doing."

2.—How's crops, Cy?"

"Everything looks purty fair, although I wouldn't know very much about 'em."

"You wouldn't know much about 'em?"

"Nope. I don't bother with details no more. You see the government's got a brigadier general, a retired naval officer and a couple of college professors. They've taken all the responsibility off my shoulders."

3.—"Got the old farm paid for, Cy?"

"Shucks! I don't worry about the mortgage no more. Uncle Sam looks after that. I don't even know what the mortgage is. Some day when the government men are around, I'll ask 'em, just for fun."—Industry and Labor.

GOOD IDEA GOES WRONG

Another good idea seems to have gone wrong. It is the one which had to do with the embargo on munitions of war to the fighting little countries of Bolivia and Paraguay. At the time it was proposed Bolivia claimed the action was unfair to her because Paraguay had all the weapons she needed while Bolivia was short on certain kinds. But aside from the fairness or unfairness, the thing hasn't worked anyhow, if we are to believe the reports which comes from South America.

It is said that shipments of all sorts of arms are moving into the war zone from Europe. Explosives are reported to be going as fruits, machine guns as farming implements, and cartridge cases as cases of typewriters. European factories are said to be busy turning out all sorts of munitions not only for South America but for Central Europe and Eastern Asia as well.

Of course our administration was inspired by the highest of motives when it started this arms embargo thing. But a moment's reflection ought to have caused the boys at Washington to ask the question, "How are we going to stop the sale and delivery of war munitions all over the world, when we couldn't even keep booze out of our own country during the days of prohibition?"

If Europe ever gets into a first class war and one of those arms embargoes is proclaimed there will be no more unemployment among the bootleggers and rum runners in the United States and elsewhere. They will all be in the munitions delivery business.

A LETTER

To those Owing Bills for Medical and Surgical Attention:

I have always tried to give you my very best service and I am still trying to do the same; and incidentally, I am expecting pay for such services, except in cases really unable to pay.

Now it is nearing the time most of us can pay if we really try, and I am expecting you to try.

I want to say further that if your bill with me is large and you cannot see your way clear to meet it, come and tell me what you can do, and let's see if we can't come to some agreeable understanding by which a settlement can be made. I will be willing to accept farm produce where I can use it, or give a discount in meritorious cases.

Anyway, let's get on our trading clothes. You settle up, so I can pay the fellow I owe; and let's all start over again, and be better friends than ever before.

You know times would be better if we would all do that. Let's try it and see.

Yours for good service and better times,

Don't forget B. Y. P. U. next Sunday night. We welcome all visitors.—Secretary.

REFUGE NEWS

As next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days, we urge all to attend. There will not be any service here Saturday, but we will have service Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night. The reason why Saturday's service is put off until Saturday night is on account of the conference to be held at old Union Point, and give all a chance to go down there who wish to go. Conference will be held at Refuge Saturday night for the purpose of electing pastor, superintendent, Sunday school teachers and other officers for the coming year.

We are taught that we should always put God first in all things. Ask Him to direct and lead us, especially when we are going to elect leaders to carry on His work. We would not begin to say that we could please God and man every time, but just please God. That is enough. God does not like prejudice in his work. Paul says, "When I would do good evil is present." Let us not look on the dark side of life, but look on the bright side with a smile, and ask God to lead and direct us in the way He would have us to go.

So let us come to these services with a prayerful heart and with a well prepared lesson Sunday. Our subject will be, "The Unchanging Love of God."

Mrs. Mattie Fox spent several days last week with Mrs. Guy Roberts of Calera. Mr. Roberts is having dental work done at the government hospital in Tuscaloosa.

Urge Republicans To Support Ticket

To Readers of the Union-Banner:

Since there is so much being said about Republicans not voting the Republican ticket in November, I am stirred up to want to say a few words relative to what I think is to the interest of the Republican party and to Chilton County as a whole. Recently I noticed an article in the Union-Banner inferring that Judge Reynolds and others would not vote the full Republican ticket. I believe that inference is wholly wrong. I cannot believe that any man with the respect for his party and his people that Judge Reynolds has always shown will even think of such a thing for one minute. He is a life-long friend to me and all of my family, and I have too much confidence in him to believe that he would not do everything he can to elect the full ticket from head to foot.

I want to ask all who may have the slightest idea of not supporting any of the ticket to lay all prejudice aside and be reasonable and let's see what is the best thing that can be done under the circumstances.

As long as my father lived he voted for Judge Reynolds every time that his name appeared on the ticket. I voted for him and Mr. J. D. Collins in the recent primary because I thought they were more experienced and better qualified to fill the places they were asking for than were their opponents, but since they were unfortunate ones, now I am going to use common sense and vote for the next best men and help hold up the hands of the party that has made Chilton County the best rural county in Alabama.

The people in this county are confronted with two things: either a Republican victory and the county continue on and on a progressive county, paying its debts on a cash basis or a Democratic victory with the county forever turned over to the Democrats with debts heaping upon the county every minute. It is now a matter of Mr. Mims for probate judge or a Democrat; Mr. Hughes for sheriff or a Democrat and so on down the line.

It is up to us to take our choice. As for me and almost everyone in my community, we will take the Republican ticket straight, as we have been taught all of our lives. I believe that it is just as important or probably more important that we vote a solid Republican ticket today, as it has ever been. We have eleven important officers to be elected, and I feel sure that the eleven nominated to fill these offices are, as a whole, as competent as any set of men that have ever been nominated.

So far as I know the candidates on the two opposing tickets, the Republicans far, far out-strip the Democratic nominees in experience and general ability to fill the respective offices. What sane reason can any Republican give for not voting a straight Republican ticket? Surely no one is little enough to split his ticket just because he did not get every man he voted for in the primary. There is too much at stake for us to think of taking chances on splitting a ticket now. The destiny of our county depends upon our winning this election. I am fully persuaded that a loss of the Republican ticket in Chilton County now means a loss forever. If our people will stay together as I believe the most of them will, the Democrats have no more chance of electing their ticket in November than a wooden legged man has of winning a foot race.

If we go on nagging and vote for just the men that we voted for in the primary, leaving off the ones whom we did not vote for in the primary, a defeat of the entire ticket is inevitableable. Jesus said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." In unity there is strength. These quotations are just as true today as they ever were. We must get together and win without the loss of one. We can do it, for in the last primary, we outvoted the Democrats more than two to their one. All that is necessary is for each Republican to do his or her part.

I truly hope that every Republican will realize it is his or her duty to go to the polls in November and help win the victory.—Yours for party unity and a complete victory in November.—Mrs. Carrie D. Shaw.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF INSURANCE OF THE STATE OF ALABAMA FOR THE YEAR ENDING DEC. 31, 1933 READS:

"The Burial Insurance law is undoubtedly unsound and unwise in all fundamental respests. And the companies complying with its provisions, and doing no more, are as sure to fail as night follows day, with loss and disappointment to more than 100,000 of our citizens.

"Since companies operating according to this law now have more than 100,000 policyholders whose interests are adversely affected by it, what is the clear duty of the State? Obviously it is to attempt to enact reasonable legislation to correct, if possible, the errors made in this unsound, unwise law."

The Alabama Funeral Directors Association, Inc., has always warned the public against buying burial certificate schemes. Your only SAFE and SOUND protection is to buy Legal Reserve Life Insurance that will pay all benefits in CASH.

This burial insurance law was enacted for the sole benefit of certain selfish interests, and the public's protection is thrown to the winds.

Your insurance department cannot protect you with such selfish laws on the statute books.

THE W. M. U. SERVICE QUILT

The women of Unity and Chilton Associations have long been interested in pretty quilts but they are losing the opportunity to have a part in one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most unique quilts imaginable. Many will remember the suggestions made at the April quarterly meetings about making the W. M. U. quilts. Many of us pledged ourselves to particular tasks to be done for the Master in the next few months that would entitle us to make a block in the quilt. Perhaps we did the service, but somehow we have not started our quilts. Since I have seen some that other associations have finished, and find them so beautiful and so interesting, I thought you might still like to make one.

One association has made five. Many have made two or more. Some seemed not to remember or understand the plan. It is simply this: Each block represents some service done for the Master through the W. M. U. We pledged ourselves to pray before we set out on the task, to learn a new verse of scripture and quote it while doing the work. When we have done the work, we make a quilt square of unbleached domestic, six inches square, and applique a flower on it, any design, morning glory, rose, daisy, tulip, or any other flower.

If we have enlisted a single individual, we should use a solid color, lavendar, for W. M. S., green for Y. W. A., nile green for G. A., blue for R. A., and yellow for sunbeams, pink for new fither. But if you have worked with an orginzation you should make your flower of print.

Let's all get to work. Even one church could make a quilt, certainly a district, most certainly a whole association. It would be fine to quilt it at the next executive board meeting. Get your squares made. It's lots of fun. At the quarterly meeting we will decide what to do with our quilts.—Mrs. S. J. Ezell.

Lesson for August 26

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Hosea 11:1-4, 8, 9; 14:4-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Hosea Preaches God's Unfailing Love.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Shows His Love.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—All for Christ.

Hosea's message was primarily to Israel. The nation was outwardly prosperous, for its height of temporal glory was reached in the time of Jeroboam II (II Kings 14-18). With this prosperity came luxury, immorality, and apostasy. Calf worship and Baal worship were substituted for worship of the true God. With the increase of wealth in our age has come luxury, corruption, and gross wickedness. Hosea's message is therefore a vital one for us now.

I. Israel's Apostasy (Hosea 1-3).

Her covenant relationship with Jehovah was presented under the figure of a marriage. Their spiritual whoredom is symbolized by the example of an unfaithful wife.

1. The marriage (1:1-2). Hosea was commanded by God to take an unchaste woman to be his wife. It was designed to show God's wonderful condescension and love in entering into covenant relationship with a nation of such immorality. The nation had no more to commend it at the time of God's choice than this unchaste woman when Hosea contracted marriage with her.

2. The unfaithful wife (ch. 2). Notwithstanding the wonderful condescension on the part of the prophet in contracting marriage with this woman, Gomer departs from him to consort with her former base lovers. This shows Israel's base ingratitude in their departure from God and going after idols. Sore chastisement fell upon her for her unfaithfulness.

3. The command to love Gomer, the unfaithful wife (ch. 3). This illustrates God's love for Israel.

II. God's Love for Israel (11:1-4, 8, 9).

1. Its beginning (v. 1). It began when Israel as a nation was in its childhood.

2. How it expressed itself (vv. 1-9)

a. In calling it out of Egypt (v. 1) God called Israel out of the bondage of Egypt and brought them into Canaan, the land of freedom, flowing with milk and honey. Such love and favor placed Israel under peculiar obligation to God.

b. He taught Ephraim to walk (v. 3). In spite of Israel's backsliding (v. 2), God is represented as teaching Israel how to walk, even as a father takes his child by the arms to sustain it while endeavoring to walk. God even watched over Israel as parents watch over their children by night.

c. "I drew them with cords of a man" (v. 4). Observe that his drawing was not with a stout rope as used with an unruly heifer (10:11), but a cord such as a man could bear.

d. He took off the yoke from the jaws and placed food before them (v. 4). The figure is of a husbandman lifting the yoke from the oxen so that they could eat.

e. His unwillingness to give them up (vv. 8, 9). In spite of all Israel's sins God was unwilling to destroy them.

III. God's Urgent Call for Repentance (ch. 14).

Notwithstanding their awful sins God urged Israel to turn unto him.

1. Appropriate words of confession were put into their mouth (vv. 1-3).

a. "Take away all iniquity" (v. 2). This is the nation's request to God.

b. "Receive us graciously" (v. 2). This request is accompanied by the promise to worship God on their return.

c. "Asshur shall not save us" (v. 3). They were made conscious that even the strong nation of Assyria could not save them.

d. They will not say any more that their idols can save them (v. 3).

2. Gracious promises given in response to their confession.

a. "I will heal their backsliding" (v. 4). This healing was on the condition of frank and full confession.

b. "I will love them freely" (v. 4).

c. "I will be as the dew unto Israel" (v. 5). This means that God would refresh the nation.

d. Growth promised (v. 5).

f. A pleasant fragrance (v. 7). This is a picture of the restored nation.

3. Idolatry to be abandoned (v. 8).

4. The Lord's ways are acknowledged as right ways (v. 9).

To Preserve the Church

We are not the ones who can preserve the church; our ancestors were not the ones; our descendants will also not be able to do it, he it has been, is still, and will be who says: "I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."—M. Luther.

Needs No Defence

C. H. Spurgeon was once asked if he could defend the Bible. "Defend it!" he exclaimed: "I would as soon defend a lion. Let it out; it can defend itself."

Mr. F. L. Thompson is at the World's Fair.

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

"My pastor never preaches the gospel and I would starve to death if it were not for the gospel I get over the radio." That is what I heard a lady say recently. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation." People are not hearing the gospel from all of the pulpits in this country, but God is raising up men to preach the gospel over the radio. Millions of people daily are hearing the message.

It is the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. It is not education. It is not ethical teaching. It is not social service. It is the gospel What is the gospel? The gospel is a good news story. The good news is that Jesus Christ died on the cross for our sins. When a man realizes he is a sinner the gospel is the best news he ever heard.

Paul said he was glad to have the gospel preached, whatever might be the motive of the preacher. I thank God for the gospel whether it is preacher on the street corner, under a brush arbor, in a tent, in the pulpit, or over the radio. It is not where the gospel is preached that is the power of God unto salvation. I believe in credentials and in decency and in order. But God didn't say if somebody who has credentials preaches the gospel it will save people. He said that it is the gospel which does the business. The preacher is human, but the gospel is divine. Men may resist a preacher, but they cannot resist the gospel without doing it at the peril of their souls.

"43% MORE NON-SKID MILEAGE"

"You're too modest!"

Motorists who got the first G-3's put out—months before the public announcement—say, "You're too modest!" Many of them report 50% to 100% more non-skid mileage. Why, then, do we insist on only 43%? Well, 43% is a definite test-car-proved figure. Very likely it is low for normal use—because the tests which established the 43% average were gruelling: cars speeding up to 50, jamming on brakes, mile after mile, day and night. Very likely most motorists will get more than 43% more non-skid mileage. But we'll string along with 43%—because it's plenty to deliver at no extra cost. Come see the tire that's the talk of the nation.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

The Israelites Safely Pass Through the Red Sea.—After the slaughter of the firstborn, Pharaoh told the children of Israel to depart from Egypt. Then commenced the wanderings of the children of Israel, who spent forty years in the wilderness, before they reached the promised land of Canaan. And the Lord went before the Israelites by day in a pillar of cloud, and by night in a pillar of fire. Pharaoh's heart was hardened toward the children of Israel after their departure and he took his army and pursued them. God instructed Moses to lift his rod and stretch his hand over the Red sea. And the waters of the Red sea parted and they went through on dry land. But when the Egyptians pursued, Moses again stretched forth his hand. "And the waters returned, and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them."—Ex. 14: 28. This illustration is from Merian's story of the Bible engraved in 1625.

Ginners of County Called To Meet 27

Cotton ginners of every county of Alabama have been called to meet in a series of county conferences beginning Monday, August 20, at the request of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. At these meetings a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue will be present and explain provisions of the Bankhead Cotton Control Act as it affects the ginners. In addition to ginners, bankers and business men, farmers and other interested parties are invited to attend.

Many ginners, it is reported, are lacking in information as to the provisions of the Bankhead Act, while others have been misinformed on the subject. The law is really far more simple in operation and easier to comply with than many ginners have been led to believe. Deputy Collectors who will attend the county meetings are thoroughly trained men who recently attended a school of instruction at Birmingham, at which all points of the law were explained by an instructor from the Bureau in Washington. They will be prepared to give a detailed explanation of the workings of the law as it affects the ginner, and to answer any questions.

All ginners are urged to be on hand for these meetings in their respective counties. Under the law, the ginner is responsible to the government for the tax due on cotton ginned by him, and he must file a monthly report with the Collector of Internal Revenue at Birmingham. Ginners should become thoroughly familiar with what is required of them before the ginning season opens in full swing.

For the purpose of enforcing the Bankhead act, the State of Alabama has been divided into ten zones, with a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue stationed in each zone. Each of these deputies will handle the county meetings in the various counties located within his zone. The conferences will therefore be in the nature of get-together meetings of the ginners and the federal tax agent for their county and district. J. W. Pharr chief of the field division of the internal revenue service of Alabama, with headquarters at Birmingham, will have general supervision of the conferences and it is hoped that he will be able to attend many of them.

The conference of ginners of Chilton County has been called for Monday, August 27, at the Courthouse in Clanton at 10 o'clock.

Fall Gardens

Mr. Julian Brown, extension horticulturist, gave an interesting lesson on late summer, fall and winter gardening. Mr. Brown states that good gardens during the spring and early summer are quite common. To grow a good late summer and fall garden is more difficult, but the benefits are proportional.

Many spring garden locations are not satisfactory for the summer and fall gardens. Lowland or where moisture conditions are good is best for summer and fall gardens.

Keep the ground in good shape to work. A loose seed bed is most important at this season. Moisture is the all-important factor in growing any kind of a crop late in the season. Well rotted manure or leaf mold makes the best mulch for this purpose. Cultivation must be very light and only sufficient to keep down the weeds and grass.

Most seed will require deeper planting than for the spring gardening. Plant in a furrow rather than on a bed. Such plants as tomatoes, peppers and cabbage should be planted where they are to grow and thin them rather than transplanting. If transplanting is done plants should be grown in frames and transplanted.

What and When to Plant

The following are some of the vegetables that may be grown, with approximate date of planting for Chilton County:

Beets, from now until September 1; carrots, from now until September 1; radish, from now until September 1; mustard, September 15 to October 1; turnips, now until September; cabbage, plant in September; potatoes, not later than August 20th; tomatoes, plants or cuttings from now until September 1; spinach, September 15 to October 1; tendergreen, from September 15 to October 1; lettuce, now; collards, plants in September; rutabagas, as soon as possible; kale, September; onions, use sets last of September.

Winter Storage of Vegetables

Many vegetables are lost during the fall and winter due to failure to store or improper storage. Farm storage, properly handled, is the cheapest method of carrying over vegetables on the farm. Before any product can be successfully stored it must be (1) mature, but not over-ripe. (2) of good quality (3) free from bruises and other injuries and free from insects or insect injury and diseases.

The main requirement of any successful storage place are (1) proper temperature for the product to be stored (2) proper moisture conditions in the air, and (3) plenty of ventilation.

Any other information needed can be obtained from the county or home demonstration agent.

Mrs. Aaron Dennis, Misses Willie Maude and Delilah Kelley and their mother, Mrs. Kelley, returned last Thursday from a few days visit to friends and relatives in Lake Charles, La. and Beaumont, Texas.

Miss Bettye Petrie and Messrs. Jim Petrie, Charles Ham, of Birmingham and Hal Broadhead of Montgomery have returned to their homes after a delightful house party given by Celia and Lawrence, Jr., Gerald last week.

Mr. Gene Wyatt was among those attending the Fair in Chicago last week.

BRAKES WILL STOP WHEELS BUT TIRES MUST STOP CAR

The old maxim that "brakes will stop your wheels but the tires must stop your car" is becoming increasingly important, in the belief of Mr. L. E. Diefenderfer, local dealer for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

"The ability to stop in time in event of emergency is of paramount importance," Mr. Diefenderfer asserted. "Every motorist should, whether he cares for his own safety or not, have some regard for the safety of others—and old, worn thin, smooth tires are exceptionally dangerous.

"Particularly at this time of year, when school children are on their summer vacation, the automobile driver should be certain that he can stop in time if a child suddenly darts out in front of his car. Smooth tires will skid and will not stop the speeding automobile—and often an accident ending in death or injury and a life of remorse for the driver is the result.

"The only way to insure stopping in time is to have new tires with traction in the center of the tread, where it counts most when a sudden stop must be made. The Goodyear G-3, with gripping diamond blocks in the center of the tread, gives the driver that margin of safety so necessary.

"The new G-3 gives 43 per cent more non-skid mileage due to its new wider, flatter tread and its average of two pounds more rubber in the tread and is the motorist's best protection against skidding accidents," Mr. Diefenderfor concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Searcy were visitors in Birmingham Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Warr and little son, Loyd Curtis, spent Thursday in Troy as the guest of friends. Mrs. Warr at one time taught in the normal school at Troy, and enjoyed being with the faculty for the day.

Mr. Will Cone spent the week end in Prattville with his parents.

Mrs. Jesse Jones and Miss Eloise Jones were visitors in Birmingham on Wednesday.

Miss Margaret Kendrick of Luverne and Mr. W. B. Mills of Miami, Fla. were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Willis Thursday. After lunch the Willises and their guests motored to Birmingham and spent the evening shopping.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 21.—Although civil service examinations have been required for the past three years, Commissioner I. T. Quinn of the Alabama Game and Fisheries Department, has decreed that in the future applicants for places on his field staff must undergo physical examinations and comply with age requirements.

"In order to develop a more efficient warden system in the state department of game and fisheries applicants for a position, when a vacancy occurs on the staff, will be required to undergo a rigid civil service and physical examination," declared Commissioner Quinn.

"In addition to a requisite knowledge of the life habits and biological facts relating to birds, game and fish, applicants will be required to submit to physical examination and attach a medical certificate to their examination papers.

"The minimum and maximum age limits will be 25 to 40 respectively."

Urged To Plant Vetch And Peas

The committeemen measuring and checking land under cotton contract, while in a meeting at Chilton County High School, Clanton, Ala., August 22, volunteered to spend one day in each of their respective Beats in furthering the soil improvement program of the county by spending a day asking the farmers to plant Austrian winter peas and hairy vetch. The date designated as legume day in Chilton County is Tuesday, August 28.

These men will attempt to contact every farmer in their respective districts, and talk to him about planting winter legumes. Make it a point to be at home on this day and hear the facts about vetch and peas..

It is a known fact, proven by years of experimenting and experience by farmers, that one crop of hairy vetch or Austrian winter peas grown on average land and plowed into the soil will double the yield of the following crops from this land. Most of our rainfall in this state during the winter months while, ordinarily, there is no crop on the land, and washes millions of pounds of the most fertile part of our soils away. If a crop of vetch or peas is growing on the land, it will prevent most of this washing.

Livestock like green pasture in the winter and it is good for them. Vetch and oats grown together make excellent grazing during the late winter and early spring months. Take the livestock off about April 1 and later mow a good crop of hay from this same land. Plow the land and plant to soybeans, cowpeas or corn, and get a second crop the same year.

Vetch and oats followed by soybeans, cowpeas or corn will usually double the harvest from the land.

It will soon be time to plant winter cover crops. The farmers should be making arrangements for seed. Seed are scarce this year and apparently the price is going to be higher later in the season. The best time to buy seed or anything else is when it is available at a reasonable price.

Be at home on August 28, and talk to your committeemen about vetch If you miss him, look him up the next day. He has an important message about peas and vetch.

On August 14th in 1919, a group of ladies met at the home of one of the church members and organized a club for the benefit of the church. At this meeting there were 22 members present and 11 new members were received. Down through the years this club has prospered, though not being permitted to meet every time because of the weather.

In 1921 we had 41 members on roll. This club has helped the church in many ways and could do more if more of the people would become interested. In 1930 an estimate was made of how much money had been paid out since the club was organized. The estimation made was $2,486.20.

The 16th of this month the club held its regular meeting, observing its 15th anniversary. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Lawrence Hayes, vice president, Mrs. Leon Popwell, treasurer, Mrs. Bob Smith, secretary, Loutishia Bean and corresponding secretary, Helen Kendrick.

Especially do we urge all church members, both men and women, to come and be present with us on Thursday before the third Sunday of each month. Again we ask your presence and cooperation each month.

CO. HIGH SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

Members of Faculty Listed With Subjects They Will Teach

Next Monday morning, September 3, at 8 o'clock, will mark the beginning of another school year in Chilton County High School. It will not be a formal occasion because it is not the time for it. The main thing every student and faculty member is concerned with, is scheduling his or her work, checking up all irregularities, and getting everything thoroughly organized for the new year. When the school gets started and all get settled down to work, something of the type of work being done will be presented in the form of graphs, charts, maps and other drawings put on the various bulletin boards in the classrooms and corridors, and at this time every parent will be invited to visit the school and observe what we are doing. We really haven't anything to show you the first day.

Below will be found a list of the faculty members and what each will teach:

J. B. Varnell, A. B., Howard College, science.

G. G. Williams, A. B., Howard College, manual arts and Junior boys occupations.

Murphy Bratton, A. B., University of Alabama, history.

J. T. Searcy, Jr., A. B., University of Alabama, mathematics and coaching athletics.

Miss Frances Gulledge, A. B., Judson College, English in High School department.

Miss Margaret Kendrick, A. B., Womans College, languages.

Miss Sarah Colley holds the A. B. degree from Judson College, and will teach Junior High School work.

Miss Virginia Cook, one of the new teachers, whose home is at Roanoke, is a vocationally trained home economics graduate of Alabama College, with the A. B. degree

Miss Alice Brooks, another of our new teachers, from Andalusia, and recently received the A. B. degree from the University of Alabama. Miss Brooks will have charge of Junior High School work.

Mr. G. G. Williams and Mr. Murphy Bratton also are new teachers here.

This is the first time every teacher on the faculty is a full four year college graduate. We feel justly proud of the preparation of each faculty member. Each teacher will also teach the courses in which he majored in college.

We want to take this time to thank very warmly the parents and interested citizens of Clanton and surrounding community for their splendid cooperation and support in the past, and assure you, especially the high school Parent-Teachers Association, that we shall strive everlastingly to do our very best to have a good school and not disappoint you nor your children whom you are entrusting in our care.

In the third game of the elimination series, played Wednesday afternoon, Marbury blanked Isabella, 16 to 0. Marbury drove Turner out of the box in the sixth frame, and continued the barrage of hits off Fulford, getting 19 in all.

POOR TIRES MAY RUIN YOUR HOLIDAY IF NOT REPLACED

A lot of otherwise careful motorists are going to have their holiday automobile trips ruined by having to change tires, in the opinion of Mr. L. E. Diefenderfer, local dealer for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

"Holiday trips are planned and, the day before, the motorist takes his car to the filling station, has the tank filled with gasoline, the oil checked, the battery looked after and tires inflated with proper air pressure.

"However, just putting air in the tires is not enough in many cases. Motorists will start out on their holiday trip on tires that are worn thin—and a double hazard immediately presents itself. Of course, many folks drive a little faster on a trip of this sort in order to reach the destination; and heat, being the enemy of tire life, often takes its toll in the form of a blowout, especially when the roads are hot and dry. Or, if the roads are wet and slippery, danger of skidding is great on tires worn thin and smooth.

"The best insurance against trouble when tires are worn thin and smooth is new tires, tires with traction in the center of the tread, such as possessed by the new Goodyear G-3. The G-3 gives 43 per cent more non-skid mileage, has two pounds more rubber in the tread and has a wider, flatter tread, giving it greater contact with the road," Mr. Diefenderfer concluded.

Albert Adams, operator of a blacksmith shop and grist mill at Cooper, was a visitor to Clanton Wednesday.

MOSQUITO CONTROL UNDER WAY

It is reported by Mr. G. D. McKinney, who is supervisor of the mosquito control project, that insofar as the people of Chilton County understand this work that he has received splendid cooperation. They have found many breeding places and pointed out other probable places, such as cemetery flower receptacles, concrete vats and wells from which people are using water for drinking and other purposes.

It has been suggested as one measure for the control of this mosquito while in the wiggle tail stage is to drop a handful of salt in the well frequently, as this will tend to control them in this stage. We might give this a trial.

Thorsby, Maplesville and Jemison are giving splendid cooperation.

Republican Candidates Condemn Misuse of County Gasoline

Pledge To Give the County The Very Best and Most Efficient Business Administration

To the Republicans of Chilton County:

Your campaign committee and your candidates for county offices, after due consideration of recent charges that gasoline bought by Chilton County for county use has been "used indiscriminately for operating county road equipment and distributed to individuals for use in private cars" feel that it is proper that we should at this time make public expression of our views upon this important question.

While we do not make any charges against anyone, we wish to make the positive and unequivocal statement that we do not in any way condone, endorse or uphold anyone, either private citizen, public official, or county employee who may be found guilty of misuse of the gasoline of Chilton County.

The gasoline business, like all other public business, should be handled by officials and individuals and employes who will administer it in the proper manner intended for the public service. Any persons who may have had responsibility for this business in the past, and who have, in any sense, failed to conduct the same for the public interest must suffer the disapproval of the public for their failure, and we do not hesitate to assert our disapproval of such misconduct at this time, if such alleged misconduct exists.

The Republican party, through its campaign committee and through its candidates, pledges for the future an honest and fair conduct of the gasoline business of Chilton County, as well as every other phase of the public business. We pledge that those who may be found guilty of misuse of authority, or subversion of county property, will be promptly and completely eliminated from the public service at the first opportunity.

Your candidates, each and all pledge to you their best efforts, if elected, to give to our county and our people the very best and most efficient business administration. Those practices and those individuals which may be proven detrimental to the public good will not have our approval.

There has been much criticism of the Commissioners Court in the past few months. Republicans are being pressed and beseiged to vote the Democratic ticket on account of what is alleged to be a bad record of the Commissioners. We do not presume to say whether this criticism is justified by their records or not, but your campaign committee and candidates would remind you that in so far as the Republicans have had opportunity to express themselves, they have already indicated that they want a change in the court. The only member of the present court who was a candidate for re-election, was defeated in the Republican primary.

The Republican party does not endorse inefficiency in the Commissioners Court or anywhere else in the county's business administration. Our policy is to replace inefficiency with competency. Your candidates pledge ourselves to the perpetuation and faithful allegiance to that policy in the future.

Republicans of Chilton County do not have to go to the Democratic party to get good government, nor to correct any wrongs that may have crept into the past. Your nominees in this campaign are the choice of the majority of your party. You are familiar with our views concerning public questions. We are proud that we have the honor to represent and champion the sentiments of the majority of the Republicans of Chilton County.

We pledge you now upon our honor as men that you can depend upon us to put into practice officially the principles which represent the interests and the welfare of the majority of the people of Chilton County. We appreciate the confidence that has been reposed in us, and we pledge that we will not fail you.—Republican Campaign Commitee, M. D. Foshee, Chairman; W. M. Wyatt, Secretary.

Candidates—J. Z. Mims, Percy M. Pitts, Dewey Hughes, W. G. Culp, Akins I. Collins, H. A. Harris, W. T. Bean, J. P. Bean, A. J. Davis, D. S. Robinson, P. M. Marsh.

CONTINUE WORK ON MOSQUITOES

Explanation of Work Is Made By The Director Mr. McKinney

There seems to be some misunderstanding on the part of some of the people as to mosquito control in connection with the dread dengue fever. It is easily realized that to gain a wide span of all mosquito control would involve much more time, labor and expense than this project allows. The main species of mosquito and mosquito larvae that we are concerned with is known as "Aedes Egypti" or the dengue fever relayer. While we realize how fine it would be to be able to extinguish all the relations of the Aedes Egypti, we also are made to realize the impossibility of such an undertaking at this time in connection with this work. It is hoped that through cooperation with our fellow workers and citizens, to be able to gain control over this species of mosquito, thereby halting any further advancement toward an epidemic of dengue fever.

Funds provided by the Alabama Relief Administration are making this drive possible. There have been no cases reported in this county of dengue fever, but several cases have been reported around Birmingham.

We would like to impress upon each resident of Chilton County that unless full cooperation by each of them is given, that the efforts of the field workers and each person connected with the project will be wasted.

It would be quite wise for each householder to inspect his premises for water standing in artificial containers, such as tin cans, milk bottles, old automobile tires and any other receptacles that hold water. This type of mosquito generally breeds in places of this type and do not go more than a few hundred feet from their breeding place.

Dengue fever is spread by the same species of mosquito which carries yellow fever. This is said to be the time of year most suitable for breeding.

Reports from other sections are that dengue is sweeping westward over the country and that only by combined efforts can we hope to prevent an epidemic through our section.

It is said that this disease lasts about 2 weeks and that the symptoms are violent aches and pains throughout the body, accompanied by nausea headache and sometimes skin eruptions.

Again we insist that householders prepare that broken screen we have been putting off from one time to the next, look out for those old shoes, tin cans, etc., that hold water and let's get in line with our state health department and Alabama Relief Administration and keep down a dreadful epidemic of dengue fever.—G. D. McKinney, supervisor of project.

TO OUST NON-WORKERS

Montgomery, Ala. — Taking cognizance of reports that negroes on relief in many counties were refusing employment as cotton pickers, the Alabama Relief Administration ruled Tuesday that all persons who refuse legitimate opportunities to work will be dropped from relief rolls.

"All cotton pickers who are offered employment at picking cotton in their local communities will be expected to accept such employment," said Thad Holt, state relief director. Local directors of relief are instructed to investigate immediately any cases where such employment is being offered and refused and give consideration to this fact in administering relief.

TWO CANDIDATES IN MAYOR RACE

P. D. Wilson Announces In Opposition to C. Fenn Jones

The entrance of P. D. Wilson in the race for Mayor of Clanton last week gives assurance that we shall witness more or less of a contest for that place, as Mr. Wilson will oppose Mr. C. Fenn Jones, whose announcement was made some weeks ago.

Mr. Wilson is so well known that he needs no introduction to anybody in Clanton. He has been identified with business interests here for many years. In making his announcement as a candidate for mayor he said:

"I am offering my services to the people of Clanton as Mayor in response to the request of many citizens who have requested me to get into the race. I only wish to say that the people of Clanton, who have been my neighbors and friends for many years, know of my interests here and of my ability to render a public service to the community as Mayor. If I am chosen by a majority of the people, I pledge to give the very best of my ability. I have never before asked the people to elect me to any office. I have been a citizen of Clanton for a long time, and have always tried to do my part toward the upbuilding of our town. I would appreciate the honor of serving as mayor, and pledge to do my very best, if elected."

The names of Mr. Jones and Mr. Wilson will be the only candidates for mayor on the ticket, as the time for qualification has now expired.

All the old members of the council will appear on the ticket as candidates for re-election. They are H. S. Shaw, W. L. Popwell, L. E. Diefenderfer, J. Watts Moore and Grady Heflin. In addition to these the name of Dr. J. Earle Gowan will appear as a candidate for member of the council.

The date of the municipal election is Monday, September 17.

If you feel low-

don't be discouraged—remember, loss of strength ... sleeplessness ... nervousness ... paleness ... lack of appetite ... and general run-down condition quite often may be traced directly to low blood strength—that is, the red corpuscles and vital oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood are below normal.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

"Success is reaching a goal." That, in substance, is what a prominent writer said recently about success. This may be true, or it may not be true. It depends on what a man's goal is. God has a goal for every life. Success is having the same goal for your life that God has for your life, and working with God to reach that goal.

You can do anything you desire to do. I heard that statement a lot of times. "Desire" is a stronger word than "wish." You may wish you had a million dollars and you may sit and wait for somebody to bring it to you or for somebody to die and leave it to you. When you desire a million dollars you go out and work for it. Desire is wish in action. We cannot always do all we desire to do. We can do whatever God wants us to do. Any man can do anything he ought to do.

God has a will for every life. The complete will of God for a human life may not always be revealed, but there is one thing plain. The Bible says that God wills to save every man. God does not want anybody to go to hell. Hell was not made for man. Hell was made for the devil and his angels. The devil was at one time an angel in heaven. He fell. Hell is his home. We really do not belong there. If we go there we will be intruders. That is what makes hell hell. Every creature in its place is happy. The bird sings in the tree because that is his home. The fish is happy in the water because that is his home. Man will be happy in heaven because that is man's home. Men are wretched in hell because they are homesick. God does not send men to hell. They send themselves to hell. God puts a cross and the blood of His son on the road leading to damnation so man will not go to hell. If any of us go, let's go like men and when we get there let's announce to all the folks we meet that we didn't have to go. We just chose to go. We just would not have God. We would not trust Jesus. We were just mean old sinners.

Dr. Goldner, expert registered optometrist from Brackin's will be in Dr. Hayes' office in the Exchange Hotel Building in Clanton on Monday, Sept. 3rd, hours 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. and on Monday once every two weeks thereafter. Twenty-five years practical experience.

COOPER 4; CANE CREEK 3

One of the best games of the elimination series came on Friday afternoon when Cooper nosed out Cane Creek, 4 to 3.

Sky-Ride Feature At World's Fair

Again in 1934 as it was in 1933 the supreme thrill of the entertainment features of A Century of Progress, the World's Fair at Chicago, is the sky ride.

The soaring steel spires of the sky ride, highest man-made structures west of Manhattan, rise from either side of the lagoon, 628 feet into the sky. The west tower is on the mainland near Soldier Field Stadium at 16th Street. The east tower rises from Northerly Island, nearly 2,000 feet away.

Steel cable overhead tracks connect the towers at the 219-foot level. Gondola-shaped rocket cars, suspended beneath the rails, travel back and forth above the lagoon from tower to tower, affording an unmatched observation ride.

At the top of each tower is an observation platform, from which the visitors can look down on the 424 brilliant colored panorama or gaze out over Chicago's sky scrapers. On a clear day the sand dunes of Indiana and lower Michigan are clearly visible across the lake.

What the Effiel tower was to the Paris Exposition of 1889 and the Ferris Wheel to the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, the sky ride is to a Century of Progress.

Just to look up at the towers that stretch their web of steel toward the sky is a thrill in itself. And at night when thousands of twinkling lights transform the network of steel cables into a mesh of golden strands between the glowing tower tops, the solid structure takes on an air of almost ethereal beauty.

The sky ride's cables compose the world's longest suspension bridges. Full length of the overhead track is 1,850 feet, equaling the span of the Ambassador Bridge that connects the United States with Canada at Detroit. The Brooklyn Bridge in New York has a span of 1,595 feet, and the great Manhattan Bridge has one of 1,470 feet. The Delaware and Hudson Bridge, linking Philadelphia and Camden, has a span of 1,750 feet.

Two sets of elevators take passengers to the car platform and to the observation pavilions on the tower tops. The double-decked, observation cars are suspended from overhead trucks. An endless traction cable draws them across the span, the ride taking about six minutes. There are ten of these cars, painted in brilliant colors.

Each passenger occupies an individual seat and the cars are so constructed as to give an unobstructed view of all directions. The panorama of the blue lagoon far below with its busy traffic of gondolas, canoes, sail and motor boats, the brilliant colors of the great courts and towers of the fair buildings and the background of the immense lake on one side and the immense city on the other is unforgettable. At night, with the unprecedented illumination effects of the fair like a sea of colored light, the view is something for which no previous experience can supply comparison.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ISABELLA

Stop! Look and Listen! Everybody at Isabella and everywhere else. The W. M. S. are going to have an entertainment Saturday night September 1st at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lecroy near Isabella school. There will be cream to sell, a cake walk and other games. So boys, get you a girl and come on, for you know you want to win the cake. We urge everybody to come and help us out, and have a big time.

The government doesn't owe you a thing. The sooner you reach that conclusion the better off you will be. In fact, you are in debt to the government. You owe the government the best service you are capable of. Nobody amounts to anything who goes through life claiming that the world is in debt to him. You get what you earn in this life, nothing more nor less. Everything has its price, and you get it when you pay the price, and must leave it alone if you are not willing to pay.

You are alone in the world. Nobody owes you anything. You must hustle for yourself or you go down in defeat. Neither God nor humanity has any patience with the one who whines or complains. Courage and fearlessness open the doors to the best things in life, and you must have these and bestir yourself if you want the latter.

If business would go straight, politics would go straight, too", says a writer. Yes, and if politics would go straight to where most business men say business has gone it would be O. K. with practically everybody.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

In a recent radio address from Washington, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, of Illinois, issued timely advice to the American people, on our foreign policies. It contained especially timely warning in his period when the scrapping nations of Europe seem to be brewing some new hell's-broth which may at any moment start bubbling over, and when they are seeking by every prapaganda method possible to win the active support of Uncle Sam and so involve our young manhood and our money in any military adventure which may result.

Senator Lewis pointed out that America at the present time has no friends in Europe. That is lamentably true. We never have friends there unless they seek our support to pull burning chestnuts out of the fire. As George Washington well said, there are no such things as unselfish and lasting friendships among nations. Continuing, Senator Lewis said:

"America now is the one land of civilization and advanced institutions wholly separated from any interests in the strife of European nations. We are the one nation exempt of the association in the military combination of foreign nationalities. In this state of independence we must remain—with friendship to all—conflict against none. Here we must rest, firm and fixed in our resistance to ever effort to embroil us in the issues of foreign nations with each other. We must announce and maintain our neutral stand of impartiality.

"I now advise you of the penalty and inheritances of danger which can follow the violations of the precepts of our self-preservation. We behold our real situation as to the European nations. The truth is, that for all our sacrifices in their behalf, of treasury or of blood, we have neither the thanks nor the appreciation of any nation. Indifference or contempt is the only expression we get from our demands for the payment to us of the honest debts due us by these nations we served."

Picturing the burdens that will be shouldered on us if we enter into European leagues or combinations, Senator Lewis well said:

"I beseech you to dwell on the burdens that will be put upon you should you allow yourself to enter into communion of European civil liabilities. Hardly will you have blundered into that companionship when demand from foreign allies will be that America cannot cancel all war indebtedness due us. It will be claimed that this is necessary to establish these inter-conjoining nations upon world equality. Then will follow in glosser phrases the soliciting of more of our money in millions and this demand, smiling suggested, as the agency restoring prosperous enterprise to the foreign land through which it is to 'purchase our goods and enrich our manufacturers and farmers.'"

The words of the Illinois Senator are well worth studying. There is no doubt that every effort is to be made by European nations and by internationalists at home and abroad to get us into some sort of European combination during the next few months. Europe is getting ready for another of those general conflagrations and is only putting it off now, because there is not enough money at hand to finance the necessary military operations. The support of the United States, both economic and physical, is needed. At present we are on the outside and determined to remain there. But the power of propaganda is great, as was demonstrated during the last war. We must refuse to permit ourselves to get heated up over the political differences in Europe and must keep our mind on the troubles at home. This is the only road to safety.

NATIONALIZING SILVER

With the so-called monetary experts disagreeing, both here and broad, on the likely effect of the administration's silver nationalization program, the average citizen can do nothing about it but wait and see. The inflationsts are hailing it as a step toward real inflation, while those opposed to great currency expansion are expressing the hope that the results will not be so inflationary as anticipated in some quarters.

Certainly the issuing of silver certificates on the basis of $1.29 cents an ounce for silver, instead of the basis of a little less than fifty cents an ounce, which the government has been paying for the metal, would not be exactly deflationary, to say the least.

There are some economists, however, who still express the belief that what we want to restore prosperity is more money. They overlook the fact that the banks are now full of money, but our confidence has been so deflated that the conservative business men do not want to borrow and the banks are afraid to lend.

It would seem then that what we want is not more money but a more rapid turnover of the money we already have. It will do little good to issue hundreds of millions more in currency if the money goes right back to the banks and stays there. Just now the government seems the only willing borrower. If we are to get money started to circulating again we will have to restore confidence. That cannot be done by oiling up the printing presses and starting to work on silver certificates. It must come about through the restoration of sound money and balanced budgets, or at least budgets that look like they may be balanced some of these days.

When the confidence does return, the turnover of money will speed up again, and we will have a rising tide of business. Just printing money will not do the trick. After all it is not to be forgotten that most of our business is transacted without money, anyhow.

A Greenleaf man confessed to Ye Ed that he thinks a lot of his children but he also has considerable affection for his dog. "For one thing," he remarked, "the pup has never stood back and considered me with that "Oh Yeah?" attitude when I was attempting to tell him something for his own good."—Greenleaf, Kan., Sentinel.

The best way to wipe out friendship is to sponge on it.

If you don't believe a lot of people have been put back to work you ought to go to Washington and see the way they are filling up those new federal buildings with fresh armies of government employees.

Says an exchange: "We can't understand why the ant acquired such a reputation for being so industrious. Nearly everyone we saw was on a picnic—Yes, but, oh boy, weren't they busy?

HOW ABOUT NEXT YEAR?

We hear a great deal of discussion nowadays about the crop program for the year 1935. It is intimated from Washington that there is a chance the agricultural restriction program of Messrs. Wallace, Tugwell et al may be modified, because of the drouth, to permit the farmers to plant ten or fifteen per cent more in acreage than was contemplated before the drouth came along.

When the drouth first settled down on the West we were told by Washington experts that there was no donger of a food shortage, and there would be plenty for everyone, though the "surplus" might be reduced. But the drouth continued longer than was deemed likely, and now there is a complete change in the picture. Secretary Wallace still says that there will be enough to carry us through although there may possibly be a scarcity of sirloin steaks and porkchops. So far as the chops are concerned, one may be permitted to wonder how many more there might have been in reserve had it not been for the pig destruction program last summer.

This figuring about a ten or fifteen per cent increase, or a limitation in acreage, or something else, looks a little like flying in the face of Providence when one takes into consideration the terrible drouth of this year and the uncertain crop prospects for 1935. Neither Mr. Tugwell or Mr. Wallace knows what is in store for the farmers next year in the way of crop conditions. This is something that even Prof. Mordecai Ezekiel cannot figure out on his blackboard.

What is important to the farmer and the future of America is not the five or ten, or fifteen per cents in restriction or expansion that the Brain Trust is talking about. What concerns us most are the gigantic forces of nature.

Let us remember one thing. In a few weeks it will be time to sow the winter wheat crop of 1935. If the drouth is not generally broken and the ground cannot be properly prepared for the grain, then a condition will confront us which is entirely outside the province of the AAA to remedy. What is most important now is the kind of rainstorms we may have in the next few weeks in the winter wheat country, not the kind of brain storms the experts may have in Washington.

NO ENDORSEMENT YET

One of the frequent statements of those professional statesmen who want to make over the social and economic fabric of America is that the election of 1932 was a mandate from the people to "readjust relationships among our old institutions to overhaul them, to repair them, to make them work if they could be made to work, to modify them when they fail to function and to demonstrate by the old method of trial and error which of these institutions could be readjusted to the new economic environment of the post-war world"—the quotation is from Professor Tugwell, as reported by the metropolitan press.

This may well lead one to wonder just how much of an idea of the present "New Deal" the average voter gleaned from the campaign of 1932. Certainly the platform of the successful party in the election contained no explication of the Brain Turst ideas. This platform contained a pledge to reduce government expenditures by 25 per cent, balance the budget, preserve sound money standards, adopt a competitive tariff law and strictly enforce the anti-trust aws. None of these pledges have been carried into effect. Perhaps it was impossible to carry them into effect. But at any rate it can hardly be said that the election issues were fought out on the program that is now being carried out.

The voters will have a chance to pass on the New Deal idea, to an extent, in the congressional elections next fall. If they vote to support the New Deal then the New Dealers will have the first endorsement of their program.

We understand that the island of Tahiti is being overrun by scientists and that the natives don't like it very well. They should worry. Suppose it were college professors instead of scientists!

COMEDY IN CODES

Representative Beck described "Our Wonderland of Bureaucracy" before the NRA had come into its glory.

If the Pennsylvania Congressman were to rewrite his book now what would he say about this pending incident at Glens Falls:

On somebody's plea the NRA decided that a firm of dealers was underpaying its 125 workers, and an order was issued that the sum of $6,000 should be distributed in cash as back wages due under the prevailing code.

Of course, the employers sought no such ruling.

On the other hand, they reported that, if compelled to make the disbursement, they would have to close the plant and add their employees to the unemployed.

Naturally the workers do not want that to happen.

They have protested that they prefer not to accept the $6,000.

But a code is a code in the NRA.

Consequently, the employes have asked the mayor of Glens Falls to seek an adjustment which will permit the company to remain in business and themselves to remain out of the breadlines.

The code administrators may mean well, but penalizing employers at the expense of the employes is a queer form of benefiting labor. It reminds one of good Corporal Nym's geneial remark to his friend Bardolph:

"I will cut thy throat one time or other, in fair terms: that is the humor of it."

NO BAR HERE

In the recent primary in West Virginia one of the nominees for the United States Senate was a young man by the name of Mr. Rush D. Holt. Significantly enough, Mr. Holt is only 29 years of age and will not arrive at the thirtieth milestone until six months or so after the next Senate goes into session.

The Constitution provides that United States Senators must have among their qualifications an age of thirty years or more. Mr. Holt with all the confidence of youth, makes light of this lack of years. He infers that the Senate, in case he wins in the election, will waive this little matter of age.

We are inclined to agree with Mr. Holt. What is the Constitution among friends, and what are we talking about anyhow? If the reference is made to that archaic paper known as the Constitution of the Unitel States, be it known that that document was a part and parcel of the Old Deal, and has very little standing in these modern days when the government is making us all prosperous and happy regardless of our own efforts or lack of effort.

If we tried to abolish everything today that lacked what was formerly regarded as constitutional qualifications, what would there be left for us to lean on? We might actually have to try to stand on our own feet.

ANOTHER FLY IN THE PUDDING

Just at this time, when our Democratic political leaders were ready to lean back in confidence and put their whole trust in the beneficiencies of the new deal, to carry them to victory without hardly a struggle, it appears too bad that somebody let a foot slip and accidentally dropped a fly into the pudding.

It appears that too many Democratic voters in Chilton County are sore indeed, some even expressing disgust, at the high-handed manner in which, they charge, their rights and wishes have been disregarded by people whom they elected to represent them.

Especially has feeling run high over appointments of postmasters. Some even claim and charge that apponitments have been made through pressure from outsiders, and from outside congressional districts.

This condition of unrest and dissatisfaction among the Democrats seems to be intensified in the north end of the county. The chagrin of some has extended so far that numerous Democrats are said to have expressed themselves as leaning toward future support of the Republican party.

Perhaps this might be taken as a cue by Republicans to dig in for a more firm footing for the next election. While Democratic ranks are in turmoil at certain places it is a mighty good opportunity for Republicans to do a little missionary work in the disturbed places, with perhaps some effective results.

GENEROUS—YES, REALLY ROYAL

Concluding that "Alabama's treatment by the federal government has been generous—yes, really royal," Governor B. M. Miller has addressed an interesting and significant message to the Senators and Representatives of Alabama, declaring that "Alabama should be and Alabama is profoundly grateful" for the new deal.

We quote below the letter of Governor Miller:

"This is to inform you of the gifts to the need of Alabama by the United States Government since March 4, 1933. They aggregate the enormous sum of $40,291,337. An itemized statement thereof made by the Comptroller, Mr. Hard, is enclosed.

"For benefit of unemployed, needy, the gifts to Alabama amount to $22,200,453. Road building in Alabama, to give employment to the unemployed, aggregates the sum of $15,783,975.

"The depression and reduction in Alabama Tax values and income shortened the school terms, and the government generously contributed to this cause to keep the schools running the sum of $2,266,909.

"The federal government, through the Tennessee Valley Authority, is spending millions in Alabama now, developing the water power of North Alabama, and from this source, by act of Congress, the United States has contributed as taxes the first year 5 per cent of its gross earnings, which placed in Alabama's treasury on partial settlement the sum of $40,000. This tax of 5 per cent of its gross earnings will increase as the business of the Tennessee Valley authority develops, and in the course of time will bring millions annually to Alabama from this great and growing agency of the United States.

"This shows Alabama's treatment by the federal government has been generous—yes, really royal. Alabama should be and Alabama is profoundly grateful for it. Alabama will place no blocks in the way of the wonderful works and great plants being now established, constructed and run in our state by the government in the name of the Tennessee Valley Authority for the people of the South."

In his Wisconsin speech the president said that the law of the tooth is ended, and it must be admitted that if the drouth and the depression continue, pretty soon we won't have any need for teeth.

The statement by certain "monetary experts" that the new silver rules will not injure anybody but the bond holders, will of course be good news for those who thought they were doing a fine thing by purchasing Liberty bonds.

Well, with nature and the chinch bugs helpthem the AAA experts seem to be getting some place in cutting down crop production.

THE ALABAMA PRESS SPECIAL

The country editors of Alabama had a very enjoyable outing last week when they took a trip to Chicago and the world's fair. The trip was made over the Illinois Central System in a specially chartered train consisting of nine coaches. This was certainly one of the most enjoyable and enlightening trips the press association has ever had the privilege of taking. Thanks to Roy Brown, the field manager of the association, and Jesse B. Adams, the present, Cody Hall and all other officers who helped make the project a success.

The Fair management was very kind and generous to the editors and the entire party while we were there. Several special features were arranged for the entertainment and comfort of the Alabama visitors, including a luncheon in the administration building, quarters for the beauty contest in the government building, and especially constructed seats permitting the Alabamians to view a parade of the U. S. Marine Band and a detachment of marines. The visitors received special courtesies from the individual places in the fair ground, in that their passes to the century of progress were also honored as passes to these special features. All editors or their representatives were issued passes with their pictures attached, which permitted them to enter or leave the fair as much as they desired.

Pictures of the group were taken as soon as they left the train upon entering Chicago, also while they were seated at the luncheon table in the fair administration building. All editors who wanted one of the pictures was furnished one complimentary of the Century of Progress.

A short business meeting of the Alabama Press Association was held the first day in the mezzanine of the Hotel Sherman, where the group received accommodations during their stay in Chicago. At this meeting the members were favored with short addresses from several notables of the graphic arts industry of the country, including the president of the N.E.A., the president of the Ludlow Company, the president of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Mr. Baumgart of the national graphic arts code authority.

The Press Association is deeply indebted to the management of the Illinois Central railroad, to the Sherman Hotel and to the Century of Progress for the splendid way in which they contributed toward the entertainment of the visitors while we were in their care.

The public debts of Onondaga County, including Syracuse, are approximately $50,000,000.

The state debt is around $500,000,000.

The total public debt of the whole state, including all its local governments, is nearly $4,000,000,000.

The residents of New York State, paying one-fifth of federal taxes, are responsible for somewhat more than $6,000,000,000 of the national debt of more than $30,000,000,000.

Taxes which cover all of these debts must be paid before a penny can be spent for goods.

That is not all of it. The bulk of the taxes are on property, which likewise is encumbered by mortgages of billions of dollars.

The interest on mortgages must be paid before a penny can be spent for goods!

After these charges are paid the consumer families of New York State must buy certain irreducible quantities of food and clothing.

After all of these costs are met, the remainder of our reduced income can be spent for the good which make the wheels of industry go 'round.

It is obvious that there is too little of this margin of income which can be spent. There is to little call for goods, accordingly there is too little demand for freight services, warehouse services, office services and the like.

That is the reason why our unemployment in this country today is concentrated in the durable goods and service fields. The flow of consumer goods is curtailed, the demand does not justify expansion of railroads and warehouses and stores and office buildings.

Somehow or other, the United States must readjust this distribution of income so that there is a greater, livelier demand for consumer goods. Even a diminution of consumer goods demand of 10 per cent will and does afflict the durable goods field severely.

No matter how we look at it, the conclusion is reached that the burden of debt must be reduced in some manner. The burdens of taxes and fixed obligations must be reduced.

That is why, simply, opposition to the administration's program of increasing debts and taxes and other costs on the consumer is growing. It aggregates the trouble instead of overcoming it, especially at a time when foreign markets are shut off and there is no real hope of restoring them.

We must expand America's domestic market by enabling American families to buy more goods.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

INFLATION COMING?

It may be that most of those who disagree with some of the phases of the present recovery program are "Tory obscurantists," as Prof. Tugwell would have us believe. It is hardly likely, however, that even the good professor himself would apply this term to the leaders of the American Federation of Labor when they sound a warning as to what may be ahead unless something is done to cut down our expenditures.

At any rate the American Federation of Labor, through its monthly survey of business, recently issued a warning about the great expenditures of the government for emergency needs, predicting that the artificial increase of buying power may eventually lead to inflation. The report called attention to the steadily increasing tax burden, the increase in government borrowing, the extension of relief rolls and the decrease in business credit and added:

"The government cannot go on borrowing more than its income for very long. We cannot go on increasing buying power in this way without a general expansion of production and consumption. Industry can not pull itself by its own boot straps."

The warning issued by the bulletin is timely and shows that the conservative labor leaders of the country have not been taken in by any promises of a utopia to come through government planning and spending.

If we continue to spend more than we can raise by taxation the time is sure to come, and before so very long, when we will be faced with inflation. Far seeing labor leaders are not in favor of any tampering with our currency. They know that when inflation comes the working man is always the first to suffer and the last to recover. His income can never keep up with the mounting costs and the end for him is bound to be ruin and despair. We want to avoid the perils and sufferings of inflation and if we are to do so, the time must soon come when there is a halt to spending money faster than Uncle Sam can collect it.

The Man on the Corner
Some Sights He Saw— and Some He Saw Not

My good friend, John Martin, of Jemison, hailed me on the corner Tuesday with a hearty handshake and a few words of interest. As usual, Mr. Martin is deeply concerned about the drift of public affairs, both local and national. "I've got my ideas," he said. "I may be wrong, but I will stick to my honest opinions until I find for sure I am wrong; then I will change my course. I fought the cattle dipping business as bitterly as anybody in the county. I was, perhaps, unreasonable. I finally found I was wrong, because dipping cattle did get rid of the ticks." You can depend on a man who will acknowledge his error when it is proven he is wrong.

I am pleased with the announced location of the new postoffice building. While I am pleased, I realize at the same time there are some who are not pleased. Doubtless Uncle Sam will never hear of our differences in that respect. He has picked a good place for our federal building, even if it is on Sixth Street, which some have regarded as a wilderness ever since the days when the paved highway was located on Seventh Street. We hope for the day when there will be a paved highway on Sixth Street as well as Seventh. We need a two-way highway through Clanton. Remember the story about the old lady who had in her door a little hole for the little cat and a big hole for the big cat.

The Selma Highway out of Clanton for a piece is rated as a mess right now. I am told that is correct. Preliminary preparations for paving, together with much rain, is the cause. It will no doubt remain in bad condition for some months. But all of that can be excused when we think how nice it will be when the paving is completed.

Those who are interested in completion of Clanton Airport are sincerely anxious to have the Town of Clanton do a little in the way of assistance toward the project. It is felt that the county has been very liberal in its aid. The federal relief works division has done well by us. The Town has done very little, if any. Clanton ought to help some. Let us hope the city officials will be able to see the reasonableness of their cooperation to such extent as they are able.

Since we are to have a race in the municipal election for mayor and councilmen, maybe that will give us a few days of recess in county politics. Fenn Jones and Pate Wilson are going to bat in a good old fashioned friendly contest. Earle Gowan is the one new man in the council race. He will try to unseat one of the old members. I don't suppose it makes any difference with him whose place he gets. Anyway, it will not be a long campaign. It will soon be over, and we will then turn our attention to bigger, if not better questions.

Fear is manifest that the excessive rains will seriously damage crop production in Chilton County. Will Cox avers that the sinfulness of our people has brought righteous condemnation in the form of a wet spell that is rotting our farm products. Striking a blow at crop production control and NRA, he says we need a Jonah instead of a Johnson. While we do not pretend to guess the correctness of his diagnosis of our troubles, it does appear that nature has added very material assistance to the efforts of the government in keeping down production this year. Maybe somebody will want to blame the government for not communing with nature and finding out her plans before such drastic man-made measures were instituted. Then, maybe, again, we will make all the stuff we need after all.

The Kiwanis Club of Clanton will be honored tonight by a visit from Alabama District Governor, John Sparkman, of Huntsville. This is the first visit of Governor Sparkman here since his election as Governor at the Birmingham convention nearly a year ago. It is hoped that he will be greeted Thursday night by a on hundred per cent attendance of Clanton club members.

GEN. JOHNSON WON'T QUIT

General Hugh S. Johnson seems to have been balking a little with President Roosevelt, and has threatened to quit the NRA. But Mr. Roosevelt has put a quietus on this grumbling. He just raised Johnson's salary from $6,500 a year to $15,000. Now everything is Jake with Johnson. Who wouldn't be for $15,000 a year?

With the nationalization of silver the theme song of the Treasury Department at Washington becomes "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Adolph Hitler frees 10,000 prisoners, which ought to make the Indiana state prison authorities turn green with envy.

A court assigned 24 lawyers to defend six alleged slayers. Evidently the state is determined to kill them by gas.

Things are so quiet in Austria just now that we are beginning to be afraid that somebody is up to something.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF INSURANCE OF THE STATE OF ALABAMA FOR THE YEAR ENDING DEC. 31, 1933 READS:

"The Burial Insurance law is undoubtedly unsound and unwise in all fundamental respests. And the companies complying with its provisions, and doing no more, are as sure to fail as night follows day, with loss and disappointment to more than 100,000 of our citizens.

"Since companies operating according to this law now have more than 100,000 policyholders whose interests are adversely affected by it, what is the clear duty of the State? Obviously it is to attempt to enact reasonable legislation to correct, if possible, the errors made in this unsound, unwise law."

The Alabama Funeral Directors Association, Inc., has always warned the public against buying burial certificate schemes. Your only SAFE and SOUND protection is to buy Legal Reserve Life Insurance that will pay all benefits in CASH.

This burial insurance law was enacted for the sole benefit of certain selfish interests, and the public's protection is thrown to the winds.

Your insurance department cannot protect you with such selfish laws on the statute books.

Ala. Funeral Directors Ass'n.

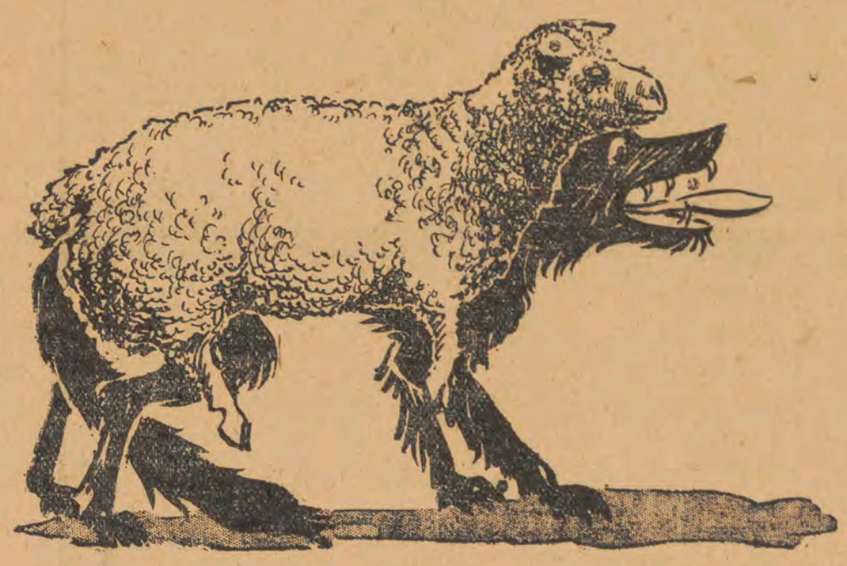
The Wolf In Sheep's Clothing



WHEN any company or any person begins advising people to drop their Burial Protection in order to try to find something better, we are reminded of the proverbial "Wolf in Sheep's Clothing." For that matter, any person who advises people to drop ANY protection with any licensed company is a "Wolf in Sheep's Clothing."

Investigation has taught us that The Wolf's advice is not given out of an honest desire to help the people. On the contrary, it is prompted by his own selfishness, greed, avarice and envy. The Wolf cannot help the people with destructive advice. The Wolf expects to profit by advising that fathers drop their Burial Certificates even though his profit would be gained at the expense of a widow and her defenseless children. But The Wolf does not mind this. His motive is personal gain at any cost. The satisfaction of Greed.

The Wolf would have you believe that Burial Companies are unsafe and unsound. . . When as a matter of fact the Brown-Service Funeral Company has for each dollar of liabilities including policyholders reserves, more than one dollar and fifty-nine cents.

The Wolf would have you believe that there is nothing gained by carrying Burial Certificates . . . When as a matter of fact the Brown-Service Funeral Company has saved the families of over 15,000 deceased policyholders more than four million dollars in eight years, or a dollar for each minute that the company has been in business. The Wolf would have you believe that we are fighting the life insurance companies. . . When as a matter of fact, we recommend that our policyholders retain their Burial Certificate and also carry life insurance policies to defray doctors' bills, hospital and drug bills. We simply contend, and can prove, that our Burial Certificate shields and protects the family from the hard-driven, ruthless bargain of the independent undertaker and his obsolete methods.

Hundreds who read this advertisement will be reminded of the unfortunate time in former years when the death of a loved one forced them to visit the old-style funeral home. They will remember the methods then used and that they were forced to spend hundreds of their hard-earned dollars for a funeral that may now be obtained by the wisdom and foresight of paying the small premium of 25 cents per week on a Brown-Service Burial Certificate. Hence The Wolf and his unwelcome advice.

Authorized Undertaker for Chilton County SPIGENER FUNERAL HOME Clanton, Alabama.

In the second game of the semi-finals, played last Tuesday, Randolph took a hard-fought contest from Maplesville, 3 to 2, with a whirlwind ninth-inning attack.

Tucker deplaced Atchison for Maplesville at the beginning of the fourth inning and let Randolph down without a hit through five innings. However, in the ninth, with one away, McCary singled, Cottingham doubled, Raybon was safe on an error, McCary checking in with the tying run; L. McAfee walked, filling the bases, and D. Hayes tried to field Horn's grounder too fast and bobbled, allowing Cottingham to score with the winning tally.

Maplesville got six hits, and Randolph four. Wallace had a perfect day at bat, with three out of three, including a double.

ALABAMA STATE FAIR TO OPEN MONDAY, SEPTEMBER THE 24th

Birmingham. Ala., Aug. 28.—When the Alabama State Fair opens in Birmingham, Monday, September 24, it will be a red letter day in the life of Juvenile America, insofar as the kids of Alabama are concerned. The gates are to be thrown open absolutely free of all charge to every school child in Alabama on opening day and all day long and until six o'clock that evening. President R. A. Brown and Manager P. T. Strieder of the Alabama State Fair are to play hosts to the school children of Alabama. What a day!

Announcement has just been made by the fair management that special programs are being arranged throughout Monday for the juveniles and every possible thing will be done to see that the kids have the biggest time of their lives. Among some of the stunts being arranged for their entertainment will be a special grand, free daylight fireworks display and a program given by the free act army of entertainers in front of the grand stand, arranged especially for the youngsters.

This will undoubtedly start the Alabama state fair off on one of the biggest weeks in exposition history in Alabama. Every building on the ground has been rebuilt even down to the foundations themselves. Every building on the fair ground has been repainted in an aluminum motiff. Things are rapidly taking shape now that the army of carpenters, construction men, electrical workers and painters have labored unceasingly throughout the summer. And, when the gates swing open for the kids on Monday morning, September 24, practically a new fair, insofar as physical equipment is concerned, will greet the thousands upon thonsands of children who stream through the gates.

Various and sundry features will go into the coming Alabama state fair to make it the biggest, the best and the most enjoyable ever held in Alabama. In the first place, dare devil automobile race drivers from all over America will hold a two day session in Birmingham this year, instead of the usual races the last day of the fair. A greater galaxy of free act artists than ever before have been booked for the acts in front of the grandstand. By far the most glittering array of fireworks in the history of what was formerly an annual event has been arranged for and a mid-way attraction that is second to none has been booked. The Royal American Shows, a thirty car outfit playing to the biggest fairs in America, will be in Birmingham all week to furnish the midway attractions.

A canary show has been arranged, better county agricultural exhibits than ever have been arranged for, the last word in butter sculpture has been assured, free acts never before seen in this country have been signed, two days of dare devil automobile racing have been scheduled, a wonder acquarium exhibit is now an assured fact, a rabbit show the likes of which Alabama has never seen is even now in the making.

Truly, all roads will lead to Birmingham, starting the week of September 24, and with such a stupendous show now a reality it is a foregone conclusion that the crowd records for all time will topple. Prognosticators are stating that the crowd at this year's Alabama State Fair will reach its highest mark.

JEMISON GROWERS TO MEET

The Jemison Fruit, Truck & Produce Association will hold a business meeting at the Jemison High School Building on Saturday, September 8th, at one o'clock p.m.

THREE WEEKS' RACE CARD PLANNED FOR MONTGOMERY

The Montgomery Kennel Club, Incorporated, has announced a three week's racing program, beginning at Crampton Bowl on the night of August 31. Seven races will be featured with purses totaling more than $400 each night.

Under the supervision of J. M. Sheppard, well-known New Orleans sportsman, the new athletic feature for Montgomery promises to be one of the most attractive sports events in local history.

More than 100 registered greyhound thoroughbreds will compete during the three weeks' program. These dogs have participated in races all over the United States and will be unleashed here for several weeks prior to the seasonal opening in Florida.

The quarter-mile cinder-path at the Crampton Bowl will be covered with a new top-soil or possibly sawdust to protect the feet of the prized greyhounds that will dash in pursuit of the elusive electrical rabbit.

The races will be at one-quarter of a mile and three-sixteenths of a mile.

LAND CLASSIFICATION GOING FORWARD NOW

Montgomery, Ala.—That the permanent classification of the land surface of Alabama now being made under the direction of the federal government will prove of inestimable value to the timber producers and forest industries of the state is the opinion of Col. Page S. Bunker, state forester. "The Commission of Forestry has long been engaged upon the task of segregating in map form the land chiefly valuable for forestry as distinguished from that useful for agriculture and other purposes," said Col. Bunker. "Much valuable information was gathered by the bureau of census and published as county compilations. The original data, however, were taken by precincts. For the purposes of the forestry department the precinct data were extremely useful, and the commission of forestry, by an arrangement with the bureau of census, had this recompiled in the latter form. It was thus possible to determine the proportion of land in each precinct criefly valuable for timber production. The outlines of the particular areas were determined approximately by field inspections.

"Various federal and state agencies are cooperating in obtaining the additional data required for the permanent land classification," continued Col. Bnker. "The term submarginal land is frequently heard in these connections, and one of the main objectives of the classification is to get such land out of agricultural use to serve some other public or private purpose for which it may be better adapted. In most cases the latter probably will be forestry.

The term submarginal implies that such lands are below the doubtful class. Naturally there are areas which during times of high industrial prosperity are the first to be abandoned as farm lands. In times of economic depression, however, when the opportunities for employment in the towns and cities become greatly limited, people return to such lands with reasonable prospects of making a living thereon which, while it may not be regarded by many as a high standard of living, nevertheless may well be considered as a civilized existence. Such lands as these may be designated as marginal, and justify their classification as such on the ground that there should be a considerable amount of such acreage available as a safety zone to take up the slack in occuptional adjustments.

"Inferior to the marginal lands, on the other hand, are areas that are distinctly submarginal, that is, lands upon which cultivation is often attempted but which by reason of intrinsic quality, or possibly by location, are definitely unsuitable for agricultural use. People striving for an existence upon such lands are subject to so many hardships, and are deprived of so many opportunities properly due American citizens, that their moving to better areas or their engaging in other occupations is so imperative that it is to the public interest that such lands be taken out of cultivation and used for other purposes. The processes involved in making all of the necessary physical, economic and personal adjustments are somewhat complicated, but the program entered upon by the federal government in coordination with other agencies bids fair to furnish a successful solution of these problems.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—Commissoiner I. T. Quinn of the Alabama Game and Fisheries Department, has announced that dove shooting in Alabama this season will be under stricter regulations than in the past.

He said baited fields for mourning doves have been outlawed by the federal government and that this state's hunting statutes will be made to conform to the new federal regulation.

Alabama's law heretofore has made it a violation to make use of a baited field, but the new federal ruling goes even further and makes it a violation of the law to put out bait.

"The new regulation absolutely prohibits the shooting of doves attracted or enticed to baited fields," declared Commissioner Quinn.

The change was recommended by the Migratory Bird Treaty Act Advisory Board, of which Commissioner Quinn is a member, was adopted by Secretary Wallace August 15 and approved by President Roosevelt August 20.

The first half of the dove season in Alabama opens September 1 and will continue through September 30. The second half will start November 20 and close January 31. These dates apply to every county in the state except Mobile, Washington and Baldwin where the season opens November 1 and closes January 31.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

FARMERS ADVISED FIELD SELECT CORN

Auburn, Ala.—Farmers will find it profitable to field select their corn, says J. C. Lowery, extension service agronomist, who advises farmers to "obtain seed of a good variety and carefully select planting seed in the field."

"Crib selection is of little value in that the history of the stalk which bore the selected ear is not known and the surrounding stalks may have been barren or otherwise undesirable, Lowery warns.

"Field selection of seed is usually done in October and November. Continued selection of a good variety may develop one that is superior for a particular section. Selection should be done both before and after harvest.

WALLACE WARNS FOOD PROFITEERS

Auburn, Ala.—President Roosevelt and Secreatry Wallace have sternly warned "profiteers" and "speculators" that the government will step in if they make unwarranted increases in food prices because of the drouth situation.

"Food supplies for the natjon as a whole are ample," reports the United States Department of Agriculture, which adds that "stocks of bread grains and of several other food products are large."

4-H CLUB STUDY SESSION CLOSES

Auburn. — The ninth annual state short course for the 4-H Club girls closed here Saturday morning following four busy days of instruction in homemaking, lectures by prominent speakers, and a varied recreational program. The meeting of outstanding club girls from 38 Alabama counties was attended by 300 delegates and home demonstration agents.

In evaluating the work of the 4-H Clubs in Alabama, Miss Gertrude Warren, Washington 4-H Club official, said that it ranked with the best done in other states throughout the nation.

Under Miss Warren's direction a state-wide organization of 4-H girls was organized known as the Alabama 4-H Council. It is predicted that the new organization will be a distinct forward step for 4-H work in the state.

Hattie Maude Hames, of Morgan County, was declared the Alabama 4-H health champion and will represent the state in Chicago next December at the National 4-H Health Contest. The trip will be given by the Protective Life Insurance Company of Birmingham. The three other winners who were designated as the "health honor group" are Olga Spratlan, of Bullock County; Reva Knight Clapp, Monroe County, and Mabel Page, Franklin County. All made nearly perfect health scores.

Miss Ruth Pardue, Chilton County Home Demonstration Agent, attended the course, and carried the following Chilton County Club Girls:

Lucile Edwards, of Isabella Club, who entered the clothing contest; Arra B. Jones, of Maplesville Club, who entered the clothing judging team; Willie Nell Owen, of Isabella Club, who entered the clothing judging team; Frances Kendrick, of Vermont Club, who entered the general courses.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for the many kindnesses shown as expressions of sympathy and for the many beautiful flowers when our dear loved one, Mrs. E. B. Deason, passed away.—The Family.

LIVESTOCK REMINDERS

Experiments have proven that 2½ pounds peanut (hogged off) will produce 1 pound of pork. When hogs bring $5.00 per hundred they can pay $40 per ton for peanuts in the field and save all harvest cost.

If you are planning to can beef it will pay you to write Auburn for circular 145 on "Slaughtering, cutting and canning beef on the farm." This circular has recently been published and contains all the latest information on this subject.

Farmers should plant one acre of oats in September for each dairy cow on the farm. This succulent roughage will stimulate milk production during the winter months and will naturally reduce the feed bill.

A dairy cow on the average as a 2-year-old may be expected to produce about 70 per cent, as a 3-year-old around 80 per cent; and as a 4-year-old about 90 per cent of the milk and butterfat she will produce when mature.

Good authorities estimate that approximately one-third of our dairy cows do not produce enough milk to pay for their feed and care. It will pay all dairymen to join a dairy herd improvement association in order to locate and eliminate these unprofitable cows from their herds.

SINGING AT LOMAX TABERNACLE

Mr. Virgil Smith asks The Union-Banner to announce that there will be singing at Lomax Tabernacle next Sunday afternoon, the first Sunday in September. He hopes to re-organize the Jackson Chapel singing society, so all singers have an invitation to attend and help them in their singing and to assist in the reorganizing of the society.

INTEREST IN WINTER LEGUMES

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers are manifesting more interest in winter legume seed for planting this fall than at any time during the history of the state, according to information reaching here.

So great has been the demand for seed that farmers have ordered 3,500,000 pounds of hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas cooperatively, reports C. W. Ashcraft, vice president of the state farm bureau.

SOUTH LEADING IN ECONOMIC PLANNING

Auburn, Ala.—The south has pointed the way to the nation in economic and agricultural planning, declares Rexford G. Tugwell, under Secreatry of Agriculture.

"Under the New Deal," he said, "the South is cominfg into its own again and as the partner of the North and West in developing our national future along new and cooperative lines."

He said the south, in expressing overwhelming approval of the Bankhead cotton control act, had pointed to a new agricultural era which other sections had been slow in following, but which was beginning to take form.

Mr. Ralph Jones, of Birmingham, who has been the guest of his mother for a few days, has returned to Birmingham.

Mrs. Renfroe Mullins and Jean are spending this week with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Scott of Huntsville. Little John Ed Scott underwent a tonsil operation on Monday, and is doing nicely now.

Mrs. Stewart and children nave returned from a visit to relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Massey have returned to their home in Bartow, Fla., after spending a week with Mr. Frank Massey and family of Mt. Pleasant community. Accompanying them on their return was J. C. Massey and Roddie Massey.

A Defeated Candidate Urges Ticket's Support

Editor Union-Banner:

What is the big idea in trying to get up a squabble in the Republican party of Chilton County?

I noticed a few weeks ago that Jasper Robinson of Verbena had a piece in the paper wherein he stated that someone was trying to get him to join some kind of a new society, perhaps it was the "Love and Do-Well Society."

I noticed in last week's issue of your paper a statement to the effect that someone had let private cars have 9,789 gallons of county gasoline.

It seems that this gasoline was swiped since February 1st, 1932.

I am wondering, and so are a lot of other people wondering why it is that this party or parties who checked this 9,789 gallons of stolen gas didn't "squeal" sooner.

If I had seen someone swiping county gasoline, I would have reported the first offense.

It is reasonable to presume that this party who checked the stolen gasoline saw the first delivery, and every subsequent delivery, or else he would not have known it to be exactly 9,789 gallons.

Folks, there is something rotten in Denmark.

It seems to me that there is someone in our party who is trying to switch some of our voters to the Democrats.

Some think that it is one or more candidates who got left out in our recent primaries that is trying to stir up confusion in our ranks.

I happen to be one of the candidates who failed to get nominated, but I am not the least sore about it. I expect to lay right up to the old party just like a cat lies up against a hot brick on a cold day.

We have in Chilton County some mighty good men who are Democrats, in fact some of my best personal friends are Democrats, but politically, what have the Democrats as a political party ever done that would cause one Republican to want to join them?

In my opinion the Republican voters have nominated a good and competent bunch of men to carry on the affairs of Chilton County, so my advice to every Republican is to stick to our nominees in the general election. Do not be led astray by some candidate who got sore because he was left out in the primaries.

Just sit steady in the boat.

Yours for the success of the Republican party.—Chas. Cooper.

FISH TALES

Thursday a party from Alabama spent a delightful day deep sea fishing with Capt. Verne Goodwin, on board the Goodie. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Freeman and Edgar Freeman, Verbena, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Freeman, of Birmingham, Ala.; the Rev. J. L. Moye, Birmingham; Misses Myre Vinson, Prattville, Ala., and Miss Myra Durden, who caught the largest fish, a 20-lb grouper. The honor for catching the greatest number of fish was won by E. H. Freeman. The catch was about 200 pounds.

On Friday the male members of the Alabama party made another trip on board the Goodie with Capt. Verne and brought in a catch of 150 pounds. —St. Petersburg Times.

This party went down to St. Petersburg on a route near the Gulf coast of Florida, thence to Ft. Myers and across by way of Tamiami Trail to Miami. The return was made up the Atlantic coast.

Mr. Loren Smith, Mr. Dick Kemp Mr. Barney Burnett and Mr. Geo. McCain left Saturday night for the rodeo at Mobile, Ala.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Moses Talks With God on Mount Sinai.—At the beginning of their wanderings in the wilderness Moses was not only the leader of the Israelites but also their sole judge. But finding this burden too heavy, he appointed judges from among the people of Israel to judge the small matters, and he himself served as a final arbiter. Thus the Israelites were provided not only with a law—through the Ten Commandments and the comprehensive Mosaic code given to them shortly afterward—but with a judiciary as well. The Ten Commandments were given to the Israelites and the Mosaic covenant was ratified by God through Moses on Mount Sinai. The arrival of the children of Israel at Sinai and their preparations for receiving the Law are told in Exodus 19. "And the Lord came down upon Mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the Lord called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up."—Ex. 19: 20. This illustration is from Merian's story of the Bible in pictures, engraved in 1625.

Lesson for September 2

MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED

LESSON TEXT—Micah 2:1-3; 3:1-12; 6:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah 6:8

PRIMARY TOPIC—Micah Tells How to Please God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What God Requires of Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What God Expects of Us.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Applied Religion.

I. Evil Workers Denounced (2:1-3).

1. How they worked (v. 1). Their evil work was not a matter of impulse, but of deliberate purpose.

a. They gave themselves to the devising of wicked schemes.

b. They worked evil upon their beds. They not only deliberately gave themselves up to the devising of wicked schemes, but used the quiet hours of the night while honest people were sleeping for planning ways of accomplishing their wicked schemes.

c. They executed their plans in the morning light. They did what their wicked minds devised.

2. What they did (v. 2).

a. They coveted fields (v. 2). In this they violated the tenth commandment.

b. They violently took away fields and houses (v. 2). A noteworthy example is found in the case of Ahab taking Naboth's vineyard. This in turn is an apt picture of the monopolists of today taking possession of land, oil, gold, silver, and other commodities.

c. They oppressed men and their houses (v. 2). By house here is meant a man's descendants, that is, the inheritors of his property.

3. Their punishment (v. 3). Against such evil-doers righteous retribution is being devised and shall fall upon the wicked with such weight as to humble them.

II. Upon Whom Judgment Shall Fall (3:1-8).

1. The unfaithful rulers (vv. 1-4). Because of love for the evil and a hatred for the good, the rulers mercilessly destroyed the people.

2. The false prophets (vv. 5-8) They served for hire. As long as supplied with food, they prophesied to please the people.

III. The Judgment Which Was to Fall (vv. 9-12).

Jerusalem was destroyed because of the sins of the people. Just as the righteous retribution then fell, we are assured that there will be no escape from the coming judgment for those who destroy the people.

IV. God's Controversy With His People (6:1-13).

Wicked men may go on to a certain time with their schemes, but eventually they will be obliged to give an account to God.

1. The hills and mountains are called to bear witness against Israel (v. 2). The people had turned a deaf ear to God, so that the inanimate creation was called to witness against them. The whole realm of nature bears witness to the fact of God's being and his goodness.

2. The guilty to be left to state the case (v. 3). Through the prophet, God, the King of the Universe, abdicates his rights and allows his sinning people to make charges against him. The one who has right on his side fears no argument.

3. God recounts his mercies unto the people (vv. 4, 5). Having called for the charge and none having been brought, the Lord thrusts home upon their conscience the memory of his great mercies unto them.

a. He brought them out of Egyptian bondage (v. 4.) He has done even more for us who were under bondage to sin and Satan.

b. He sent before them a trio of leaders (v. 4). Moses the lawgiver, Aaron the high priest, and Miriam the prophetess were sent as his witnesses.

c. Turned Balak's curse into a blessing through Balaam (v. 5).

4. God's requirements (vv. 6-13).

a. The great question, "Wherewith shall I come before the Lord?" (v. 6). The Jews could not deny the charge brought against them by the Almighty. They could make no plea for justification.

b. The complete answer (v. 8). (1) "To do justly." Strict equity was to characterize all their dealings with their fellowmen. (2) "To love mercy." The heart is to be diligently set to do good to our fellows, especially the needy and dependent. (3) "To walk humbly with thy God." To recognize that they were sinners before God, that they had no claim upon him.

Honor Your God

"More than conquerors" means not only to win your battle and save your territory, but to do honor to your Captain and your God, to be a credit to your cause, and so to acquit yourself in the campaign that God shall be glorified.—A. B. Simpson.

Just a word about the SERVICE at the MOLTON HOTEL

FIFTH AVENUE AND TWENTIETH STREET

THERE'S a pleasant, friendly atmosphere about the Hotel Molton—a delightful informality and unobtrusively efficient service that appeals to discriminating guests. While Molton service is punctilious, it is entirely lacking in that stiff formality one often finds in larger metropolitan hotels. That's why the guests who stop here once, feel like they're coming home when they return to see us.

REFUGE NEWS

Our regular services were held at this place Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night, with some of the most strong, masterful messages delivered by our pastor, Rev. M. Lockhart, that has ever been delivered at Refuge. We had very large crowds at each service, especially Saturday night. Of course the crowd was not quite as large Sunday night as it was Saturday night.

Saturday night we elected officers to carry on the work for the coming year as follows: Rev. M. Lockhart, pastor; A. N. Minor, superintendent of Sunday school; Mr. A. H. Minor, church clerk; Mr. T. N. Minor, secretary and treasurer; Rev. H. D. Durbin, adult teacher; Mrs. J. S. Easterling, senior teacher; Mrs. A. J. Johnson, children's teacher; Mrs. Ruth Lockhart, card class. So let's cooperate with these officers and make this a great year's work for the Lord. The greatest of all let us not forget to pray, for God has revealed it to us that prayer goes ahead of soliciting.

Let us be on time next Sunday for Sunday school at 10 a.m., B. Y. P. U. at 7:30.

There was a good number met at this place Monday morning for the purpose of cleaning off the cemetery and also the yards. Things look quite different. We did not only sweep a little around the door, but we cleaned them off as they have never been cleaned before.

Changes In Rural Mail Service Soon

Clanton Will Have Only Six Routes; Miller Goes to Jemison

The Postoffice Department announces a number of changes in rural routes at Clanton and Jemison, which will become effective November the first.

Carriers A. H. Glasscock and E. L. Glasscock will be retired from the service, having carried the mails on rural routes at Jemison for a period of thirty years.

With the two retirements at Jemison, E. W. Miller, carrier on Clanton Route 4, will be transferred to Jemison. The three routes at Jemison will be made into two routes after November 1, and the service will be carried on by Mr. Miller and Mr. Langston, present carrier on one of the Jemison routes.

Dave Easterling, carrier on Clanton Route 6, will take Mr. Miller's place as carrier on Clanton Route 4.

Route 6 will be combined with Route 2, and Mr. John Armstrong will continue as Route 2 carrier, covering the distance embodied in both routes.

Ben Sessions will become carrier on Route 6 instead of Route 7, but the only change will be in the number of the route. He will serve the same territory as in the past.

Routes 1, 3 and 5 carried by Grady Harris, Grover Harris and J. J. Mims, respectively, will continue without any change in carriers or territory covered.

NEW BARGE AT MIMS FERRY

Mims Ferry, just below Lay Dam, has recently installed a new barge, and is now equipped to amply take care of any loads anyone might want transported across the river. This ferry is on the short route to Sylacauga. The management announces in his adv., in this issue of The Banner that "Your Patronage will be appreciated."

VISITING IN CHICAGO

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Littleton of Clanton Route 4 are enjoying the World's Fair and visiting their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Clark, who have made their home in Chicago for the past five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Littleton will take a trip on the lake before returning home. They are enjoying the cool weather in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Littleton will return home in a few days and tell their friends about the many points of interest they have visited.

No Federal License On Cane Syrup Mills

There appears to be a widespread report in Alabama to the effect that owners and/or operators of cane mills are required to pay a special tax or license to the Federal Government before they can operate such mills. So many reports of this nature have reached this office until it is believed some action should be taken to counteract the effect it is having on interested persons. We can think of no better source of information than the newspapers of the state for attaining the end desired.

It should therefore be appreciated, and we believe it will be a distinct service to many of our readers, if you will give whatever publicity you see fit to the fact that there is no such tax or license imposed on operators of cane mill by the Federal Government.

There is processing tax on edible molasses made from pure sugar cane juices. There is no such tax on sorghum molasses. The tax on sugar cane molasses is imposed only upon its sale and producers who grow the cane are exempted from any tax on the sale of the same to the extent of 200 gallons, except in cases where 500 gallons or more are sold, in which cases no exemptions are allowed.

Where a producer sells in excess of 200 gallons of sugar cane molasses, the rate of tax is .94 of a cent per gallon of 11 and one third pounds, or a tax of slightly less than one cent per gallon.

Thanking you for whatever cooperation you may give in this matter, I am, Yours very truly, Harwell G. Davis, Collector.

MIZE-CROW WEDDING

A wedding of much interest in this section was that of Miss Eloise Crowe of Clanton and Mr. Allen Mize, promising young business man of Maplesville, who were married by the Rev. R. P. Cochran on Sunday, August 26, at 9 a.m., in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

After a wedding trip which will include points of interest in Alabama and Mississippi, Mr. and Mrs. Mize will be at home in Maplesville. Their many friends wish them much happiness and success.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Wyatt and Inez, and Mrs. George Wyatt and Erskin were in Montgomery shopping Monday.

NINE HURT AS AUTO AND CCC CAR CRASH

Camp Hill, Ala., Sept. 3.—Nine persons were hurt, three seriously, Monday when a CCC truck and an automobile driven by Coy Payne, foreman of a CCC camp, collided between Camp Hill and Dadeville.

Payne, taken to a hospital at Opelika, was reported most seriously injured of the three riding in his car. Dimes Clay and Mite Johnson, both CCC workers with Payne, were others taken to the Opelika hospital. Clay suffered internal injuries and Johnson was hurt about the head.

Two other youths, occupants of the truck, were taken to an Alexander City hospital. Four others in the truck were severely shaken up and suffered minor hurts.

A car parked without lights along the road was blamed for the collision.

CHILD IS KILLED AS BOY FINGERS RIFLE

Decatur, Ala., Sept. 3. — Rebecca Jones, 3, was accidentally shot to death Monday night by her brother, T. M. Jones, III, aged 10. The accident occurred at the family home, 602 Walnut Avenue.

The brother was showing a .22 caliber rifle to some child neighbors when the gun was accidentally discharged. The bullet penetrated Rebecca's temple.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones, Jr., members of a widely-known Decatur family.

Farmers Close Meet At Auburn Monday

Annual Event Is Attended By A Number From Chilton County

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 3. — Alabama farmers concluded Farmers Week on Monday by passing resolutions urging:

1. That the cotton adjustment program and processing tax be continued unchanged.

2. That the Alabama Legislature provide for an adequate system of public education and that teachers be promptly paid their full salaries and that federal aid be continued.

3. That the next Legislature of Alabama and Congress of the United State enact legislation placing county agency work on a permanent basis, and that extension service, experiment station and vocational agriculture be strengthened.

4. That the tax system be revised, making state and federal expenses come from income, corporation, inheritance and gift taxes.

5. That homesteads be exempt from taxes.

6. That National bank insurance bill be expanded.

7. That fertilizer and fertilizer materials be immediately produced at Muscle Shoals in lare quantities and that the TVA use agricultural colleges and their forces in carrying out its program.

8. That cotton bagging be used for wrapping cotton bales and cotton sacks as containers for fertilizers, seed, etc.

9. That study be made of state and county governments.

10. That unspinable cotton be segregrated and reported separately.

Resolutions were adopted following speeches by Senator Bankhead, Governor-Designate Graves, Ed O'Neal, Thomas Martin and Ashton Collins.

Col. Graves told farmers that he hopes to exempt homesteads from taxation. He also declared that humanity is the foundation and the hope of the world and that during his administration he will put human welfare first.

Senator Bankhead reviewed cotton legislation and declared that the South is leading the nation out of depression. He gave figures showing that in 1932 cotton and cotton seed brought Alabama farmers 37 million dollars and that this year they will receive approximately 55 million for cotton, seed and in benefit payments and profits on option cotton.

President Martin showed that craft paper manufacturing had been brought to the South during the past 10 years and that he believed white paper manufacturing is also headed for the South.

O'Neal warned the farmers to watch for fights on the agricultural adjustment program. He said that there is a fight on the processing tax in order to kill the whole agricultural program.

Mr. Collins advised that farmers advertise their products to industry and urged close cooperation between agriculture and industry.

Those attending from Chilton County were: J. W. Fant, County Agent; Ruth Pardue, Home Demonstration Agent; Miss Lena Downs, Mrs. Lucie Parnell, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Robinson, Mr. Dudley Collins, Mr. J. W. Hawkins, Mr. T. F. Patterson and Mr. Earle Thomas.

Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson and Mr. Howard Tollent were the visitors of Miss Faye Ruth Giles Friday. After going to the show they said farewell to Faye Ruth and left for their home in Gadsden.

Commissioners Consider Gasoline Racket In Regular Monthly Meet

Signed Statement By Court Members Charges "Political Purpose" Is Behind Agitation and Publicity of Gasoline Charges

At the meeting of the Commissioners Court Monday and Tuesday the controversy over the county gasoline business occupied the center of the stage. Judge Reynolds presented a series of resolutions and recommendations, most of which were deferred by the Commissioners.

A resolution offered by Commissioner Atchison, was adopted. It provided that the Court furnish the State Tax Commission all records concerning the disposition of county gasoline.

A resolution offered by Judge Reynolds, inviting a public hearing on the gasoline business, was approved by the Court. The date of the meeting was not set.

Below we give a complete record of the resolutions and recommendations that were presented to the court, with a statement of the action taken on same:

The following recommendations were presented by Judge Reynolds to the Commissioners Court Monday:

Whereas, considerable criticism has been directed toward the county's use of gasoline and whereas, it has been charged that the county's gasoline was being used for private purposes and that the county's gasoline is being used in private cars and that the county's trucks are being used for private purposes, and

Whereas, the records show that from September 1st, 1931 to March 1st, 1933, a period of 18 months, the county purchased 91,314 gallons of gasoline, which was delivered to the county gasoline trucks; and from March 1st, 1933 to September 1st, 1934, a period of 18 months, the county purchased 143,914 gallons of gasoline, which was delivered to the county gasoline trucks, an increase over the same period of time of 52,600 gallons of gasoline, and

Whereas, the State Tax Commission has filed a claim of $11,654.65 with the Commissioners Court for taxes upon gasoline which the state tax commission has charged with use for other than county purposes, now, therefore, as chairman of the court of County Commissioners, I make the following recommendations:

1. That the Commissioners Court select a competent person to deliver the county's gasoline to the road machines.

2. That the Commissioners Court place such person under a sufficient bond for the faithful performance of his duties.

3. That an order be made by the Commissioners Court that the gasoline truck be locked in the garage which has been prepared on the county's property every night, and that the gasoline truck not be permitted to leave said garage at night.

4. That an order be made by the court having tickets or receipts for gasoline prepared, and when the gasoline is delivered to the county machinery that the same be signed by the person receiving the gasoline, and prohibit the person who delivers the gasoline from signing the receipts, and that said receipts be filed along with the other records of the Commissioners Court and that the same might be made public and entitled to public inspection at all reasonable times.

5. I recommend that the use of the county's gasoline be more closely scrutinized in order that no gasoline might be delivered or used in any manner except strictly for county purposes, and that all persons in the employment of the county who use the county's gasoline for other than county purposes be discharged after a fair hearing.

6. I recommend to the court that the county sell the five trucks that they now own, as it is my opinion that the county's hauling can be done cheaper by hiring it done than by owning their own trucks, and this will also give the work to the people of the county.

7. I further recommend to the Court that if the Commissioners will not agree to sell the county trucks, that a place be prepared in each commissioner's district and have the said trucks locked up at night and prohibit the use of said trucks at night time, unless in cases of emergency and necessity.

8. I further recommend to the Court that no county gasoline be placed in any vehicle except county road tractors and county owned trucks, and that such county road tractors and trucks be operated only and exclusively when actually performing services for the county.—L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate.

The foregoing recommendations were presented to the Commissioners Court by Judge Reynolds, and action upon the same was deferred by the court.

The following resolution was presented to the Commissioners Court by Judge Reynolds:

Whereas, considerable criticism has been directed toward the use of the county's gasoline, and, whereas, it has been charged that the county's gasoline was being used in private cars, and that the county's trucks are being used for private purposes, and that the county's gasoline is being used in private cars, and that the county's trucks are being used for private purposes;

In view of the above charges, we, the Commissioners Court, in regular session, hereby urge and request Honorable J. H. Hard, State Comptroller, to have the records of the Commissoiners Court examined at once by fair and competent examiners.

I recommend that the above resolution be adopted.—L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate.

Clanton Cotton Mill Not Affected As Yet

Despite the turmoil and unrest that exists among textile workers throughout the country, the Clanton unit of Alabama Mills continues in regular operation without molestation so far.

It was stated last week that all employees of the mill here signed a petition to officials of Alabama Mills stating that they desired to continue in their work, and that they were satisfied with conditions here.

Questioned concerning the report that the Clanton Mill is under guard, Sheriff Gillespie stated Wednesday morning that guards have been stationed about the mill and village, in order to keep down any outside interference with the workers who want to go ahead with their regular duties.

He stated the only fears concerning working of employees and operation of the mill here is that labor agitators from outside the county might come here and attempt to disturb the employees. This, he said could happen, but we do not expect it. However, if it should happen, they would not take the officers by surprise altogether.

It is understood that employees of the Clanton mill are not affiliated with the textile unions. They are quiet, peaceful, hard-working people, who want to go ahead with their work and continue to earn their living.

Old Reynolds Friend Urges Party Support

Uncle Tom Hubbard, Former Tax Collector, Keeps Faith In Party

Editor Union-Banner:

Please give me space for a few words to my old friends and supporters of former days and to all the Republicans of the county.

I am among the oldest Republicans in our county. A few of my old friends yet linger this side the setting sun. They stood by me in the battles of former days, when we carried the banner of Populism, then we went to the Republican party, where I stand today, and where I expect to remain until my voting days are over. Where else can I go? When the Republican party ceases to live, I am done voting. It is the party of Lincoln, the party of individual Americanism that abides by the Constitution of the U. S. A. I long to see it return to power in this nation.

In our county the Republicans have nominated a ticket of men loyal to the party. I voted in that election and thereby pledged myself to support the nominees, and that I will do.

In that primary election, like many others, I failed to get all my choice. I ardently supported Judge Reynolds. I am yet glad of it, because he has been our victorious leader in the past. He has fought for us from his youth down to old age. He is the best probate judge we have ever had, and I never expect to see his official record excelled. I say this with due regard to all his predecessors. I regret to give him up, but the Republican party has spoken, the nominees are selected and I am for the ticket first, last and all the time.

We need the Republican party in this county. It has made our county a great success. What we are interested in is the party for the benefit of our children and children's children.

Now, fellow Republicans, let us keep right in the middle of the road and support the ticket to a man, and to a woman. Let us heed the advice of Mrs. Carrie Shaw in a recent Banner.

We need the grand old party in the nation. It has made our nation great. Then carry the counties and you carry the nation.—Yours for the ticket, T. J. Hubbard.

Thorsby Negro Dead After Knife Cutting

Ellis Foshee To Have Preliminary Trial Here On Monday

Hosea Garrett, negro, of Thorsby, died in Central Alabama Hospital at Clanton last Sunday morning from effects of knife wounds sustained late Saturday evening in an encounter with Ellis Foshee, young white man, at Thorsby.

Reports of the difficulty which resulted in the death of the negro are as follows:

As the negro passed by a group of white men, Ellis Foshee, one of the group, flipped away a cigarette which struck the negro. The negro resented by telling Foshee not to throw his trash on him. Foshee told the negro he did not do it intentionally, but the negro kept on grumbling about it.

Policemen, it is said, intervened, and told the negro to go away and leave the argument alone. Presently he returned approaching Foshee with some rocks in his hands. Again the policeman made him put down the rocks and told him to leave there.

The third time the negro is said to have come back to Foshee, this time making a pass at the white man with an open knife. Foshee defended himself with his own knife, inflicting wounds that resulted in the negro's death Sunday morning.

Foshee was taken in charge by Thorsby officers and put under $300 bond.

Preliminary trial in the case has been set for next Monday before Justice S. W. Collins.

JACK DAVIS NOW WITH ALRED DRUG COMPANY

He states that his first impression of Clanton is very pleasant and that he wants to meet the people here that he may be able to better serve them.

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

Anybody can start a religion. It doesn't take any sense or personality, and strange to say, when a religion starts somebody will swallow it. All a person has to do is to think up some fool idea, call it religion, call on some rich widow and get some money and start the program.

Most of the religions which are known as false religions by orthodox leaders were either started by a woman or have been kept alive by women. The apostle Paul teaches clearly that God does not suffer a woman to teach or usurp authority over a man. The word "teach" does not mean to teach a Sunday School class or to teach the Bible. Paul is talking about headship. The position of headship in religion does not belong to woman. It belongs to man. That is what the Bible teaches.. Woman has her place in religion but her place is not at the head. Woman is never at her best in the position of headship. She is at her best when she stays where God meant her to stay.

The normal place for the normal woman is in the home. We are living, of course, in an abnormal world and all of our conditions are abnormal. But under normal conditions God means for women to stay in their homes and rear children and be good wives and good mothers. Men can preach, but men can't nurse babies. Men can be governors, but men's laps were never made to hold little children, certainly not long at a time. God didn't make men and women alike and no sort of social conditions can ever turn a woman into a man and a man into a woman. Man hasn't a sphere and woman hasn't a sphere. Man is a hemisphere and woman is a hemisphere.

Commissioners Make Statement

To the People of Chilton County:

By reason of the publicity given, apparently for political purposes, to the claim filed by the State Gas Tax Department against Chilton County on August 17, 1934, your county commissioners desire to make the following statement:

At the time this examination was made in the office of the Judge of Probate, at his request, the examiner who examined the delivery tickets of the gasoline truck driver did not have in his possession nor presented to him the delivery tickets for the months of May, June, July, August, September and October, 1933 (the period when I. P. Kennedy was clerk of the commissioners court.)

We are having signed duplicate copies of delivery tickets for this period presented to the State Gas Tax Department, which, when included in the report, will materially change the claim of the tax commission in respect to alleged shortage of county gasoline.

We believe the records and the examination, when properly and fully completed, will show that all gasoline not used in road machinery and county-owned trucks, was used to supply employees of the roads of Chilton County in going to and from their work on road duty. This practice and use of county gasoline was in effect and has been in effect for a number of years. This practice was also known to Judge Reynolds prior to the Republican primary of June 12, this year.

The chairman of our court, Judge Reynolds, in view of his own public statement, only saw fit to report this use of county gasoline to Mr. Tucker of the state gas tax department since the Republican primary of June 12, 1934. Part of this claim fild by the state tax commission, at the instigation of Judge Reynolds for the period from February 1, 1932 to November 1, 1932, shows 56,533 gallons of gasoline withdrawn, on which the state claims tax. The people will recall that this period was during the administration of the old commissioners, Vinson and Burnett, as we did not assume our duties as commissioners until January, 1933.

The court has authorized presenting of records to the state gas tax department of gasoline consumed by the county during May, June, July, August September and October, 1933, which records, we are advised, were not available to the examiner at the time examination was made. The gas truck driver, we are advised, has signed duplicate copies of all delivery tickets made and the same will be presented to the examiner.

We trust that the people of the county will withhold their opinion until all charges can be duly investigated, and that after a complete examination is made by the state gas tax department. When this is done we feel confident of the results. — Respectfully, J. E. Cobb, H. E. Robinson, J. C. Atchison, C. D. Duke.

And now we hear about the street car motorman who, after clanging his bell irately behind an obstinate coal truck for two blocks, finally managed to get up alongside the driver, leaned out his window and just looked. The truck driver brazenly asked, "Well?" Whereupon the motorman said, "I know what you are. I just want to see what you look like."

ALABAMA DEEP SEA RODEO DECLARED A SUCCESS

Mobile, Ala.—Thirteen states were represented at Alabama's sixth annual deep sea fishing rodeo which drew the largest attendance and registered the greatest catch of fish of any of the big angling contests the state has ever sponsored.

More than 500 fishermen from Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Ohio, New York. Misouri, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, Arkansas, Indiana, Texas and Alabama participated in the rodeo which started at dawn August 27 and closed at 3 p.m. August 29 after the gulf waters around Dauphin Island had been combed for every type of fish known to that sector.

Five husky tarpon, chief quarry of the contestants, were landed, numerous strikes reported and a half hundred leadping "silver kings" sighted. The largest tarpon, weighing 104¼ pounds was caught by Jake Rubel, of Corinth, Miss. The catch of smaller game fish surpassed all records in the six years the rodeo has been in existence.

The first tarpon was brought to gaff by Irwin K. Weil of New Orleans, and weighed 43½ pounds. Prizes consisting principally of deep sea fishing outfits, trophies, fishing tackle and articles of value to the outdoor sportsman, were awarded for the largest tarpon, first tarpon and for the largest fish in a dozen different catches as well as in special fishing events.

L. B. Sprott of Sprott, Ala., hooked an 18-pound king mackerel to win the prize in this division, Jake Rubel's 35 pound red fish took honors in this class and other winners included a 29-pound cavalla caught by Ernest Smith of Birmingham, a 24-pond ling taken by Capt. R. L. Ford, Bayou LaBatre, a 17½ pound black fish landed by O. F. Sanders of Tuscaloosa, a 6¼ pound dolphin hooked by Milton Snell of Mobile, a 5¼ pound Spanish mackerel caught by Gilbert Loper of Mobile, a 4½ pound bonita taken on the line of L. B. Pate of New Orleans, a 1½ pound blue fish snared by Billie Paterson of Mobile, whose varied catch of fish won him the title of grand champion fisherman of the rodeo; a 4-pound speckle trout captured by C. C. Clarke of West Point, Miss., and a 1¼ pound flounder landed by L. F. Sullivan of Huntsville.

Birmingham took a leg on the rodeo attendance challenge cup by sending the largest delegation, a fishing party of 28; Dr. James S. Lutz, of Louisville, Ky., won the liar's contest and Miss Dorothy Adams, daughter of L. G. Adams, president of the rodeo association, was crowned the champion woman fisherman.

Dr. W. C. Holmes of Foley, president of the Baldwin County rodeo, won two loving cups by catching the greatest number of king and Spanish mackerel and Jack Chambers of Huntsville, won a trophy and a deep sea outfit offered to the best angler represented in the Coca-Cola Bottling Company's party. The latter were offered by individuals and not by the rodeo association. Jake Rubel added one more prize to his collection by the largest number of red fish, a special event.

Boat captains winning cash awards which were based on the number of fish brought in per boat, were Coptain Joe Crenshaw of Bayou LaBatre, first; Albert Gill of Mobile, second; and Billie Patterson, Mobile, third. The prizes were the most costly the rodeo has ever offered and competition for them was keen throughout.

Due to strong east winds the seas were choppy at times but there were always placid waters in hidden coves where the fish were leaping and ready for a tussle. Spanish mackerel were never more plentiful and hundreds of schools were sighted. One fisherman fought a huge sail fish for 40 minutes only to lose it, while another lost a large devil fish almost at the point of landing.

In the last game of the semi-finals of the baseball tournament, played last Wednesday afternoon, Clanton defeated Independence eight to four.

Independence had piled up a three to nothing lead through their half of the fourth inning, when Clanton opened up and bombarded Langford, scoring three runs, and tying the count. In the fifth frame, Clanton started in on Langford again; Langford went wild, walking two men. He gave up for Burnett, and Blood greeted him with a rousing double. Then, after Jones flied out, Burnett walked, and Glass tripled. That was all for Burnett; Longcrier finished the game, allowing only two hits, but Clanton had piled up a commanding lead.

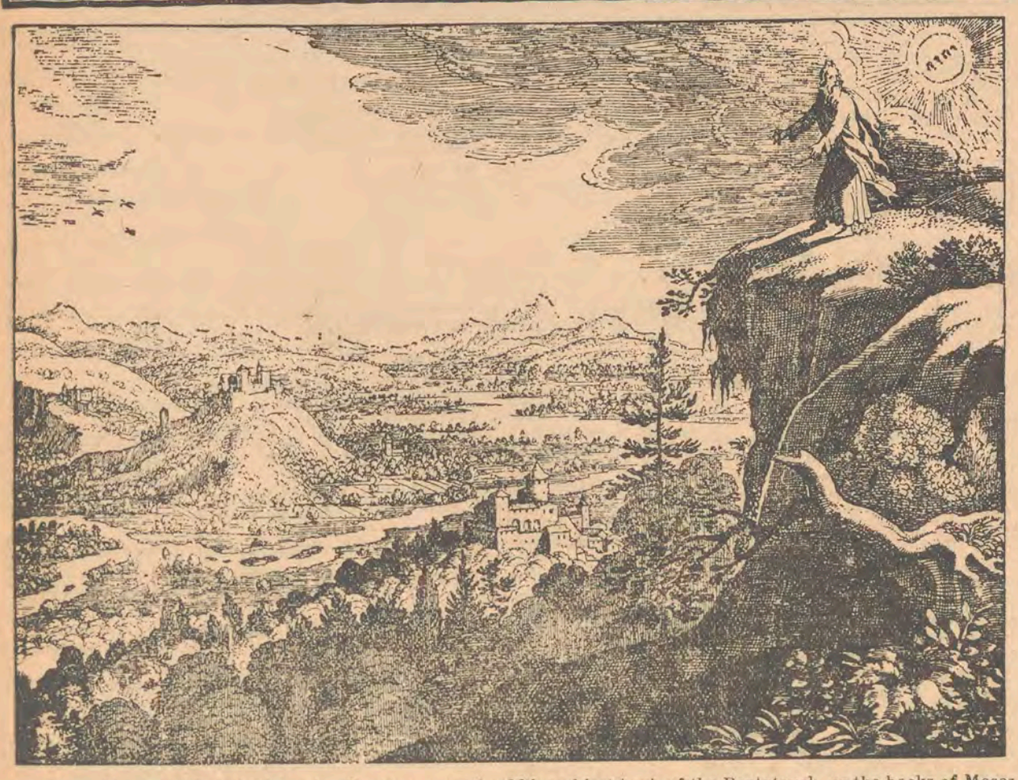
The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures



Moses Views the Promised Land.—Deuteronomy, the fifth and last book of the Pentateuch, or the books of Moses, contains a body of law given in the fortieth year of the Israelites' wandering, and consists mainly of three addresses given by Moses in that year, which was the last year of his own life. Following these three addresses an account of the delivery of the Law to the Levites is given, a Song of Moses is recited in the ears of the people, the final benediction of the twelve tribes is given and the closing scenes in the life of Moses are recorded. The picture, engraved in 1625 by Matthew Merian, depicts Moses overlooking the land of Canaan from Mount Nebo. And the Lord said unto him, "This is the land which I swear unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed: I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither." So Moses, the servant of the Lord, died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord.—Deut. 34: 4-7.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

HAY AND FEED CROPS WILL BE IN DEMAND

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 4.—Farmers throughout the nation are being urged by extension service leaders to conserve all hay and forage crops possible this fall and to prepare for growing "feed crops which will mature early in 1935."

C. W. Warburton, director of the United States Extension Service, Washington, has written Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the State Extension Service, offering the following suggestions:

Farmers should garner and conserve all hay and forage, including straw, wild hay, corn fodder or stover, and other material often wasted on some farms. Oats hay should be saved for feed and not used for bedding. Wherever possible, temporary silos should be erected to preserve roughage, and existing silos filled to capacity. These measures also will assist many farmers not in the drought areas to lower their feeding costs, and may build up reserves of good quality hay which could be sold in certain drought areas.

Farmers should sow pastures for fall and spring use and, wherever possible, should grow feed crops which will mature early in 1935.

Farmers who have supplies of good quality hay and forage should reserve such supplies in part at least and use more home-grown substitutes. In this way stocks much needed in the drought-stricken areas can be made available. The farmer there cannot profitably import poor hay or forage of low-feeding value.

NOTES TRANSFERABLE

Tax Exemption Certificates Can Be Swapped, Duncan Hears

Auburn, Ala.—Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of Auburn's extension service announced Wednesday that cotton tax exemption certificates are transferable.

"For example, if a farmer has a tax exempt quota of 15 bales and produces only 10, he may dispose of his surplus certificates to one who has produced in excess of his quota," said a Washington communication received by Dr. Duncan.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington will fix the sale price of the certificates, and farmers who have certificates for sale are urged to contact their county agent for additional information.

BETTER PRICES EXPECTED ON CHICKENS AND EGGS

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 4.—Farmers may expect better prices for their chickens and eggs this fall compared with last, mainly on account of the reduced production which it is expected will result from the scarcity and high price of feed, according to the midsummer poultry and egg outlook report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Poultry production this year is the smallest since 1925, reports the bureau. The number of chickens hatched this year was about 10 per cent less than last year, and the number of hens in farm flocks on August 1 was 3 per cent less than on that date last year. There has been more than normal disposal of hens and pullets in drought areas of the Central States.

Not only have farmers of the United States suffered because of the drought but farmers throughout the northern hemisphere have also been affected. "Outside the United States damage to crops has been particularly in Canada and in central and eastern Europe," says the United States Department of Agriculture.

4-H CLUB LEADER WINS PLYMOUTH SEDAN ON 280-WORD STORY

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Evelyn C. Rieck of Elkhorn, Wolworth County, Wisconsin, is the winner of the first of two Plymouth 4-door De Luxe Sedans to be awarded 4-H Local Club Leaders of the United States in a story writing contest conducted by the National Committee in Boys and Girls Club Work in cooperation with the Chrysler Motors Corporation.

Mrs. Rieck won by writing a 280-word description of how she would use such a car if she won one to advance 4-H club work. Local leaders of 20 states deposited stories in the Chrysler booth at A Century of Progress in the first car competition.

The winning story enumerated 15 different ways of using the car. Summarized, they are: To organize clubs; convey members to meetings; confer with other club leaders and committees; visit parents, members and non-members; attend club tours and county, state and national members and leaders meetings; attend the county kittenball league games; convey exhibits, demonstration and judging teams to contests; run errands for money-making projects; make buying tours for livestock, etc.; take groups to concerts and other educational events like state and world's fairs.

A second Plymouth will be awarded the 4-H Local Leader who writes and deposits the best story in the World's Fair Chrysler booth up to midnight, August 31.

Miss Marcella Rhoades, Union county, Ohio, won the first of three Plymouths being awarded club members for best stories. The cars are given as incentives to 4-H club work.

AGRONOMIST ADVISES "SPECIAL GIN - DAYS"

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 4.—"Special gin-days are an effective means for Alabama farmers to keep cotton varieties pure and prevent spending money for new kinds of cotton each spring," advises J. C. Lowery, Extension Service agronomist.

Gin-days simply mean all farmers growing the same variety of cotton in a gin territory arranging with their ginner for the special day on which only the good variety of cotton will be ginned.

At the begining of a gin-day, the machinery should be cleared of all seed which may have collected from previous ginnings. Seed from first two or three bales should be discarded and not used for planting purposes.

Farmers cooperating in a gin-day program should obtain the cotton from which they are saving their planting seed from areas as far as possible from other varieties.

"Well, I must be off. I've an appointment with mother."

The second woman gave an astounding laugh.

"My dear," she said, "is it possible that you have a mother living?"

"Yes, oh, yes," said the first woman; and then she laughed in her turn. "And do you know," she said, "I don't believe she looks a day older than you."

"Look here," said one of the jurymen after they had retired, "If I understand aright, the plaintiff doesn't ask damages for blighted affections or anything of that sort, but only wants his presents back."

"That is so," agreed the foreman.

"Well, then, I vote we don't give him a cent," said the other hastily. "If all the fun he had with that girl didn't cover the amount they cost him, it was his own fault. I courted that girl once myself!"

STATE PARK DEVELOPMENTS DRAWING MANY VISITORS

Montgomery, Ala. — The improved accessibility of many of Alabama's State Parks is drawing thousands of visitors to these areas, according to data compiled by the Park Bureau of the Auabama Commission of Forestry. Six parks are being developed by E. C. W. camps and one by the Alabama Transient Bureau. It is expected that other parks will have camps later in the fall.

The popularity of these areas is increasing faster than the improvements can accommodate the visitors, points out the Commission. Construction work in progress sometimes renders travel in the parks somewhat difficult. In the mountain regions visitors are apt to find their progress obstructed by road making machinery, blasting operations and other obstacles. In such cases the public is encouraged to visit the areas mainly on Sundays and holidays or after work hours on week days in order that danger of accidents may be avoided.

BRIEF FARM NEWS

Alfalfa hay is most valuable for feeding to dairy cows and as a green crop it makes good temporary pastures for pigs, brood sows, sheep, calves, and poultry, advises M. J. Funchess, director of the Alabama Experiment Station, who says that it can be successfully grown on the average red and brown soils of the Tennessee, Coosa, and Limestone valleys. It should be seeded in the fall.

Interest in wheat is increasing in Alabama, reports J. C. Lowery, extension service agronomist, Auburn, who is advising farmers of north Alabama to plant more wheat for home use and for poultry feed.

Alabama has more than 22,000,000 acres of land which is either already in forests or is suitable only for growing timber, according to Lyle Brown, extension forester of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

More than 65 per cent of the entire national fire loss each year occurs in the farms and rural sections. In 1823 this amounted to more than $260,000,000. This loss means a "fire tax" of about $700,000 a day on American agriculture.

Lesson for September 9

HEZEKIAH LEADS HIS PEOPLE BACK TO GOD

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 30:1-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—For if ye turn again unto the Lord, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land; for the Lord your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him. II Chronicles 30:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King's Call to God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A King's Call to Worship God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Makes a Good Leader?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Godly Leaders in Civic Life.

I. Hezekiah Calls the People to Keep the Passover (vv. 1-12).

The way for a sinning and divided people to get back to God and be united is around the crucified Lord. The Passover was a memorial of the nation's deliverance through the shedding of the blood of the sacrificial lamb.

1. The invitation was representative of the nation (v. 2). The king took counsel with the princes and the congregation to show that the proclamation was the expression of the nation's desire.

2. The time was unusual (vv. 2-4). There was not sufficient time to sanctify the people nor to gather them together at the regular time, so they resolved, instead of postponing it for a year, to hold it on the fourteenth day of the second month. This liberty had been granted before in an exigency (Num. 9:6-13).

3. The scope of the invitation (vv. 5-9). It included all of both nations who would come to keep the Passover to the Lord God of Israel. "Israel" is now used to include both kingdoms. The effort was to win back the nation which had seceded. The posts who were sent with the message were authorized to supplement the proclamation with an urgent exhortation to join as a united nation. This urgent invitation was tactfully put as follows:

a. It touched ancestral memories—"Turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel" (v. 6). Both kingdoms had a common ancestry.

b. Recent bitter experience—"Be not ye like your fathers and brethren who trespassed against the Lord God and were given up to desolation as ye see" (v. 7).

c. Yearning for captive kinsfolk—"Your brethren and children shall find compassion before their captors" (v. 9).

d. The instinct of self-preservation—"So that they shall come again into this land" (v. 9).

e. The forgiving mercy of God—"For the Lord your God is gracious and merciful" (v. 9). God will not turn any sincere seeker from him (John 6:37).

4. Israel's reception of the invitation (vv. 10-12).

a. Some mocked (v. 10). This urgent and sincere invitation excited only opposition and ridicule by certain tribes.

b. Some with humble hearts come to Jerusalem (v. 11). In Judah God gave them one heart to accept the summons to unite in the Lord around the great Passover.

II. The Passover Kept (vv. 13-27).

1. Removal of heathen altars (vv. 13, 14). These altars were erected in Jerusalem in the time of Ahaz (28:24). Before there could be worship of the true God, all these traces of idolatry must be removed.

2. The Passover killed (v. 15). The zeal of the people was shown in their going forward with the service, though the priests were not ready.

3. The priests and Levites shamed (vv. 15-20). The zeal of the people put to shame the priests and the Levites. They were stimulated to perform their duties by the law of God as given by Moses. They even took charge of the killing of the Passover, since many of the officers were not sanctified so as to render this service for themselves. The Lord healed—that is, forgave the people.

4. The praise of glad hearts (vv. 21, 22). They continued for seven days in this glad service.

a. The Levites and priests sang God's praises daily on loud instruments (v. 21).

b. Hezekiah spoke comforting words to the Levites (v. 22) and commended them and their teaching of the knowledge of God.

c. They made confession of their sins to God (v. 22). This was the evidence that their action was genuine.

5. The Passover prolonged seven days (vv. 23-27). The king's object in prolonging the feast was to make a lasting impression upon the people so as to result in thorough conversion.

ALABAMA STATE FAIR PROMISES TO BE BIGGER

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 31 — Both agriculturally and piscatorially, the Alabama State Fair will be larger this year than at any time in its history. The Fair this year will throw open its gates Monday morning, Sept. 24, and from the way things are lining up now, farm products exhibits and the aquarium exhibit will far surpass anything ever attempted here.

Manager P. T. Strieder and President R. A. Brown have just recieved communications from I. T. Quinn, State Game and Fish Commissioner, that his department will send its collection of glass tanks here for the aquarium display. These tanks, added to the tanks that the management will bring here from Tampa, Florida, will give the Fair the greatest housing facilities for a fish exhibit ever placed under one roof in Alabama, and will give ample tank space for an exhibit of all fish native to the rivers and streams of the State. As a matter of fact, with so much tank space available, it is more than likely that many live salt water specimens will be found swimming around in the tank compartments by the time the State Fair opens its gates to the public.

Commissioner Quinn will not only assign his department to take charge of the fish exhibit, but has indicated that he would come to Birmingham a few days prior to the beginning of the Fair, to supervise the glacing of the tanks an dthe transfer of the fish, but has stated that he will more likely be here for the entire week, supervising the aquarium display at the Fair, and also taking part in the bird display which promises to be more interesting than ever this year. The tanks will carry an indirect lighting effect so that the display will be open to visitors both night and day.

In connection with the agricultural display this year, Messrs. Strieder and Brown have received assurance from Commissioner of Agriculture Seth P. Storrs, at Montgomery, that he and his department will lend every assistance in making the agricultural features of the Fair a hundred per cent in all lines. In this connection, it is mentioned that Dr. M. F. Jackson, agricultural specialist for the T. C. I. Company has been placed in complete charge of the agricultural exhibits at the fair, and also will serve as director of the mammoth flower show. The flower show will be placed in the center aisle of the agricultural building, and will run the complete length of the building.

Mrs. W. W. Harmon is director in charge of the woman's work and fine arts department; the poultry show is to be under the auspices of the Birmingham Interstate Poultry Association; and the rabbit show will come under the supervision of the Alabama Cooperative Marketing Association, with J. T. Rust as director in charge. Mrs. W. R. Bonacker will be in charge of the canary show and caged bird exhibit. Premium lists are off the press and those interested in obtaining one should write the Alabama State Fair and it will be mailed immediately.

VANISHING LOTS

Riverhead, N. Y.—After a four-year search for three lots which he bought for $32.38 at the Suffolk County tax sale in 1930, Andrew Anderson reported the lots have vanished. The Board of Supervisiors authorized the county treasurer to refund the purchase price. It was not explained why the previous owner paid taxes on apparently imaginary property.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Alice Strock Deason was born September 30, 1878, at Verbena, Alabama, the youngest of twelve children of W. B. and Susan Price Strock.

Her maternal grandfather Price was one of the first residents of Verbena, as were her mother's relatives, the Roys, among the pioneer Baptist preachers in missionary efforts in central Alabama.

Early in girlhood she professed faith in Jesus Christ and was baptized into the fellowship of Verbena Baptist church.

September 7, 1909 she was married to Judge E. B. Deason, a former Probate Judge of Chilton County. Her pastor, Rev. J. W. Partridge, officiated.

Two years ago, her health failed; she patiently bore her suffering, and in cheerful service to those about her, she waited the call which came on Sunday, August 19, 1934, at her home in Boulder, Colorado.

Thursday, August 23, in Verbena Baptist church, a former pastor, C. J. Bentley, who officiated at the burial of her parents, conducted her funeral in the presence of a crowded house. Relatives and friends came from adjoining neighborhoods.

Mrs. Evelyn Buford, her first music teacher, presided at the organ. The choir, made up of former friends, led the song service, and Mrs. Dubose sang "Crossing the Bar."

Active pallbearers, under direction of J. Mell Martin, were W. A. Willis, C. Fenn Jones, Irby Deramus, Tom Powell, John Deramus and Tom Littlejohn. Honorary pallbearers were H. B. Oliver, Will Kemp, H. T. Pipes, Mack Broadhead, L. F. Gerald, E. E. Upchurch, C. W. Mitchell, and J. R. Mullins.

Her body rests in the family lot in Verbena Cemetery. Her spirit rests with her God, waiting for the coming of her loved ones. Surviving are her husband, Judge E. B. Deason, and two sons, William and Charles, of Boulder, Colorado; one sister, Mrs. M. K. Prescott, of Indianapolis, Indiana; five brothers, John A., Wm. H., Judson, Dr. C. S., and Prof. S. J. Strock; many nieces and nephews. — Affectionately, by request, C. J. Bentley.

SINGING AT ENTERPRISE

There will be an all day singing at Enterprise schoolhouse next Sunday, September 9. The old sacred Harp and Christian Harmony books will be used. Everybody invited to come and help out in the singing.

CEMETERY CLEANING

Those interested in the cemetery at Providence, Beat 13, are requested to meet at 8:00 o'clock Thursday morning, September 13, for the purpose of cleaning off the grounds. Please bring proper tools.—J. H. Martin.

"Brother Jones," said the deacon, "can't you all donate some small contribuition to de fund for fencing in the cullud cemetery?"

"I dunno as I can," replied Brother Jones. "I don't see no use in a fence around a cemetery. You see, dem what's in there can't get out, and dem what's out sho' doan wanta get in."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

There has been much discussion of the newspaper statements made to the effect that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is opposed to federal aid to the United States merchant marine. The stories were based on a letter said to have been written by the Secretary to Representative Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia, chairman of the House of Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. The "kick-back" was to have been expected. Sentiment for an American Merchant Marine has grown rapidly all over the country, since the World War. Secretary Wallace, who has been busy with farm problems, probably does not realize the growth or extent of this sentiment.

In his letter to Representative Bland, Mr. Wallace is quoted as stating in part: "Any further governmental encouragement of the shipping industry by subsidy or similar measures would tend to divert the energies of our people in some degree into shipping as compared with other industries. Is it not possible that it would be more to our economical advantage as a nation to concentrate on the exploitation of our rich internal resources, leaving partly to foreigners the carrying trade, in which our natural advantages over them are not as great as in other forms of production? In a sense, too, allowing foreigners to carry a large percentage of our trade promotes our commodity exports, for it means that foreigners have more purchasing power with which to buy them."

Secretary Wallace's arguments give evidence of the fact that he has not considered the shipping question very carefully. First, it may be said, we need a merchant marine as an adjunct to our navy in time of war, in these troublesome times this is important, and there is no use in building a navy for defense unless we have a merchant marine as a complement to that navy in time of trouble. Again, the American farmer needs the protection of a merchant marine as much as any other citizen. We hope to avoid war, but there is every chance that European nations will be involved in another one before another ten years rolls around. If we neglect our merchant marine, who will carry the products of American farmers for export, when in case of trouble other shipping nations are using their marines for their own national purposes? Without an American marine those commodities which Mr. Wallace wants to export would be left rotting on our wharves. Once again, if we maintain no merchant marine competition, what will protect our farmers and other shippers from high rates and gouging on the part of European shippings trusts? Without ships of our own we will be at the mercy of Europe's shipping interests.

Mr. Wallace says we ought to abandon our merchant marine ideas because other nations are naturally better fitted for running the world's shipping. We may well doubt this, but conceding it is true for argument's sake, the same might be said of agriculture. Crops can be raised in the Argentine, in Russia, in Canada and Australia, cheaper than in the United States, but Mr. Wallace would not recommend the abandonment of government aid to American farmers because these other countries have the "natural advantage" of cheap labor. And if we ship in foreign ships so foreigners can buy farm products of us, when our own shipping industry is destroyed we will lose a great deal more in purchasing power at home, from those Americans who have been deprived of a living.

But most important of all, perhaps, from the farmer's standpoint, is the fact that in these days of bitter rivalry among nations for foreign trade, American farmers must depend on American shipping to cooperate with and aid them in finding foreign markets. British French and German ships are not going to do this. They will be looking after the interests of their own shippers. If we have no marine of our own we will be at their mercy. In peace and in war, for protection and for foreign trade we need a merchant marine flying the Stars and Stripes.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

One of the remarks we hear most frequently these days when men are discussing the economic system is that things would be all right if we could just get confidence to return. This naturally leads to the inquiries of just what has happened to public confidence, and when is it coming back:

It is admitted that the banks are full of money. But the money is idle. It is going no place, and merely printing more money will not help because this will go back into the banks and go to sleep. A few months ago it was fashionable to blame bankers. We were told that the banks were refusing to lend money to perfectly good creditors, and the threat was made that if banks didn't "loosen up" it might be necessary for the government to do the lending in their stead.

Well, evidently it wasn't all the fault of the banks. Arrangements were made by Uncle Sam to lend money directly to industry. Federal reserve banks and the R. F. C. were given authorization by congress to lend directly to private industry. But private industry is not borrowing any more from the governmental agencies than it did from the individual banks.

Although the purse strings have been open, the reserve banks, according to late figures, have made only a few more than 200 loans for a total of only a little more than $200,000. And although the R. F. C. has $300,000,000 which it can lend to industry it is said that up to this time it has only been able to lend about seven million. Evidently something besides the banks was at fault. Industry doesn't seem to want the money, and the principal reason must be the same old story —lack of confidence in the business future.

The situation cannot be entirely assuring to the professional advocates of the New Era. They have been making everything over to restore prosperity but they have neglected to find the principal ingredients in the elixir, which is confidence. The monetary plans of the New Dealers have failed to come up to expectations. Uncertainty about money has helped to destroy confidence, just as have the numerous, often conflicting regulations about business. The drouth, following the AAA crop destruction program, has served further to unsettle business.

Just what then is needed? It goes without saying that what we require is a restoration of confidence. This can not be brought about by further experimentation. It must come through the adoption of sound money policies and a program of economy, retrenchment wherever possible, and a move toward the balancing of the national and state budgets.

LAW OF NATURE SUPREME

That the law of nature, which Tugwell would thwart, is supreme, and will assert its guiding influence on the administration policies, is shown in a number of recent developments. Secretary Wallace said that he has decided to suspend the crop reduction plan next year, but may take it up in 1936. He may believe that he made the decision, but in the minds of many he will be credited with no more than recognizing the effect of the drought, and acting as the circumstances dictated.

The combination of a sub-seasonal business decline has forced the administration to look into the economic effect of trying to stifle competition in a market so long ruled by competition that men can think in no other terms. The President clearly saw his weakness, and took prompt and aggressive corrective measures when he ruled for a fifteen per cent deviation from fixed prices on government bids.

On the eve of the vast September refinancing program, the Treasury Department received a shock when no par bid was received on an issue of $15,000,000 Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds. According to one account, this is the first time in history that an issue of bonds unconditionally guaranteed by the federal government has been sold at so low a price. The bids above 99 were for only $128,000 of the issue. The bonds are fortified by mortgages on homes, and the appraisals have been conservative in most instances. The inference is that the bids reflected a want of faith in the stability of federal credit.

A move on the part of the Treasury to brace the government bond market, Friday, by purchases above the market quotation in New York was frustrated in part when brokers, acting under a rule of the exchange, declined to execute the orders until all smaller lots had been purchased at the same price. The sale of government bonds was the largest daily volume since war time. A fair inference is that the Treasury worked against a natural corrective in an effort to support its credit. But it can not succeed, for the act itself weakens faith in federal credit.

While commercial loans have grown in volume recently, the government has found no way to compel bankers to lend about $1,900,000,000 in excess reserve that they are holding above the requirements of law. This is a measure of their inability to sense a stabilized trend in the federal policy. It is a corrective of very important power.

Rising unemployment relief costs and the probable necessity for spending more than the $525,000,000 set aside for drought relief probably will force a revision of this program in the interest of economy.

Thus it seems that President is accumulating an impressive volume of evidence to justify him is policy changes that will strengthen confidence and recover to his purpose the support of many who wish to cooperate under his leadership.—Indianapolis News.

Cheer up. Maybe by the time the rest of the world gets around to communism, Russia will be cured.

It is said that it got so hot recently in Southern Maryland the watermelons exploded in the fields. Well Wouldn't you expect regimented melons to do some firing.

Prof. Tugwell called those who don't agree with his AAA program Tory obscurantis, and we understand that General Johnson is peeved because he didn't think of that one first.

One section of the New Deal gives, as the solution of the unemployment problem, the transfer of millions of city workers to farm life. Another sertion insists we have too many inefficient farmers and suggests that they be transferred to the cities. That's one of the weaknesses of this New Deal. It has no steering committee.

The hardest job that we can think of would be selling clothes brushes in a nudist colony.

Science says that fishes have no tongues. We always wondered why they referred to the fellow who couldn't talk back to his wife as "a poor fish".

IS CRITICISM PROPER?

This is still a country of expressed opinion and will continue to be. There will be criticism of administrative policies no matter what party is in power and it is right that there should be. Calling those who do the criticising narrow, selfish, wicked or immoral will not stop the criticism. It will only tend to make it more severe.

It would seem that during the past weeks there has been a special vocal effort on the part of some of those who are supporting the New Deal to condemn those who do not agree with them and have the courage to say so, in spite of the general regimentation that is going on. But it is to be emembeed that criticism is always a healthful sign in a government like ours. It is an indication that democracy is not dead. The only places where criticism is now silenced are countries like Russia, Germany and Italy which have forsaken the paths of democracy and gone in for complete regimentation which means nothing less than autocratic dictatorship.

Certainly no plan, governmental or otherwise, if it is safe and sound, will suffer any by having the full light of public opinion thrown on it. If such plan or policy has any weaknesses, its public discussion will tend to bring out the defects and give opportunity for revision and improvement. Nobody is infallible, not even a college professor, and the man who seeks to answer criticism by invective and questioning of motive, shows that he either lacks temperament or a good case or perhaps both.

Nor is it a complete answer to demand that the critic immediately present a substitute plan which is better than the one attacked. Perhaps what is required may not be a substitute plan but a paring down of the plan already produced or the elimination of some of its features. As the Saturday Evening Post well said recently, "If a man is about to jump out of a window, it is not necessary to find something else for him to do; to stop him is sufficient."

Certainly criticism is as legal and fair now as it was in the years from 1929 to 1933. The present leadership which was then in the minority showed no hesitation in criticising the administration then in power. The smearing started in early and kept up until March, 1933. It is true that we are now in the midst of a seriius crisis, but the same was true back in the hectic years which preceded 1933. Certainly constructive criticism now is as necessary and in as good taste as it was then.

What is true of the individual is equally true of the newspaper. Surely that portion of the press which may disagree with some of the phases of present policies, state and national, has the right to criticise without having charged against it, as General Johnson of the NRA is said to have charged, in an address at Chicago not long ago, that many newspaper editors were guilty of being parties of the suppression, garbling and coloring of news.

Undoubtedly the American press is as free of that taint as any press in the world. Those who are acquainted with newspaper procedure in Europe with its schools of state control and propaganda, will be of the opinion that the American press is the freest and the most unbiased in the world.

ANTIQUATED VIEWS

Frank A. Garbutt writes in the Los Angeles Times to the effect that "we have been soaking the rich to feed the poor which soaking must end when the rich are all soaked out of (they are half soaked already) and we have killed the incentive to promote new business."

This man also says that "we have been running around in circles, pegging the price of wheat, killing unborn pigs, paying for ploughing cotton under, thus ruining our greatest export market," and so on.

He says that "it is silly for a nation to have hard times when it is able to produce enough necessities and luxuries to give every citizen all he needs. The United States can produce more foods than we can eat."

Is this man Garbutt criticizing his government? Is he of the antiquated who believe that government has no business interfering with nature? Doesn't he understand that if the rich were not being loaned to support the poor, there would be no New Deal? If he doesn't look sharp the AAA or the ERA or the AWOL will get him.

Is it not some quality of treason to say that destruction of cotton or of swine or of wheat is wrong? This man Garbutt must be without hope of getting himself on the federal payroll. He is opposing politicians and a great army which is living on the government. He is a Tory. He is a Democrat. He is wasting his voice on the Old Order.—Charleston News and Courier.

One of the industries which has been regimented during the past year or so is the oil industry. Every effort has been made to bring production in line with consumption, so that a fair price might be maintained and the great oil business brought out of the depression.

It would seem that if any industry could be regimented and regulated by state and national government it would be petroleum. The number of wells is limited and cannot be concealed. Moreover, most of the great petroleum companies seem to be in favor of regimentation and regulation.

Yet the government control of the oil industry has not been an unqualified success. In spite of the care of state and national officials, production continues to run ahead of consumption. Illegal, or so-called "hot-oil" is produced, made over into gasoline, and sold. So great is this practice that the whole price structure of the oil industry is threatened.

In an interview in New York, Sir Henry Deterding, president of the Royal Dutch and Shell industries, who came over here from Europe recently, is quoted by the Times as stating:

"Hot oil, or illegal production and distribution of oil in the United States has brought about a world oil situation which amounts to paralysis of the industry.

"It is nothing short of amazing that you have regulatory laws to meet this situation and yet do nothing about it. Some people do not like the law and order, but we must have it. The only trouble in America is "hot oil'."

The government may have done nothing about it as Sir Henry intimates, but it has tried to do something about it. But all "cracking down" has been in vain, although the oil problem has probably caused Secretary Ickes more sleepless nights than anything he has encountered since he went into office.

Cracking down seems to do little good. The trouble is that in spite of the New Deal it is still difficult to repeal the laws of supply and demand. There is a greater supply of oil in the great East Texas field than there is any demand for. Each operator is anxious to get it out of the ground before the other fellow takes it away from him. Confusion and bootleg oil are the results.

But the point to be remembered is that if the government, with most of the oil magnates approving, cannot regulate an industry which is located in a comparatively few spots, how much more difficult is it going to be to regiment successfully other industries which cannot be checked up so easily?

It is very likely that until nature cuts down the supply of Texas oil by reducting the gas pressure, the efforts of man along the same line will not be entirely successful.

Someone has said that woman is still embarassed when her petticoat shows, not because it shows, but because it shows she still belongs to the old-fashioned school that still believes in petticoats.—Linn Record.

NATURE STILL POTENT

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, is among those who are asking for a change in the AAA policy of restricting wheat and corn production for next year. Senator Capper believes that the farmers should be permitted to use their own judgment in their acreage and makes the point that fall sown wheat makes the quickest and best pasture available.

Senator Capper also points out the fact that "we are by no means assured of a normal crop in 1935." Senator Capper is undoubtedly right in this respect. Not even the Brain Trust can promise us normal crop conditions next year. That is up to Providence. Very often years of scanty rainfall seem to follow one another, and certainly the American people do not want to flirt with famine.

Back in war times the trouble with wheat production started when the government urged the farmers to sow wheat to the limit. When the crash came it took the farmers down with it, and they have never entirely recovered from the blow. The second government experiment was not in the way of increased production, but in reduced acreage. It would appear now that this experiment, if it is carried out year after year, may lead to disaster even worse than the one which followed the post-war agricultural collapse. Man has never yet been able to overcome the laws of nature, and it is doubtful whether he can do so now.

REED OF MISSOURI AGAIN

One old fashioned statesman who does not seem to fear that he may win the appellation "Troy" by criticism of the New Deal is former Senator James A. Reed, of Missiouri, who in a recent interview in the Detroit News is quoted as saying that "if the government would only realize that the people of this country have brains—business brains — then we might have a chance to get back to normal times."

The former Missouri senator is also quoted as stating: "What the government should do is to repeal these stupid laws and discharge the boards and bureaus interfering with business and give the people a chance to run their own affairs. If they can't solve their problems, they are unsolvable. The present administration went into office promising to take government out of business but it has put government into business to a greater extent than ever was the case under any tyrant."

Mr. Reed is quoted as adding that any little improvement in business has been in spite of what the government has done and not because of it, stating: "If there has been any improvement, it has been wrought by plunging the country into debt, by broadcasting money. It's just like a man who borrows money and, for a time, has some to spend, but who in the end must bear the burden of his borrowing."

The federal regulations that have been imposed upon the cotton business are provoking many farmers to bitter resentment. Of all people on earth, our cotton farmers like to have their full freedom. Many of them feel that their rights have been unduly abridged by the cotton laws, and they are free to say they don't like it a bit. This constitutes one phase of the apparently growing nation-wide sentiment that the New Deal has gone too far in the direction of suppressing individual liberty and industrial effort.

By ANN PAGE

FOOD shoppers this week-end will find pork prices high, beef the same, and lamb lower. The drought, affecting milk supplies, is raising the prices of butter and cheese. Unaffected by the drought in North America, bananas are a leading value this week. Try them fried, broiled, or in ice cream. Ample supplies of home-grown fruits put grapes, cantaloupes and prunes on the low-priced list. As for vegetables — tomatoes, coming from nearby truck gardens, are top-notch and cheap, and good values will be found in celery and Boston lettuce.

From the above information on what is cheap and good, our experts recommend the following menus as giving the most for your money:

Low Cost Dinner

Cold Beef Loaf
Potato Cucumber Salad
Scalloped Potatoes
Bread and Butter
Sliced Bananas with Custard
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Boiled Ham with Cabbage and Potatoes
Tomato, Cucumber and Lettuce Salad
Bread and Butter
Fresh Fruit Cup
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced) Milk

Very Special Dinner

Avocado Pear Cocktail
Fried Chicken, Cream Gravy
Stewed Tomatoes and Okra
Lettuce Salad
Banana Ice Cream
Tea or Coffee (hot or iced) Milk

Safeguarding All Interests

The Bell Telephone System is so organized and regulated that your interests as a user of the service are safeguarded, as well as the interests of the 800,000 or more individuals who have invested their savings in the business. The welfare of the army of 270,000 Bell telephone workers who build, maintain and operate the business is equally safeguarded. To favor any one of these groups at the expense of the others would not only be poor judgment, but contrary to the fundamental policy of the business.

If the best interests of all the people are to be served, then revenues should be sufficient to assure the continuation of the best possible grade of telephone service and to insure the continued financial integrity of the business.

The earnings of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company during the best years of its history have never exceeded 7% on its investment. During the past three years the average was less than 5%, and in 1933 it dropped to about 4%.

Such inadequate earnings might easily have endangered the foundation structure of the business and hampered the service but for the Company's farsighted policy of retaining each year a small part of the earnings to care for financial stress during unprofitable years.

As a result of this sound policy, telephone service has not been allowed to suffer, but on the contrary has been constantly improved during the past four years. And the scope of the service has been extended to the far corners of the earth, so that you can now talk to almost anyone, anywhere, at any time, quickly, and at a surprisingly small cost.

In this way the telephone company has fulfilled and will strive to continue to fulfill its obligation to the public, that of furnishing the best possible service at a cost as low as is consistent with financial safety.

Devaughn Says Support Ticket

To the Republicans of Chilton County:

I do not desire to assume the attitude of telling you how or what to do, but because of the attitude of some of the Republicans of Chilton County just now, I desire to express some of my thoughts through The Union-Banner, hoping that the same will be of benefit to someone.

First, I will say that I admire the principles of government of the Republican party of the United States. Those were principles that made us the outstanding nation of the world in everything that stands for good. It was the promulgation of the principles of the Republican party in the government of Chilton County that has made ours one of the outstanding small rural counties, not only in Alabama but in the whole Southland.

We have lived on a cash basis and kept within our income, which is a standard we should be proud of and should strive to maintain. I believe we are going to do this.

This election is the most important one that Chilton County has had since I have been old enough to observe politics. We are to fill practically every important office in Chilton County. Of all the times I have ever seen, this is the one when we can least afford to lose our heads and do the wrong thing.

I am told that just 24 years ago the Republicans of the county made the mistake of electing their enemy to an important office, and for the past 18 years the county has been paying great sums of money on debts and interest.

My friends, the Republicans of Chilton County are going to elect their officers in November. We need not fear the Democrats, because in the first place, they are good people, and in th second place, there are not enough of them to elect a single county officer.

Will you please compare the candidates of the two parties? They are all good men, of course, and men whom we appreciate. But for experience and efficient service our ticket stands head and shoulders above the Democratic ticket.

Out of the eleven candidates, we have seven who have been tried and found good and true servants. In the election of our ticket a majority of the cases will be merely a promotion well-earned by good and faithful service.

The other men of our ticket who have not been tried are good men, true Republicans, substantial citizens, men in whom we can place the utmost confidence.

Knowing as I do of Mr. J. Z. Mims than of any of the other candidates, I would like to say it has been my happy privilege to observe his life ever since I have been old enough to know anyone. I have known him all the while to be an upright Christian gentleman. He is a man whom any political party or civic organization may well be proud to have as a leader. He is a man whose life and conduct is worthy of imitation.

I have known him as a true and faithful teacher in the school room and a faithful worker in his church and Sunday school. Mr. Mims believes in progress. He believes in education. He is interested in agriculture. He is interested in rural home life. He is now living on his farm south of Clanton.

You may not know it, for you do not hear him boasting, but Mr. Mims is one among the best farmers in Chilton County. He tells me he has not, of necessity, bought anything to eat at his home, except his flour, sugar and coffee, for the past four years.

It goes without saying that Mr. Mims has served well in the office he now holds. You seldom, if ever, go into or around his office but that you find him doing something for someone.

Last, but not least, may I call your attention to the fact tha Mr. Mims seems to be a vote-getter, which is a very important ingredient in a political leader. Now, my friends, with a man at the head of our ticket in whom our people put the utmost confidence, and with as fine a line of candidates as we have to back him up, we would be the most ungrateful people in all the world, should we let the Democrats come within a mile of success this fall.

If we have been at it, let us stop our murmuring and complaining and quiet ourselves like men, put our shoulders to the wheel, boost our party and every one of our candiates, and success will be ours.—Yours for the success of the Republican party.—A. M. Devaughn.

BAPTIST CHURCH TO BE BUILT

The people of Mt. Carmel community, the neighborhood surrounding the old Childress cemetery, met on last Wednesday night at 7:00 and organized themselves into working units, such as building committee, entertainment committee, etc., for the purpose of building a Baptist church on the cemetery grounds. We have felt the need of a church here for some time, since many people of the surrounding communities bury their dead here and then too, because the community is being settled up and we wish to have a church as a center.

MARBURY 4; RANDOLPH 3

In the first game of the finals, Marbury defeated Randolph four to three, but had to go 11 innings to do it, although they secured 14 hits to Randolph's eight.

Marbury scored once in the first inning, and twice in the second. Randolph scored their first run in the third, and two more in the fifth, to knot the count. After that it was a nip-and-tuck affair until the 11th, although Marbury passed up several chances.

In the 11th, after Randolph had failed to score, Marbury came in; Powell Dennis and Culver singled in succession, Powell scoring with the winning run.

CLANTON WINS TOURNAMENT

In the last game of the finals, the championship game, Clanton won from Marbury, 5 to 0.

The whole Clanton team played as they have not played all season, turning in an air-tight defense, not bobbling once. With this, they rapped Post, Marbury hurler, for eight safe blows. Marbury's four errors were costly. Clanton scored only one earned run, that off Simms' long single in the eighth.

Watkins showed his appreciation of this fine support by pitching his heart out for a shut-out. He allowed only four hits, all singles; only four men got on base, and two of these were trapped off; only two Marbury men were left on base. He allowed no bases on balls.

In seven of the nine innings, only three men faced Watkins. In the first, second, fourth, seventh, eighth and ninth, it was a 3-up and 3-down affair. In the third, after two were out, Grant singled, but Dennis grounded out. In the fifth, with one out, Mitchell singled, and was out at second when he tried to steal. In the sixth Tatum opened with a single, Grant popped up, Dennis singled, Tatum going to third (the only Marbury man to get that far). Then Culver shot a hot liner to Jones, who stepped on third doubling Tatum off.

It was a real championship game.

GOODYEAR MAKES A NEW DRESSING FOR TREE USE

A tire manufacturing company does not necessarily confine its activities to building tires but also makes hundreds of other products, according to Mr. L. E. Diefenderfer local dealer for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

"The layman might think manufacture of a product used in tree surgery was one of the last things a tire company would think of," said Mr. Diefenderfer. "However, this is not the case—as is proved by the tree dressing made by Goodyear.

"Modern tree surgery insures correct and beautiful growth of trees by proper pruning operations, but the woody portion of the tree, thus exposed, is open for insect and weather attack unless properly protected by a suitable dressing. Goodyear has developed such a dressing.

"This dressing can be spread with a paint brush in any temperature—below zero or at 120 degrees in the shade! It adheres tenaciously to the wood and contains nothing injurious to tree growth. Drying quickly, it gives a shiny black appearance that is attractive.

"All forms of vandalism, such as initial cutting and the like, invite insect attack; and the trees should have immediate protection, while all fire sears should be cleaned and dressing applied.

"This is just one example of the many products that has no connection with tires or automobiles," Mr. Diefenderfer concluded.

The opening song was sung by the chairman, followed with prayer by Bro. Jake Henley.

Directors for the afternoon were Cecil Yeargan, John Devaughn, Arthur Williams, Carson Boockholdt, Raymond Brigance, Jake Henley, Ed Wilkins, Lorenza Williams, Prof. C. M. Billingsley, Inez McKee, Miss Zora Mae Tucker, Mrs. Zella Scott, Inez Williams and the closing song was by Prof. Billingsley. We were dismissed with prayer by Jake Henley.

Several quartets were enjoyed during the afternoon. Pleasant Grove, Maple Springs, Bethsalem, Indian Grave and Pleasant Valley were represented. We invite you, together with all other singers and lovers of music, on the first Sunday in November, as there won't be any singing here in October on account of the all day singing at the courthouse on that date.

Organists for the afternoon were Prof. C. M. Billingsley, Mrs. Lorenza Williams, Mrs. Zella Scott and Mr. Brigance.

Remember that visitors are welcome here. Come.

Mr. Doub Huddleston and Mr. J. W. Hayes spent Monday in Tuskegee.

Miss Bonnie Clyde Griffin spent a few hours here Monday with friends.

CANE CREEK

Things around here are picking up considerably. The old time singing was enjoyed Saturday and Sunday by a large number. We were glad to have visitors. Everyone is always welcome at Cane Creek. We did not have any Sunday school. We gave up the time to the singers, but we hope to meet next Sunday at 10 o'clock for our Sunday school, and Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days. We will not have preaching Saturday night—just Saturday, Sunday and Sunday night. Everybody come and hear what Bro. Robinson has to tell us. If you come for any good, you will receive it.

Our B. Y. P. U. is still moving. We had a large crowd out Sunday night. Still some of our main members were absent. We hope they will be present next time.

We are sorry to give up one of our best workers, Mr. Virgil Robinson. He is leaving September third for Auburn to attend school. We wish him the best of luck and everything for the good.

Next Sunday afternoon has been set to begin our singing society again. We hope we can have a success. We have several singers who have promised to come. We will have Friendship class with us. Everyone is invited to come and be with us. Bring your song books and be here at 2 o'clock.

MEETINGS CONTINUE AT SUNSHINE TABERNACLE

Rev. E. J. Orange, who has been conducting a revival at Sunshine Tabernacle, about five miles east of Clanton, asks us to announce that meetings are being held at that place the rest of this week, and probably longer.

Announcement will be made Sunday night as to whether or not the meeting will continue into next week.

Rev. Orange states that the attendance has been exceptionally good so far, and he extends a cordial invitation to everyone to attend the meetings that are to come.

J. M. Deramus, of Haynes, was a visitor in Clanton Wednesday.

NOTICE!

Our store will be closed all day next Monday on account of religious holiday.

BEN'S

FRUIT FOR THE ORPHANS

Rev. J. W. Jones, moderator of the Chilton County Baptist Association, says several hundred fruit jars were given out to people in the association to be filled with fruits and vegetables for the children at the Baptist Orphanage at Troy.

Rev. Jones advises that those who have their jars filled and ready to deliver should leave the same at the Scott-Willis Grocery Store in Thorsby.

PREACHING AT POPLAR SPRINGS

Editor Union-Banner:

Please announce in your paper that Rev. W. S. Cox will preach at Poplar Springs the third Saturday night and Sunday and Sunday night in this month. Everybody has a special invitation to come and hear him. He is an old minister of the gospel and we feel sure he will deliver some good messages.

Our Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. are progressing nicely. Our B. Y. P. U. had a nice social last week at the home of Mrs. G. B. Jones. Everyone enjoyed it to the fullest extent. We invite visitors to attend our church at any and all times. You will always find a hearty welcome here.

ENTERPRISE CLUB MEETS

The Enterprise home demonstration club met Tuesday afternoon, September 4th, at the schoolhouse with only a few members present. Our subject was "Late Summer and Fall Gardening," which was enjoyed by all. We also elected new officers for the year: President, Mrs. F. J. Thomas; vice president, Mrs. C. B. Stroud; secretary, treasurer and reporter, Mrs. C. C. Wilkins; community leader, Mrs. A. L. Pierce and Mrs. C. B. Stroud; project leaders, Mrs. F. J. Thomas and Mrs. J. C. Boockholdt.

We hope to have a larger attendance at our next meeting. We want to urge all of our members to come.

There is lots that we can learn at these meetings that will help us along and if you don't come and get the information, you have missed something good for you and your family. So be sure and come to all of our meetings.—Reporter.

Mrs. C. N. Parnell attended the home demonstration club at Auburn Friday through Monday. On Saturday afternoon she addressed the state council of the womens home demonstration clubs.

Anyone wishing to borrow the 10 cents per pound before the 12-cent applications are received, are requested to get in touch with Mr. Welch at the county agent's office.

DEVAUGHN'S CONCERT AT VERBENA WAS GOOD ONE

Prof. W. M. Devaughn promised his friends an enjoyable time if they would attend his concert at Verbena last Friday night. He made good his promise—the folks were there too.

Not nearly all of the numbers arranged for were presented, on account of lack of time, but the crowded audience was held rapt for nearly two hours.

Commissioners-Gasoline

ing, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Commissioners Court, that we call a meeting at the courthouse on ..... and request all parties who have made charges against the handling of the county's gasoline or who know of any irregularity in the handling of the county's gasoline in the county to come before the court at ..... and make such charges known to the commissioners court in open meeting.

I recommend that the above resolution be adopted.—L. H. Reynolds, Judge of Probate.

This resolution was adopted by the court, but they did not fill in the blanks for date of the public meeting.

In lieu of the foregoing resolutions and recommendations, the following motion was made by Commissioner Atchison:

I move that the Court appoint Commissioners Duke and Cobb to go to Montgomery and have a conference with Mr. Tucker of the state gas tax department, pertaining to the claim filed in this court. Also that the said two commissioners Duke and Cobb get up all records from J. E. Easterling, gas truck driver, which were not available to the examiner of the state department at the time the examination was made, and present them to the state gas tax deparment for their consideration. Also that the said Duke and Cobb make a report to this court at our next meeting.

The foregoing resolution was offered by Commissioner Atchison, seconded by Commissioner Cobb, and adopted by vote of the members of the court.

Relative to the matters under discussion concerning to the county gasoline business, the Commissioners issued the following signed statement for publication:

To the People of Chilton County:

By reason of the publicity given, apparently for political purposes, to the claim filed by the State Gas Tax Department against Chilton County on August 17, 1934, your county commissioners desire to make the following statement:

At the time this examination was made in the office of the Judge of Probate, at his request, the examiner who examined the delivery tickets of the gasoline truck driver did not have in his possession nor presented to him the delivery tickets for the months of May, June, July, August, September and October, 1933 (the period when I. P. Kennedy was clerk of the commissioners court.)

We are having signed duplicate copies of delivery tickets for this period presented to the State Gas Tax Department, which, when included in the report, will materially change the claim of the tax commission in respect to alleged shortage of county gasoline.

We believe the records and the examination, when properly and fully completed, will show that all gasoline not used in road machinery and county-owned trucks, was used to supply employees of the roads of Chilton County in going to and from their work on road duty. This practice and use of county gasoline was in effect and has been in effect for a number of years. This practice was also known to Judge Reynolds prior to the Republican primary of June 12, this year.

The chairman of our court, Judge Reynolds, in view of his own public statement, only saw fit to report this use of county gasoline to Mr. Tucker of the state gas tax department since the Republican primary of June 12, 1934. Part of this claim fild by the state tax commission, at the instigation of Judge Reynolds for the period from February 1, 1932 to November 1, 1932, shows 56,533 gallons of gasoline withdrawn, on which the state claims tax. The people will recall that this period was during the administration of the old commissioners, Vinson and Burnett, as we did not assume our duties as commissioners until January, 1933.

The court has authorized presenting of records to the state gas tax department of gasoline consumed by the county during May, June, July, August September and October, 1933, which records, we are advised, were not available to the examiner at the time examination was made. The gas truck driver, we are advised, has signed duplicate copies of all delivery tickets made and the same will be presented to the examiner.

We trust that the people of the county will withhold their opinion until all charges can be duly investigated, and that after a complete examination is made by the state gas tax department. When this is done we feel confident of the results. — Respectfully, J. E. Cobb, H. E. Robinson, J. C. Atchison, C. D. Duke.

Bankston Buried At Cooper Aug. 30

Funeral services for Lewis B. Bankston, age 19, were conducted by Rev. J. D. Hughes, at Chestnut Creek last Thursday. Burial was in charge of Martin.

Young Bankston was shot and killed instantly by his brother-in-law, Lawrence Edwards, at the latter's home in Bethel community about noon last Wednesday.

After the shooting Edwards came to Clanton and gave himself and his shot gun to the Sheriff, and was placed in jail. Up to this time no request for preliminary trial has been made, and it is likely that Edwards will remain in jail until the grand jury acts on his case.

Coroner Mell Martin went to the scene of the shooting and invesaigated the circumstances, but has issued no statement of verdict.

The investigation revealed that Edwards and his wife (who was Bankston's sister) had been separated for a while, and gone back together the day before the shooting. It is said that Bankston came to the Edwards home Wednesday protesting and abusing his sister for going back to live with Edwards. The argument that ensued between the two men terminated in the shooting of Bankston by Edwards.

GRAGG ERECTED PRIVATE HANGAR

Plane Will Be Kept at the Local Airport From Now On

Dr. Gragg's private airplane arrived in Clanton from Montgomery Monday morning, to make its permanent home at the Clanton airport, where the doctor has constructed a private hangar to accommodate his ship.

Since he purchased his plane about a month ago, Dr. Gragg has kept it at the municipal airport in Montgomery, awaiting the construction of a hangar here.

It has been hoped for some time that the construction of a hangar at the Clanton airport would be included in the government's construction plans at the field. During recent months prospects for a hangar seemed to have grown dim, and Dr. Gragg determined that he would erect a hangar of his own.

He secured lease of property of Mr. Ed Miller immediately adjacent to the airport property on the north side, and began building his hangar last week. It was practically complete Monday when his ship arrived from Montgomery.

Progress of work on the landing field has been highly satisfactory during the past two weeks of favorable weather. In addition to county grading machinery, the Town of Clanton has cooperated with the use of the caterpillar tractor, and splendid progress has been made.

Under direction of Mr. Cone, relief work director and engineer, plans have been approved for constructing the two runways extending northeast and southwest all the way to the drainage ditch.

It is felt that if the practical plans of Mr. Cone had been adopted earlier in the program by those who preceded him, the Clanton airport would have been completed long ago.

Mr. Reuben Foss of Thorsby was a business visitor in Clanton Wednesday.

FRANK GREER DIED SUDDENLY

News was received by relatives in Clanton Monday of the sudden death of Frank Greer, age about 55, a railway conductor running out of Augusta, Ga. Mr. Greer was on duty with his train when he collapsed and died suddenly.

The deceased was born and reared in the vicinity of Clanton, the son of the late E. F. Greer and Mrs. Amanda Greer. He has lived in Augusta for several years, and has been employed as a railway conductor.

He is survived by his wife and two daughters, one of whom is married; his moher, Mrs. Amanda Greer, of Birmingham; one brother, Jesse Greer, of Augusta; three sisters, Mrs. M. D. Foshee, of Clanton, Mrs. Tom Lowe of Birmingham, and Mrs. Sallie Eiland of Montgomery.

The information received here Monday stated that burial would be in Augusta.

State Republican Candidates Enter

Edmund H. Dryer, of Birmingham is Candidate for Governor

Edmund H. Dryer, of Birmingham, has been nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor of Alabama, and has filed his qualifications with the Secretary of State at the capitol in Montgomery.

J. Frank Slone, of Blount County was nominated for Secretary of Agriculture, and has also filed his papers with the Secretary of State.

Other Republicans who have qualified as state candidates are Robert M. Sims, of Florence, for Secretary of State; J. E. Perry, of Wedowee, for position No. 2 on the Court of Appeals; William V. Dodd, of Carbon Hill, for State Treasurer.

Repblicans are hopeful of winning victories this year in several counties of Alabama, particularly in Chilton, St. Clair, Cullman, Shelby, Winston, Franklin and DeKalb.

It is said there was considerable opposition in Republican party ranks to putting out a state ticket, but that the power of National Committeeman, Oliver D. Street, was cast in favor of a state ticket, and a majority of the state committee stood with Mr. Street.

REV. W. M. OLIVE IS TO PREACH AT LIBERTY HILL

Rev. W. M. Olive of Tuscaloosa will preach at Liberty Hill the fifth Sunday in September at 11 o'clock. The public is cordially invited to hear Rev. Olive.

Rev. Olive is a former pastor at Liberty Hill, and was also pastor at the Clanton Methodist church back about 1912. His many friends over the county will be glad of the opportunity of hearing him again.—S. J. M. Webb.

GRAND JURY SESSION CALLED FOR NEXT WEEK

The grand jury of Chilton County will be in session next week, beginning Monday morning, September 17.

There are several important cases which will come before them for investigation.

WILLIAMS-ROBERTS WEDDING

A wedding of much interest to many people of Clanton and vicinity was that of Miss Gladys Williams to Mr. Jim Roberts, which was solemnized at 7:30 o'clock last Saturday evening. The ceremony was at the Clanton Methodist church in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Williams. She has held a responsible position in the Clanton office of the Alabama Power Company for several years. Mr. Roberts is a popular young man of Clanton, a son of the late James H. Roberts.

After the wedding ceremony the bride and groom left on a honeymoon trip to New Orleans and other points south.

Ellis Foshee Is Free Of Charges

Preliminary Trial Held Before Justice Sam Collins Monday

After preliminary trial Monday before Justice Sam Collins, Ellis Foshee was exonerated of blame for killing Hosea Garrett, negro, and released of all charges.

Evidence given by officers of Thorsby and others who were witnesses to the affray between Foshee and the negro proved that Foshee was justifiable in what he did in order to defend himself against attempted assault of the negro.

The negro died Saturday night, September 1st, after he was cut by Foshee, a young white man, early in the evening. The difficulty occurred on the streets of Thorsby.

Facts brought out in the trial Monday showed that the affair was brought about in essentially the same manner and under the circumstances as related in the reports of the case published last week.

WORK ON CLANTON AIRPORT IS TO BE FINISHED SOON

The Clanton Airport, under supervision of Mr. Floyd Smith, director of work, and Mr. Tom Tracy, foreman of the project, is nearing completion. When finished the field will cover sixty acres of land, with runways extending 2,400 feet NE and SW, and 1,800 feet NW and SE. Plans also call for the erection of a hangar on the landing field.

This project promises to be one of the outstanding CWA accomplishments in Chilton County. The location midway between Birmingham and Montgomery will make it a very popular airport for pilots flying over this route.

Dr. V. J. Gragg, who has been very active and influential in securing the location and erection of this airport for Chilton County and the city of Clanton, now has his own plane on the field, and has also erected a hangar for housing his ship.

Mr. J. W. Allen, who is on the field as transport pilot and instructor, invites everyone who is interested in flying to come out and he will be glad to cooperate with them in every way.

As soon as the field is fully completed it is planned to have an official opening day, when ships and pilots from the airports in this section will be invited to attend. There will also be various events of interest to the public held on the field that day. Announcement of the official opening day will be made some time in the near future.

MAZAR'S STORE PLANS OPENING

Mazar's, the big new store on Main Street, plans a gala opening sale which will begin on Saturday of next week. Meanwhile the management invites all to visit the new place and get acquainted on Saturday of this week.

Mazar's place is in the handsome new building recently remodeled by Renfroe Mullins, the owner, two doors east of the First National Bank. Mr. E. A. Lewis is manager in charge. Mr. Lewis announces that Mrs. W. C. Robinson, and her son, Gaston, will be connected with the new store.

According to plans announced by Mr. Lewis, Mazar's intends to bring to Clanton a very large and varied line of merchandise, consisting of dry goods, shoes, ready-to-wear and notions. He says:

"We are going to give the people of Clanton the highest class merchandise at the lowest possible prices; the latest styles in womens ready-to-wear. We will be able to outfit the whole family, men, women and children, with all brand new merchandise. We invite you to wait until we are fully ready in the next few days, and avail yourselves of the opportunity to do your fall shopping in Clanton's most modern department store, where you will be able to buy the latest and save money."

Our Local Political Situation And The Republican Nominees

[AN EDITORIAL]

In some respects the present political campaign in Chilton County is decidedly different from anything we have experienced in former years; in other respects, it is the same.

The main difference is in the fact that we have some Republicans openly opposing some of the Republican nominees. This campaign is like former ones in the fact that whatever is the result in the general election, the Republicans have the whole situation in their hands. If any one or all the Democratic candidates win, it will be because enough Republicans supported them to turn the trick. This is now just as it has been for many years.

There has probably never been a total absence of dissatisfaction toward the Republican nominees in any campaign. But there has never in previous years been open opposition to the extent that the sponsors of the dissatisfied element joined the Democrats in formulating a secret league and worked together with the Democrats in putting on a political rally, the sole purpose of which is to disseminate among the people propaganda detrimental to some or all of the Republican nominees.

At such a rally recently held Judge Reynolds is quoted by the Chilton County News as charging misuse of county gasoline and wanton waste of public funds by the present Commissioners Court. Further, the Judge is quoted as saying, "I will not endorse corruptness in public office."

A state examiner has recently gone into the gasoline business of the county, and reports that he found indications of county gasoline being used in private cars and trucks.

The Commissioners come back and charge, by inference if not directly, that the reason Judge Reynolds brought the gasoline business to investigation is because he is dissatisfied over getting defeated by Mr. Mims in the Republican primary. The Commissioners offer the assurance that they will properly explain and account for the alleged gasoline discrepancies just as soon as they have time to get around to it.

Some have offered the explanation that the "private cars" in which gasoline was put were, in reality, road cars, the gas for which, they say, the county has been furnishing for several years before the present Commissioners went into office. It is pointed out that the county once furnished the tags for these road cars, but now the road hands have to buy the tags, and the cars are thus listed as private cars. This, they say, accounts for a lot of the gasoline alleged to have been misused.

Regarding the spending of county funds, friends of the Commissioners point out that for the past two or three years tax receipts into the county treasury have been greatly diminished, and the Commissioners could not have spent much money if they had wanted to, because they did not have as much to spend as former commissioners.

The Union-Banner does not believe there is any occasion for serious division and dissatisfaction in the ranks of the Republican party at this time. We feel sure there is more soreness caused from personal feelings and differences than there is discontent brought about by corruption of county officials.

To say the least, it will be a hard job for anyone now to make charges and cuttingly criticize our present officials, and still make the people of the county believe he is altogether loyal to the Republican party.

Here is the most important fact to remember. If there is anything wrong with the administration of Chilton County's business, the Republican party can and will correct the error in due time. The Republican candidates and the Republican campaign have already declared that they do not endorse or condone wrongdoing in the gasoline business nor in the Commissioners Court. If wrong has been done, the Republicans want it corrected, and will correct it. That is the unqualified stand of our candidates in their pledge for the future.

What more can anybody ask than our candidates and campaign committee have offered the people of the county? In a letter in The Union-Banner, and signed by all the candidates a few weeks ago these statements are made:

"We pledge you now upon our honor as men that you can depend upon us to put into practice officially the principles which represent the interests and the welfare of the majority of the people of Chilton County. We appreciate the confidence that has been reposed in us, and we pledge that we will not fail you."

What more than the above pledge could anyone expect of an official? And have you any right to doubt the honesty, integrity, and reliability of the Republican candidates? Do you believe the Democrats could offer you more or come nearer to doing those things "which represent the interests and welfare of the majority of the people of Chilton County?"

Most all of the Republican nominees are men of tried character and proven integrity, having served as officials before. Those who have not been in public office heretofore are men from fine families, and have attained reputations above reproach. They are not responsible for any of the alleged bad things which some other official or employee may or may not have done. They have said they do not endorse or condone such bad things as may have been done. Then why in the name of high heaven should they be condemned and left without support of any citizen who professes to believe in good, honest, clean, efficient government?

The present Republican candidates are not responsible for what has happened in the gasoline business. Neither are they responsible for what happened in the Commissioners Court. The candidates are not arguing that point at all. In view of the discussions and charges that have been raised, regardless of the purpose or motive in raising them, the present candidates have done that which was their privilege and their duty—they have given their pledge that they stand for good government, and the speediest means of correcting errors that may have been made.

Therefore, we repeat, as we have said before, that the people of Chilton County can do no better than to keep the county's government in the hands of the Republicans who

OBITUARIES — IN MEMORY

It becomes necessary for us again to call attention to the fact that we make a charge of one cent per word for all obituaries over 150 words published in The Union-Banner. So, if you want an obituary, or in memory article, published about a departed friend or relative, it must be confined to not over 150 words, or else money order for the remainder should be included if sent by mail, as outlined above.

If obituaries are sent in containing over 150 words and no money accompanies same, it will be either omitted entirely or, if possible, condensed to come within the requirement, and published.

Commission Sets Property Values

Clearing Right-of-Way For the Selma Highway In the City Limits

A commission composed of M. D. Foshee, V. J. Elmore and W. J. Billingsley, were engaged Tuesday in assessing damages to property within the city limits of Clanton, incident to the clearing of right-of-way for the Selma Highway now under construction.

The commission considered the several cases where property was concerned, ranging all the way from one dollar up to two or three hundred dollars.

In clearing the right-of-way quite a bit of changes have been made. Houses have been moved, fences relocated, trees have been taken down, hedges destroyed, sidewalks torn up and rebuilt, etc. All of this work called for assessment of damages to property, which was carefully figured out and estimated by the commission.

The biggest problem of the right-of-way within the city is the construction of a storm sewer for a distance of several blocks west from Eighth Street, where a conflict developed between the new storm sewer and the city water mains and sewer lines. This, however, was not within the province of the commission to consider. It has been worked out by cooperation of the city authorities and the contractor doing the work.

TWO DIED HERE IN AUTO WRECKS

Epidemic of Accidents In Vicinity of Clanton Last Sunday

Two men died in the hospital at Clanton last Sunday as a result of injuries sustained in automobile wrecks on the highway near Clanton. Several others suffered minor to severe injuries in three collisions, all of which happened within a few hours.

Zem H. Sanders, age 32, from Jacksonville, Florida, was decapitated in the first smash-up early Sunday morning. He was traveling alone in a new Ford V-8 roadster, on his way to Hartselle, Ala., to see his wife. As he came over the Jasper Dennis hill at a high rate of speed his Ford crashed into an old Dodge loaded with negroes. The Ford turned over several times, and was completely demolished.

Mr. Sanders's head was crushed and his brains spattered all over the place. Martin's ambulance was summoned and brought him to the hospital, where he died in a few minutes. The negroes in the old Dodge were only slightly injured. The body of Mr. Sanders was prepared by Martin and sent to Hartselle, Ala. Mr. A. L. Sanders of Trenton, Fla., passed through here Monday on his way to Hartselle, stating that he would carry the body back to his Florida home for burial.

Campbell Morrison, age 45 years, died at the hospital Sunday night from injuries in a wreck at Oak Grove north of Jemison about noon Sunday. The dead man and a party of friends were returning to their home at DeFuniak Springs, Florida, from a trip to the World's Fair in Chicago. Their car, a new Chevrolet, crashed into a truck belonging to Mr. Andrew Davis, which is said to have been driven by his son, Arthur Davis.

Mr. Morrison sustained cuts and bruises about the head and face, internal injuries to the chest, a hip dislocation, both legs broken below the knees, and an ankle smashed. Martin's ambulance brought him to the hospital here, where he died Sunday night. Others in his party were slightly hurt.

The body was prepared for burial by Martin and sent to DeFuniak Springs Monday morning.

In the Oak Grove wreck a Mr. Cofer, who was walking along the highway near the scene was hit by one of the wrecked machines, knocked down, and sustained a broken leg.

The third collision happened Sunday afternoon on the highway at the golf course south of town. As Mr. E. H. Mims, accompanied by his wife, drove his Ford into the highway from a side road, a Chevrolet, drvien by a Mr. Davis, from Montgomery struck him, severely damaging both machines. No one was hurt in this wreck.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Samson Slays a Thousand Men With the Jawbone of an Ass.—Samson's difficulties with the Philistines are recorded in Judges 14 and 15. The climax came when Samson burned the Philistines' corn. Three thousand of the men of Judah went to Samson, demanding why he had done as he had to the Philistines, who were rulers over them. They bound him and delivered him to the Philistines. "And when he came unto Lehi, the Philistines shouted against him: and the Spirit of the Lord came mightily upon him, and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands loosed from off his hands. And he found a new jawbone of an ass, and put forth his hand, and took it, and slew a thousand men therewith." Judges 15: 14-15. The illustration is from Merian's story of the Bible in pictures, engraved in 1625. In the foreground Samson is killing the Philistines, and in the right background he is shown burning the Philistines' corn

CULL NON-LAYERS

Auburn, Ala.—The cost of feeding a non-laying hen is just as much as that of a high producer. The non-layers eat heartily and add to the flock expense without providing revenue. To make more profit, cull out the non-layers and poor layers, recommends H. R. Bailey, extension poultry specialist. "Early moulters as a rule, are poor producers," he said.

4-H CLUB BOY PRESENTED AN AUTO AT WORLD'S FAIR

Chicago, Ill.—Robert McCurdy, 19-year-old 4-H club boy of Oskaloosa, Iowa rode all night in an auto truck with his father to A Century of Progress and returned home in a shiny new Plymouth sedan, which didn't cost them a cent. It will replace an old car which has just about outlived its usefulness.

Robert won the car in a 4-H club story writing contest in which the Chrysler Motors is giving away five such cars to 4-H club folks to aid the movement in training boys and girls for useful lives.

The lad described in 66 words how he would use such a car, if he won it, to advance 4-H club work in his community. He promptly started to fulfill his promises by taking a load of club mates to the Iowa State Fair, and plans on taking a load to A Century of Progress for its educational benefits.

The car was presented before 5,000 people at the Chrysler speedway by Barney Oldfield, veteran auto racer.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—I. T. Quinn, the state commisisoner of game and fisheries, has announced that nine more counties have taken advantage of the amended 1932 squirrel law to move their hunting season back one month and start the season on November 1 instead of October 1.

These counties are Bibb, Chilton, Coosa, Hale, Macon, Perry, Pike, Randolph and Tuscaloosa. In making the switch they join Baldwin, Butler, Choctaw, Covington, Crenshaw, Dallas, Escambia, Lowndes, Mobile, Monroe, Montgomery, Washington, and Wilcox, which voted the change last year.

The opening of the squirrel season was moved up one month at the 1932 special session of the legislature, which fixed the dates from October 1 through December 31. An amendment to the act provided that on petition of at least 100 licensed hunters or landowners in a county to the commissioner of game and fisheries the open season could be moved back one month if agreeable with him.

Many of the counties in the southern part of the state found that opening the season on October 1 conflicted with the squirrel mating season and under the permission granted by the game commissioner, these 24 counties are now permitted to hunt from November 1 through January 31.

Culled sweet potatoes are relished by cows as are the other root crops. when fed the potatoes should be finely chopped to prevent the cow from choking, and should preferably be fed after milking.

Cows bred during September, October and November will calve next June, July and August during the peak of the milk season when dairy products will likely bring the lowest prices of the year.

Lesson for September 16

ISAIAH CONTRASTS FALSE AND TRUE WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 1:1-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. Psalm 24:3, 4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling God We're Sorry.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When God's People Sin.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is True Worship?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature of True Worship.

Isaiah's visions present the redemptive purpose of God through the consummation of the Messianic kingdom. The first verse is the title. The book contains prophetic utterances of earlier and later dates. Chapter 1, from which our lesson is taken, contains the divine arraignment of the people for their sins.

I. The Moral State of the People (vv. 2-4).

1. Filial ingratitude (v. 2). The universe is summoned to hear the Lord's complaint against Judah and Israel for their base ingratitude and even rebellion. In spite of God's care, even as of a father for his children, they persisted in sin and in violation of their covenant with God.

2. Brutal stupidity (v. 3). The ox and the ass are proverbially stupid, but Israel's stupidity exceeded theirs. Israel would not recognize God as her rightful sovereign or acknowledge him as the author of her mercies.

3. Habitual evil-doers (v. 4). They were not sinners in outward act merely, but in nature and heart were laden with iniquity. By heredity they passed their vices from generation to generation.

II. Their Consequent Miseries (vv. 5-9).

1. Their perplexity (v. 5). The hand of chastisement had been laid upon them; but this failed to do them good. Their afflictions were followed by deeper and more heinous sins.

2. Their awful confusion (v. 6). The calamity which befell them extended to all classes.

3. The desolation of their country (vv. 7, 8). Revolts from within and invasions from without left their country desolate. Physical ruin always follows moral and spiritual decadence.

4. Assurance to a remnant (v. 9). God's purposes cannot fail. A remnant was saved in Israel. This is strikingly set forth in the ninth chapter of Romans.

III. Formal Worship Rebuked (vv. 10-15).

Notwithstanding the calamities visited upon them, they did not neglect the observance of religious rites and ceremonies. They punctiliously observed the forms of religion while indulging in iniquitous practices.

1. God does not derive benefit from religious sacrifices (v. 11). Our worship and service are not for God's profit, but for that of ourselves.

2. God's attitude toward formal worship (vv. 12-14). The very rites and ceremonies which God ordained for the purpose of helping men to approach him become disgusting and irksome to him when formally indulged.

3. God's refusal (v. 15). Every act of worship while the heart and life are steeped with iniquity only incites the divine anger.

IV. An Amended Life God's Requirement (vv. 16-20).

Though the nation had so grievously sinned, their case was not hopeless. However, in order to enjoy his mercy there must be:

1. A cleansing (v. 16). "Wash you, make you clean." The washing by water symbolized the cleansing by the blood of the Son of God.

2. "Put away the evil of your doings" (v. 16).

3. "Cease to do evil" (v. 16). Genuine repentance causes one to desist from the practice of sin.

4. "Learn to do well" (v. 17). One can only cease to do evil by learning to do well.

5. "Seek judgment" (v. 17). Burdens should be removed from the oppressed, justice should be meted out to the fatherless, and the widows should be befriended.

6. Encouragement to come to God (v. 18). Though their guilt was great and the judgment which befell them was awful, God's pardoning and cleansing grace was sufficient.

V. A Promise and a Warning (vv. 19, 20).

1. The promise (v. 19). They were to eat the good of the land on the condition of a surrendered will and an obedient life—God's terms.

2. A solemn warning (v. 20). Refusal to hear God's appeal and rebellion against God's demands would result in being devoured with the sword.

Prayer

And what God can do, prayer can do; for prayer binds God, because it is the prayer of faith; and faith, as it were, overcomes God. Now prayer is the flame of faith, the vent (outcome or utterance) of faith; and faith is a victorious triumphant grace with God himself.—Richd. Sibbes.

FIGHT IS BEING MADE ON COTTON PROGRAM

Auburn, Ala., Sept. 7.—Edward A. O'Neal, president American Farm Bureau Federation, warns Alabama farmers that a real fight is being made to destroy the Agricultural Adjustment Act and kill the cotton program.

Farmers must fight to keep what they have and to progress, declared President O'Neal, as he told how profiteers, speculators and other are now fighting the processing tax in order to destroy the Agricultural Adjustment program, which has caused the price of cotton to advance from 5½ cents to 13 cents per pound.

Concerning the processing tax Mr. O'Neal said, "This is the only effective tariff agriculture has ever had, giving the farmers power to organize themselves to control production and marketing of their crops, giving them real control of the law of supply and demand and giving them the benefit of a fair domestic price for this basic crop."

"This is the day of organization," said Mr. O'Neal. "Everybody is organizing. The farmers are just beginning to do it in a big way. Some of the politicians have said the farmers were in politics. I say to you that if you are not organized you are lost. They are all doing it and that is the only way you can get what is coming to you."

FARMERS FAVOR EDUCATION

Auburn, Ala.—It is the desire of Alabama farmers that the next state legislature "provide for an adequate system of public education from the first grade through the institutions of higher learning" and that federal aid for education be continued.

This was expressed in resolutions passed by farmers and farm women attending the Farmers' week here this month.

"We insist" says the resolution, "that the next legislature of Alabama provide for an adequate system of public education from the first grade through the institutions of higher learning; that funds for education be safeguarded and protected through legislation; that teachers be paid promptly their full salaries, and that a definite sum be made available for each year for the successful operation of our schools to relieve the uncertainty of school and length of terms. We condemn the practice which has made education secondary in finances and caused these engaged in educational work to be penalized for the deficiency in public revenue in Alabama.

"We reaffirm our endorsement of federal aid for education."

September is the silo filling month. See that all harvesting machinery is in ample working order and that silo hoops are in good repair.

WAREHOUSES HAVE LICENSED CLASSERS

Between 60 and 70 Alabama Warehouses have or will soon have state licensed cotton classers to class cotton for the benefit of farmers who desire to procure a government loan on their cotton this season, according to official announcement yesterday by Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture and industries.

As a result of a special cotton stapling and grading school conducted at Boaz this summer 42 representative cotton warehousemen from various sections of the state are at present being licensed by the department of agriculture, and Commissioner Storrs expresses his belief that more than 20 others will pass the next state examination to be held Friday, September 7th.

Instruction given at the grading and stapling school was in accordance with federal official cotton standards which will be used in Alabama as the basis on which all cotton will be classed by those who are issued a state graders license.

PREACHING AT NEW SALEM

Rev. Fred W. Riggins will preach at the New Salem Baptist church, September 16th. Everyone is invited to attend these two services.

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

HIGHER PRICES ON ANIMALS EXPECTED

Auburn, Ala.—Prices of meat are expected to be materially higher next year, says J. D. Moore, extension livestock marketing specialist.

Mr. Moore says the outlook is especially good for sheep and lambs. A sharp curtailment in sheep numbers now appears fairly certain as a result of the severe drought in the main producing sections. This means there will be a small lamb crop in 1935, and when this fact is coupled with the marked decrease in hog production and a prospective reduction in cattle numbers and cattle feeding, process for all meat animals, including lambs, should be much above the present levels, he said.

Mr. Moore therefore urges livestock growers in Alabama to keep their animals in good condition and prepare to take advantage of the better market in prospect next season.

Next February and March the dairy herd will be hungry for something green—rye, oats, vetch, Canadian and Austrian peas should be sown now.

Leads Most Imitated Orchestra in Country

Jack Denny

IF you want to hear the original of the most imitated orchestra in the country just tune in your radio Wednesday night to hear Jack Denny's orchestra which supplies the musical background for the Harry Richman program.

Jack Denny, whose music is heard by millions, had to go from New York to Montreal to get attention for his orchestra in New York.

Denny and his musicians appeared at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal for five and a half years when they were called to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York and fame and fortune.

Denny never rehearses his band. He has a substitute handle rehearsals.

He personally makes every arrangement his boys play.

His orchestra has never been successfully imitated — although many have tried.

He and his boys have only laid off three weeks in eleven years.

There's no brass in the Denny orchestra. He favors the harp and the violin, the accordion and the sweeter instruments.

Denny strives for melody and smoothness. He succeeds in achieving a decided rhythm.

Millions are enjoying Denny's music every Wednesday night.

Alabama Beauties Win at Fair

Miss Lois Thomas, left, of Hartford, Ala., was chosen Miss Alabama for 1934 from among sixteen competitors who appeared in the finals of the contest at Alabama Day at A Century of Progress—the Chicago World's Fair. Second place went to Miss Elizabeth Waite (right), who is Alabama's Miss Grove Hill. The girls were chosen on the basis of beauty, figure, poise, grace and personality. The sixteen who appeared at A Century of Progress won trips in a statewide newspaper competition to choose a queen.

WILLIAMS REUNION

On Saturday, September 8th, Mr. Lewis Williams had a reunion at his home. All of his living brothers were there, Mr. George Williams, of Kansas City; Mr. Henry Williams of Billingsley, Mr. John Williams of LaGrange, Mr. Jimmie Williams of White Pond. A large crowd attended, making a total of 101 of the family's relatives and friends. Everyone present had a grand time. They had plenty to eat and plenty of conversations for the day.

They sang some songs, made pictures, and as everyone was making ready to go home they heard a wonderful talk on what we should be thankful for by Rev. R. T. Yeargan.

Historic Pageant Approaches Close at World's Fair

Only a few more performances remain for these one-time giants of the steel rails in their roles in "Wings of a Century," famed pageant of transportation of A Century of Progress in Chicago. This is one of the many shows that, having thrilled millions upon millions from every section of the globe, will make their last bow when the Fair closes forever Oct. 31. This scene, with the original locomotives, is a re-enactment of the driving of the golden spike in the completion of the Union Pacific railroad, the first spanning of the American continent by steel rails. October 10 the president of the Bob Jones College is going in for an evangelistic tour to Europe. He will be on the continent under the auspices of an American committee. When his work is finished on the continent he will return to Liverpool, England and Belfast, Ireland, where he will conduct special evangelistic campaigns. He will be accompanied by three young ministers who are graduates of the Bob Jones College. One of these ministers, James Zellner, of Birmingham, Ala., will remain on the continent of Europe for at least a year of evangelistic work. Two other young ministers, Fred Brown and Jimmie Johnson, both Alabama boys, will remain in the British Isles a year conducting evangelistic meetings for the young people. The whole wide-world has opened its doors to the message and the program for which the Bob Jones College stands.

I tell the boys and girls in our college that people never find happiness looking for it. They stumble over it on the path of duty. Eight years ago we felt that it was our duty to build a certain type of Christian college. We did it because we thought it was our duty. On this path of duty we found happiness, and today we feel like singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It is a wonderful thing to be in partnership with God.

The editor is fifty years old. He is "at his best" physically and mentally. It is our hope and prayer in the next ten years, if the Lord tarries and we live, to promote around the world sane orthodox evangelism. There will be no beating of drums, blowing of horns, waving of flags, or big headlines in papers, but to the ends of the earth it is our desire to carry the message.

The world is sick and tired of machinery and ecclesiasticism. But the world was never as hungry for the gospel as it is now. Men and women everywhere want a simple, definite message. They want something to "tie to". There seems to be nothing certain about government or world machinery. Now is the opportunity for Christian leaders to throw out the gospel life line to men and women who are sinking in the ocean of doubt and despair. To the limit of our ability we hope to throw out this life line. If we had one hundred sane, level-headed, consecrated and trained young ministers, we could place them now in all parts of the world. We are asking our friends to pray for the work of our institution and ask God to raise up laborers for the fields which are white unto harvest.

Ala. State Fair To Be Full of Thrills

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 11.—Sensations and thrills are to be the rule rather than the exception at the Alabama State Fair when it throws open its gates Monday morning, September 24, for a week's run in Birmingham. Manager P. T. Strieder has been burning the wires up for big acts with which to give the thousands who will visit this year's fair plenty of thrills.

One of the real nerve-shockers for that big week will be the appearance of Elfrieda Mays, champion dirt track automobile driver of the world in feminine competition, who will crash through a flaming board wall while driving her high powered racer at seventy miles per hour. This sensational human catapult will swirl through space and into a solid board wall twice daily directly in front of the grandstand. Those who have seen Miss Mays accomplish this seemingly impossible feat say that it is one of the greatest breath-taking episodes the American public has ever witnessed.

Other features that will go to make it a week of thrills at the Fair ground include the first appearance in the south of Dr. Carver's world famous diving horses. These athletic equines while standing on a platform forty feet in mid air, with girl jockeys sitting astride them, plunge through space and dive into tanks of water ten feet deep. Then, there is the lion that rides as passenger with a girl motorcyclist as she swirls at a death defying pace around the wooden walls of a motordrome.

Yes, indeed, it would seem as if the thrills make up the watchword at the fair this year, what with automobile races in which the foremost dirt drivers of the world will compete for the huge purses offered by the state fair management this year, being held two days instead of one. Heretofore, it has been customary to stage the auto races on Saturday, the last day of the Fair. This year the daredevils will give fair visitors thrills on Tuesdays, as well as Saturday.

In regard to other departments of the fair, Manager Strieder states that everything points to capacity exhibits in every building. The poultry and rabbit shows may have to arrange for extra housing, so great is becoming the demand for space in those buildings. Dr. M. F. Jackson also states that it looks like the biggest agricultural show in the history of the exposition. Commissioner of Agriculture, Seth P. Storrs, and his associates at Montgomery have already arranged for 150 feet of space for their eleven units in the agricultural building. Dr. Jackson also states that a great flower show is in the making, with individual exhibits and those from florists as well, coming in at a fast pace.

Contracts were let the past week for conditioning the race track, for installing new plumbing throughout the grounds and for the construction of the new booths in the women's department, the fine arts department and the educational department. Mrs. W. W. Harmon, of the women's department is elated with the cooperation she has received thus far in insuring feminine visitors the greatest exhibit of their own creative efforts that their eyes have ever feasted on.

All school children in Alabama are invited to attend the Fair absolutely free Monday, opening day, between the hours of 9 in the forenoon and 6 p.m.

SYRUP PROCESSING TAX IS EXPLAINED

Cane mill owners and operators are not required to pay a process tax upon the products they manufacture, neither is there a process tax on sorghum molasses, but there is a process tax on edible molasses made from pure sugar cane juices where the producer sells over 200 gallons, according to information received by Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture, from Harwell G. Davis, collector of internal revenue, Birmingham.

"There appears to be a widespread report in Alabama to the effect that owners and/or operators of cane mills are required to pay a special tax or license to the Federal Government before they can operate such mills," Davis writes. "So many reports of this nature have reached this office until it is believed some action should be taken to counteract the effect it is having on interested persons.

"There is a processing tax on edible molasses from pure sugar cane juices. There is no such tax on sorghum molasses. The tax on sugar cane molasses is imposed only upon its sale and producers who grow the cane are exempted from any tax on the sale of same to the extent of 200 gallons, except in cases where 500 gallons or more are sold, in which cases no exemption whatever is allowed.

"Where a producer sells in excess of 200 gallons of sugar cane molasses, the rate of tax is .94 of a cent per gallon of 11-1/3 pounds, or a tax of slightly less than one cent per gallon."

MORE CCC CAMPS

Montgomery, Ala.—A larger proportion of the C. C. C. camps of the country will probably be assigned to national forests and national parks during the fourth period beginning October 1, according to information received at the office of the Alabama State Commssion of Forestry. The original intention when the emergency conservation work was organized was that nearly all of the camps would be on federal holdings. However, concession was made to include forest lands owned by the states, and later this was extended to include under certain conditions woodlands in private ownership.

The conditions under which C.C.C. camps might be assigned to private lands were quite exacting, demanding among other things that the various states guarantee that the improvements and betterments effected on private lands be permanently maintained. States whose forestry departments are operated under substantial appropriations were able to make such guarantees. On the other hand, those states in which public forestry funds are limited are not in a position to commit themselves to an extended financial outlay. As a result many camps from the latter states will undoubtedly be transferred for work in other sections. A recent large increase of national forest acreage probably will require that these camps be located on Federal holdings.

NO GRIP ON TIRES BIGGEST DRIVING DANGER OF TODAY

"No grip on tires—that's one of the biggest dangers in driving today," is the assertion of L. E. Diefenderfer, local dealer for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

"Even many new tires may lack sufficient grip to prevent bad skids," he continued. "It has been determined that skids cause five and one-half times as many accidents as blowouts, and 8,400 'stop tests' showed that smooth stires slide 77 per cent farther—and other new tires from 14 to 19 per cent farther than the new Goodyear G-3 All Weathers.

"The reason for this remarkable showing by the Goodyear G-3 is the fact it has traction in the center of the tread where it belongs. The G-3 has more of the gripping diamond blocks in the center of the tread, than previous tires, there is an average of two pounds more rubber in the tread, the tire has a wider, flatter contact with the road—and all these things combine to give 43 per cent additional non-skid mileage.

"The new G-3 also has protection against the slight hazard of blowouts, too. Goodyear tires are made with the patented Supertwist cord, which stretches and comes back millions of times during the life of the tire—and supertwist gives blowout protection in every ply.

"It won't be long until the rainy season sets in, and motorists whose cars are equipped with worn, smooth tires are taking an unnecessary risk by not getting new G-3's—that have traction in the center of the tread where it belongs.

HOME OF STEPHEN PRICE BURNED SATURDAY P. M.

The home of Stephen Price, 82-year old negro preacher, in Lilly Hill community in the southern part of the county, was completely destroyed by fire last Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock. Nearly all contents were destroyed. The blaze started on the roof and spread rapidly.

The loss is estimated at about $1,000. No insurance was carried. Price owns his farm there of about 116 acres.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ward and family went to Selma Thursday to celebrate Uncle Billie Dunlap's birthday, which is the ripe age of 75 years. All children and grandchildren were there except one.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala.—The University of Alabama opened Wednesday, September 12, for the 1934-35 session. Freshmen were to enroll Wednesday and Thursday and upperclassmen Thursday and Friday. Several new instructors and professors have been added to fill vacancies in the regular faculty.

Prof. John Leister, former director of public buildings, Republic of Haiti, and designer of the Holland Tunnels, becomes assistant professor of engineering; Dr. John H. Ferguson of Yale will become assistant professor of physiology and pharmacology, and Dr. Albert Harris, of Washington University, instructor in the same field. Mrs. Jennie Morris Howard, former secretary of the Episcopal student center at East Carolina Teachers College, Greenville, N. C., has been named assistant dean of women and director of the cooperative houses; Captain H. O. Swindler, infantry and Lieut. H. J. Woodbury, become assistant professors of military science and tactics.

Gould Beech of Montgomery, last year's editor of the Crimson-White, undergraduate weekly, has been named head of the paper for 1934-35. Appointment was made by the Board of Publications.

Dr. William S. Webb, supervisor of archaeological work in the Tennessee Valley, has completed his work at the University of Alabama. Dr. Webb spent a month here classifying and photographing specimens of articrafts found in the valley. This material was presented to the University of Alabama.

Mrs. Washington Moody of Tuscaloosa, a master of arts of the University and prominent club woman, has been added to the staff of the extension division as instructor in English and supervisor of club study service. In the latter capacity she will be prepared to assist Alabama clubwomen in preparing their programs.

President George H. Denny of the University returned September 12 from Cincinnati where he represented Alabama Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the triennial meeting of the United chapters. He also attended the meeting of the senators of Phi Betta Kappa.

The Crimson Tide football candidates for the 1934 eleven, now 53 strong, are coming along rapidly and are expected to be ready for scrimmages in a few days.

Everyone expected returned, with the exception of Joe Demyanovich, veteran fullback, who has yet to be heard from.

Capt. Bill Lee, senior tackle, is one of the first casualties of the new season. Bill is suffering from a sore back and has had to take things easy, Lee is anxious to get down to work, as he reported some 20 pounds over weight.

Several sophomores have been showing lots of ability in the early practices. Chief among them are Bubber Nisbet, fullback, Mickey Riley, halfback, Tarzan White, guard and Roy White, halfback.

These and several other sophs are expected to make life tough for the returning veterans. Competition will be more severe this fall than ever before, it is likely.

A staff of geophysicists under the direction of Dr. Walter B. Jones, state Geologist, is in south Alabama for the purpose of making a geophysical survey for salt. The survey is being carried on in the Mobile-Jackson district and is considered one of the most important projects carried out by the survey in recent years. It will continue for three or four months. Dr. J. Brian Eby of Houston, Tex., and E. G. Nicar of Texas have been added to the survey staff to assist in the work. Nicar will do the field work and Dr. Eby will work calculations and write up the report.

According to a recent survey, marriage is doomed if the wife is the boss, but according to our own private survey marriage is doomed if she isn't.

The trouble in these drouth times is that when the wind comes along and blows a fellow's farm out from under his feet it desn't seem to take the mortgage along with it.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

No primary held in the United States this year has caused greater national attention than the one held in California on August 28. The result, in the Democratic contest, must have been amazing to those who have not kept in touch with the situation. Democratic nomination for governor was won by Upton Sinclair, noted Socialist, who scored a victory, inspite of the fact that Senator McAdoo and other Democratic noabtles of California, were against him and were supporting George Ceel, the famous publicity man of the World War days. Sinclair, who filed as a candidate on the Democratic ticket after having failed to be elected governor as a Socialist, posed in the primary as a new California Santa Claus. He promises to usher in a new era in the state if elected, an era which will abolish poverty and give a job and a home to everyone who is unemployed or homeless. The cost, of course, will be borne by the State of California with what assistance it can get from the federal government.

Chief interest in Mr. Sinclair's program, however, must be shared with speculation on what effect his candidacy will have on the rest of the Democratic ticket in California. California is usually a Republican state but the Democratic landslide of 1932 swept many Democraic congressmen into office. The question now is whether the conservative Democrats in California will support Mr. Sinclair in the fall election. Senator McAdoo was quoted by Washington papers as stating some time ago that the nomination of Sinclair ment the loss of several Democratic congressmen in the November election. If this is true the nomination of Sinclair ought to bring political satisfaction to the regular Republicans, although they cannot be expected to give forth any shouts of joy on even the possibility of having a radical like Mr. Sinclair in the governor's office of the great western state.

The Republicans nominated for governor, acting Governor Frank Merriman, who came to the front in the recent radical troubles along the Pacific coast winning a great deal of newspaper approval all over the country for his courageous and efficient handling of the revolutionary situation in and around San Francisco. With Merriman as the Republican and Sinclair as the Democratic candidate the issue ought to be pretty well drawn between those who believe in what is popularly called the existing order, and experimentation in socialism. Of course the result will depend in a great measure on what the regular Democrats in Califorina decide to do about it. Sinclair will undoubtedly solidify the radical vote and get its support in the coming election. What will the conservatives regardless of party, decide to do?

There have been proposed amalgamations of Republican and Democratic factions in other states this year. Minnesota is an example. The Farmer-Labor Party is riding high there and has threatened to sweep the state this fall because the opposition is divided between the conservative Republicans and Democrats. An organization has been formed called the United Minnesota Voters", headed by a Republican and a Democratic leader, both of St. Paul. This group hopes to oppose successfully Governor Floyd B. Olson, and the "cooperative commonwealth" platform of the Farmer-Labor Party. What the outcome will be remains to be seen.

There is a fusion movement in Tennessee, too, where the independent Democats do not like the regular organization headed by Senator McKellar and his friends. Independent Democrats organized and nominated Lewis S. Pope, to oppose Governor Hill McAllister, and endorsed Ben W. Hooper, Republican candidate for the long term in the Senate. Republicans withdrew their gubernatorial candidate and endorsed Pope, which virtually effects a coalition between the Republicans and the independent Democrats.

In the meantime, Democrats in California will hardly recognize their party ticket this fall. As their candidate for Senate they have Hiram W. Johnson, a progressive who has always been known as an independent Republican. As their candidate for governor they now have Upton Sinclair, the life-long Socialist. Surely these are strange times! Wonder what Grover Cleveland would think of it all?

NEW DEAL ON THE FARM

One of the most outstanding characteristics of the New Dealers is their calm assurance that they know what they are doing. Prof. Tugwell, for example, insists that he is now trying to undo seventy-five years of neglect and bungling on the farms. No doubt we have been wasteful of our soil resources just as we have been of our forest and mineral wealth. That has been the natural outcome of an abundance. We have not had to stop to cultivate all the fence corners and to make every foot of ground count, as is the case in some of the older and more densely populated countries.

Despite all the blundering before we had Wallaces and Tugwells to show us the error of our way, the American farmer prospered. He had crop failures in some seasons, but year after year he kept getting along somehow. He built a barn one year, bought another field the next and eventually became well to do. In fact, the census reports show that in 1930 there were 6,288,648 farms in the United States and they were worth an average of $7,614.

Another thing Dr. Tugwell must find hard to understand is how the farmers of this country managed to acquire a total property worth $57,245,544,692 before they knew anything about the New Deal. All that money was accumulated without the advantages of regimentation, plowing under of crops, leasing of marginal lands to the government, killing of little pigs or any of the other expedients so confidently inaugurated in recent months. If Dr. Tugwell and his associates only had been born a hundred years ago, there is no telling where the American farmer would be today—if anywhere.

The New Dealers have been stressing loans to the farmers, the mortgage moratorium and some other financial measures until the urban dweller has almost lost sight of the fact that there are some farmers ineligible to get baskets from the township trustee. The census figures show that the farmers' $57,-245,544,269 worth of proprty was mortgaged for less than $12,000,000,000. The facts were in 1930 that nearly one-half the 6,288,648 farms were operated by the owners and 53.9 per cent of those farms had not a cent of debt against them.

No doubt the farmer has been all wrong from the beginning. There can be no denying that, since the New Dealers say so and insist that they know. The Wallaces and Tugwells could not possibly be mistaken, of course, about the awful folly of just going ahead and raising crops without getting a permit from Washington to plant corn on the north eighty and sow wheat on the south forty. The benighted average American farmer who has a $7,614 farm all paid for should not be censured too much for his predicament. He had no "brain trust" to levy processing taxes and pay him rent for idle acres. He was just a farmer who had to muddle along with nature and the law of supply and demand, as farmers have done since the beginning of civilization. It must be a relief to him now, after all these years, to have some one come along and explain to him how he never did know his business. — Indianapolis Star.

PROPAGANDA AND WAR

Propaganda against one foreign nation or another is always dangerous, but ainti-Japanese propaganda in the United States is especially dangerous and may lead to war unless its motives are understood, according to R. O. Grant, who writes logically of the subject in the current issue of the National Republic. Mr. Grant avers that this anti-Japanese propaganda is especially perilous to our peace because a part of it at least is being spread by communists who are past masters at the art. Russia, he adds, would like very much to embroil us in a war with Japan to pull her own chestnuts out of the fire. In part, Mr. Grant writes:

"For several years there have been a number of agencies which have subtly diffused propaganda among Americans designed to implant the idea that Japan is our national enemy, and that sooner or later we would be compelled to meet that nation in an armed conflict.

"During the past year the proponents of this propaganda and their converts have deemed public opinion sufficiently cultivated along this line to allow them to spread this idea quite openly, and without suspicion as to their motives. In fact, they expect to be regarded as Paul Reveres giving warning of approaching danger.

"Since Japan is a relatively small nation situated 4,000 miles west from our west coast, and her interests are wholly in Asia, the most distant continent from America, it would appear wise at this time for us Americans to take a mental inventory and ascertain for our own benefit just what opinions each of us hold concerning Japan and recall if possible how we arrived at those conclusions. It would also be profitable to indulge in a bit of reasoning as to what profit could be gained by a conflict with the Empire of the Rising Sun and to whom this profit, if any, would accrue.

When that body of world conspirators gained control of the former empire of Russia and established themselves as rulers by the merciless use of espionage and machine guns, they set up a body called the Third International. This world-wide organization has as its open and avowed aim the conquest of the world, which in their ambition they expect to bring under their dictatorship. At this time prostrate Russia occupies the position of a conquered colony of this world-wide organization. As an evidence of their lack of interest in the welfare of the Russian people they constantly divert the profits gained by exporting the products wrung from the enforced labor of the Rossian people to the carrying on of agitation looking to the overthrow of other nations.

"Immediately after gaining ascendancy in Russia, which immediately renamed the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the ruling clique started a campaign against all of the so-called capitalistic nations and used whatever property they could export and sell, which they had stolen from the people of Russia, to finance this campaign. It might be said incidentally that never for one moment since that time has that campaign been relaxed."

Our forefathers left us to this great nation which they worked and fought so had to clear. We may not be able to do any clearing for our children and grandchildren but we are going to leave them the biggest national debt the world has ever seen.

We asked one of our friends the other day whether his bank account seemed safer to him than it did a year ago and his reply was "What bank account?"

"I believe in majority rule," shouted Julius Roar today. And then a quiet little man said: "The majority is not always fit. During a great flood only one man knew enough to get out of the rain. All the rest of the people perished."

THE LIBERTY LEAGUE

No new movement in a long time has caused so much discussion in the launching as the American Liberty League. There are all sorts of reactions, the most interesting of which, of course, come from those statesmen more or less associated with the New Deal. These have greeted it with mixed emotions. For example, Secretary of the Interior Ickes hails it as a political movement, and one which will separate the sheep from the goats. Just who are the sheep and who are the goats depends on your economic principles. Mr. Ickes is quoted as saying that for many years he has hoped to see a conservative and a liberal party emerge from the old parties, which are not divided on liberal and conservative lines as at present formed, and he looks upon the new Liberty League as the beginning of such a movement.

Professor Tugwell, the most important Brain Truster of them all, says that he heartily subscribes to the ideals of the Liberty League as he sees them, and thinks everybody might join. On the other hand, Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins is quoted as stating that the League is so far "over to the right" that nobody will ever find it. Mr. Hopkins evidently believes that cherishing the Constitution and protecting property rights is very much "to the right." One might well wonder what he would regard as a sane "leftists" movement.

Some newspaper observers profess to see political forces working in the Liberty League and to believe that it is an effort to split the Democratic party and align the Democratic conservatives with the Republican conservatives for political effort. The president himself was tolerantly caustic, his remarks to newspapermen indicated that he was not fully in sympathy with the movement, quoting an unnamed friend as having said that the leaders of the Liberty League instead of loving God and their neighbors prefer to love God but forget their neighbors, the inference being that their god, in this particular sense was property which they were inclined to make more important than human rights.

In view of all these conflicting opinions it might be well to set forth what the leaders of the Liberty League themselves give as the objective of the organization. It follows:

"To defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States, and to gather and disseminate information that (1) will teach the necessity of respect for the right of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government, and (2) will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

Certainly there seems to be nothing ultra-conservative or reactionary in this document if we are to take the founders at their word, and we are used to taking men like Al Smith, John W. Davis and "Jimmy" Wadsworth, at its full value. If this program is very far to the right then communism itself must be a middle course.

It is difficult to see where there is any elevation of "property rights above human right." As a matter of fact a lot of bunk has been spread by the soap box orators and their brethren about this "elevation of property right above human right." It is not to be forgotten that the right to earn a living, to earn and hold property as a saving and a reward for industry and thrift, is one of the most precious human rights we possess. The man who would seek to take away the property of one man who has won it by his own fair efforts and give a part of it to one who has been too ignorant, too lazy or too thriftless to accumulate for himself, is as big an invasion of human rights as any which can be planned by one who accumulates property by fraud and tyranny. Both are a violation of human rights as well as property rights.

The desire to acquire by honest effort and hold property in safety is one of the things which distinguishes a man from the lower animals. Ever since man acquired enough civilization to want a home and a family his best interests have demanded the right to hold and use for himself and his family the property, personal and otherwise, which has come to him by his own thrift. Too often a man who complains about property rights is the one who, for political or other selfish purpose, would take from the man who has earned and saved to give to the lazy, the idle and the thriftless.

Of course we must obey the old injunction to love our neighbors, but what good will it do if we ourselves and our neighbors are propertyless and in rags, made so by some socialistic idea that it is wrong to work and save and ask protection for our savings lest we be accused of placing the right of our property ahead of the enjoyment of the fellow who has been too busy joyriding to accumulate anything for himself?

It seems that repealing the dry amendment doesn't do much good in regulating drouth.

MR. RICHBERG'S REPORT

Mr. Donald Richberg's summary of what he regards the accomplishments of the various program of the administration since March, 1933, makes very pleasant reading at first glance but upon due study it becomes evident that its claims are subject to some very important modifications. It is true that employment has increased since March, 1933, and that most domestic corporations are earning more money than they did in the first quarter of 1933. It may be true, too, that payrolls are larger, though there is room for debate whether the average man's salary or wage will buy any more, if as much, as it would a year ago.

But one thing which must be pointed out is that it is a little difficult to attribute all of the gain we may have had since the first of March, 1933, to the recovery program. First it must be remembered that comparing our condition now with March, 1933, is not exactly a fair way of arriving at the present condition. In March, 1933, we were in the midst of the banking holiday. Business was practically suspended. There was very little doing in any line, so that figures of comparison of conditions then and now are somewhat misleading. The standard of measurement is little above zero to begin with.

Then it is to be remembered, too, that the recovery acts of the administration did not go into effect during March. They had not yet been passed by Congress and made into law, and after the bills were passed considerable time elapsed before the Brain Trust could assemble and complete its organization. It is only fair to say, therefore, that the recovery program did not begin to function until about the first of August, 1933.

Now what happened in the meantime? The sound banks were opened and banking confidence was restored. The country went off the gold standard. Immediately there were rumors that we were going to have inflation. People commenced buying goods, mills started up and the smoke began to pour from factory chimneys. Why? Because the people feared that if we had inflation prices would go sky high, and the dollar become very cheap. So they deemed it good judgment to spend their money in advance. Other people, interested in the security markets, sold their interest bearing securities and bought common stocks—and the stock market boomed.

All of this came to a head late in the summer, just about the time the recovery acts got to functioning. And what was the result? The bubble burst, the stock market collapsed and the business indices started downward. And they are not now so high, one year after the recovery acts went into effect, as they were in the summer days before these New Deal boards started functioning. Nearly all of the business indices are lower than they were a year ago. Car loadings are less, the steel output is less and all of the manufacturing except in one or two lines shows lessened production. Leading railroads, issuing reports, show a slump in profits in July, 1934, over July, 1933. Business in general is about 13 per cent below a year ago.

It is difficult therefore, to follow Mr. Richberg in his enthusiasm over the part which the recovery policies have had in whatever increase in employment there has been. It is true of course that the government has spent a great deal of money itself, to make jobs, and the administration should have whatever credit is due along this line. But it is to be remembered that this money was borrowed, and must be repaid by the people themselves. The money which the Brain Trusters have been so generously pouring forth is not their own, it is the money of the people, you and your neighbor, and the money now being spent be repaid in higher taxes.

Another point which must not be overlooked, in measuring the effect which the New Deal has had on business in the past year and a half, is that recovery proceeded in most other countries quite as fast and often faster than in our own, and it has not been subject to the steadiness which has appeared in the United States. Great Britain is an example. Her industrial production is at a much higher figure than ours. At the end of the second quarter it was at 110, measured by the level of 1923 to 1925, while in our country the index figure was 86.

Of course we all want to get out of the depression and hope recovery will continue. It does not mean, however, that the soundest way for pulling out the slough has yet been put into effect.

Malcolm C. Rorty, formerly vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and now president of the American Management Association was talking not long ago to a meeting of foremen in New Haven, Conn. "The Colonel" had been carefully explaining his views of recent governmental efforts to restore prosperity. Afterwards, one foreman rose to his feet and said: "I see what you mean. It is just as if the battery in your car had run down, and instead of recharging it in the usual way we are trying to do so by having it towed all around town by a government truck. The only question is whether the government has enough gasoline to finish the job."

"I take my hat off to you," said Colonel Rorty, "you have done better than I could."

EDUCATION'S NEW DEAL

A new sense of values in education and a view of the obligation of our schools toward society can be counted among assets salvaged from the depression.

It may be too early yet to count our gains, but as the school term opens we have many indications that progress is being made.

Speaking before the teachers of the Birmingham schools last Friday, J. A. Kellar, who in January will become state superintendent of education, stressed the need of shifting class room emphasis from individual welfare to that of the community in general. Mr. Kellar found reason to commend the objective theme of the Birmingham schools for the coming year and added:

"We have seen that rugged individualism too frequently becomes ruthless individualism. We have been sending out of our schools young people concerned only with self-attainment."

The new state superintendent is not unjust in his indictment of our educational system. Nor is Alabama alone guilty of the shortcoming which he charges. But, because leadership in our school system is conscious of the need for a realignment of values, there is cause for encouragement.

We have in Alabama too many outstanding men and women who cling to the old order of things. They are honest men and women earnest and sincere in their point of view but woefully lacking in their inability to grasp and appreciate broad social values.

If this day and New Deal in our schools insures future generations against such deficiencies we cannot count the cost of our experience too dear.—Birmingham Post.

Miss Pardue told me a bit of news Tuesday. She got right industrious and washed the dust off the front porch of her office. My remark was that it was of no use, as it needs washing as bad today as before she did it. A tranger who heard our conversation said he had many times thought the same thing about washing his face. Cohen Stapp is a good boy, as most of the people of Chilton County long ago found out. Lillie left last week for a trip to the Chicago Fair. Sunday comes along and Cohen got lonesome. He pulled out from Selma, and came right straight to Clanton to drown his loneliness in the company of old friends. He felt better after spending a few hours, and it made some of his friends feel better to see him. When Lillie gets back I will tell her what a good boy Cohen was while she was gone.

Dr. Gragg has brought his airplane to Clanton for keeps. A hangar has been built for it, and the landing field is in condition for safe usage. Mr. Allen, a licensed pilot, is here, and wil ltake you up in the air if you want to go. I want to fly, but by the honest truth, I am afraid to do it.

RELIGIOUS RECOVERY

The question has been seriously asked during recent years, if we are not forgetting some of the lessons the Master taught us; if we are failing to follow in His footsteps in our respect for laws and the rights of others. The answer may be found in other lands, and here on our own continent. Europe is in chaos. Brother is aligned against brother there; race is aligned against race, and nation against nation. We find fear and suspicion where there should be more following the examples of Christ.

It is interesting and encouraging to note that an effort is being made for "religious recovery" in this country. It is encouraging to know that all forms of religious belief are united in this worthy effort. The people of our country should pause and contemplate the course we are following, and to assist in returning to the course that has led us through doubts, discouragements and disasters. Our people should join in this "religious recovery" movement that the world shall again be free from suspicions and the greed that has led us astray.

Our governments, both federal and state, should assist in the awakening—an awakneing of public sentiment and a purging of our institutions, founded upon religion, of the influences that are destroying the noblest examples of all times.

Anyhow the new Indian sign-language dictionary will be practically useful to the hitchhiker.

WRECKING BUSINESS

Recovery is still struggling against great odds.

The New Deal has so many collateral objectives, so many theories to vindicate, so many experiments to try, that the simple expedient of giving natural recuperative powers of the United States an opportunity to function is entirely lost sight of and subordinated to the daffy preoccupations of the dreamers and visionaries who swarm around the president.

Two ugly and un-American body blows have just been struck at American business through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

The shoe industry has been informed that the government intends to use the great oversupply of hides, due to government killing of cattle, in the manufacture of vast quantities of leather and shoes.

This is government competition with private industry in a most aggravated form.

It means the opening of new factories, involving ruinous competition with existing plants already in need of business to keep their employees occupied and under pay.

Already the shoe market is demoralized because of a weakening in the hide market, which is altogether independent of the abnormal influx of hides resulting from the wholesale slaughter of cattle enfeebled by the drouth and killed under government decree.

Not impressed by the damage which nature has inflicted upon the county, the New Dealers are resolved to carry the ravages of the drouth into the field of industry by overwhelming it with a competition it cannot meet and under which it cannot survive.

Professing to seek the extension of employment, the government strikes down such employment as exists.

Dependent for taxes upon the revenues which only reviving business can yield, and calling for cooperation and support from industry, it chokes not only the life but the hope out of business.

The making of mattresses is another great industry which apparently is to be smothered under government competition.

Here, as in the shoe industry, instead of giving work to an established industry, struggling to meet the conditions imposed by the NRA codes, endeavoring to do its part and hoping its resources will carry it over until normal business is restored, the government announces a policy which practically spells death—death to an industry which has been a contributor to our national prosperity in the past and whose ability to keep going and whose ultimate revival is one of the bases of our expectation of recovery.

The thousands of men and women whom the government hopes to transfer from the relief rolls to government shoe factories and mattress factories will not earn what they are receiving as relief. The transfer will not relieve the relief rolls nor lighten the mounting burden upon the taxpayers for the support of these unemployed men and women.

While active in their new employment, they will still belong, in the economic sense, to the unemployed. They will not be self-sustaining.

Furthermore, they will drive out of work thousands who actually are self-sustaining and who, by reason of their training and experience, are able to turn out a good instead of an inferior and unsalable product.

What is this? What does it mean?

Is it more Brain-Trust hokum? Is it just blind folly and stupidity?

It certainly is not enlightening government. —Atlanta Georgian.

SINGING TO BE AT BETHANY

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to announce that there will be a singing at Bethany Baptist church eight miles south of Clanton in the afternoon, the fourth Sunday in September, beginning at two o'clock.

We will use the Leading Light book. We wish to revive our singing at this place. The interest is greater than has been for years. A number of the best singers in the county have promised to be with us on that day. Mr. W. M. Devaughn said that he would bring his quartet. So we are expecting a big day that evening. We especially invite one and all. If you can't sing, come anyway. We will appreciate your presence.—J. W. Devaughn.

IN MEMORY

Mrs. Elizabeth Glass, who had been gradually declining to that state of peaceful sleep, which she reached Saturday p.m., September 8, at 2:15, when from expression on her face, rest and repose took the place of pain and sorrow. This, with hopes that we shall meet her again and a knowledge of her being well, nursed and cared for, being our comforting thoughts, we shall be able to bear with the vacancy in our home.

She received many flowers which were things she always loved and worked hard to cultivate as long as she could. She is the mother of 10 children, two of which are dead.

Her remains were laid to rest in Rocky Mount cemetery, Sunday afternoon, September 9th, with Bro. Davis conducted funeral services. — T. J. Glass and family.

MT. PLEASANT

Rev. E. A. Norris will preach at Mt. Pleasant schoolhouse the third Sunday in September, at 11 o'clock in the morning, also at 2:30 in the afternoon. Everybody invited.—E. L. Powell.

Mr. William Arthur Willis and Mr. Alex Hayes motored to Tuscaloosa last Thursday and spent the day. They were accompanied by Mr. Joe VanDerveer, who remained to begin his studies at the University of Alabama.

Mesdames Arthur Johnson and Hance Alred returned from Gulfport, where they carried their sons to enter school.

Mrs. W. I. Mullins is spending a while in Mobile with her son, Mr. Frank Mullins, who has been in a hospital for several days.

Miss Virginia Dennison, field worker of Chilton County Relief Administration, of Montgomery, was a business visitor in Clanton Monday.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

A DECIDED drop in the price of butter is good news for food shoppers. Eggs are no more expensive but even the cheapest egg is good, thanks to cooler weather. Cheese stays cheap and cheese is one of the best foods we have. Meats continue high or higher.

Potatoes are remarkably fine in quality, and even cheaper than they were a year ago. People afraid of excess weight have made many other people forget what a delicious and healthful food potatoes really are. The trouble with potatoes is the number of extra pats of butter that are eaten with them or the fat they are fried in.

Fruits are plentiful and low or moderately priced, including several varieties of grapes, melons, apples and pears. New crop grapefruit are juicy and well flavored. Fresh prunes, crabapples and quinces will help fill the preserving closet.

From our market information the following menus are made up:

Low Cost Dinner

Pan-broiled Meat Patties Spanish Rice
Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Banana Custard
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Bread and Butter

Mashed Sweet Potatoes Green Peas

THE NEWALA SINGING

Editor Union-Banner:

Please express my most grateful thanks to the singers of Chilton County for their presence and help in the singing at Newala Sunday. I think that we had one of the best singings I have been to this year. We used 72 directors, which is too many to name in person, but we had everything from a solo to quartet, and some of the best of class singing. Thanking you all again and hoping that everybody had a good time.—J. E. Martin.

Judge Reynolds Replies To The Commissioners

Editor's Note. — When Judge Reynolds gave The Union-Banner the following article and asked us to publish it, he made the following statement: "My purpose in writing this article is not to have any bearing on the present political situation in Chilton County. I only want to answer the charges aganist me by the Commissioners as published in last week's paper."

Dear Editor:

I do not care to keep prolonging the controversies in the county papers, and I might say that I have not had a word to say of politics in either of the papers since the primary, other than to thank my supporters, and yet several have written pieces criticizing me. However, the article signed by the four commissioners was so far from the truth and real facts regarding the gasoline situation, which is now before the people, that I feel compelled in justice to my own record to state my side of this controversy.

I think the financial record that I leave behind me will testify to the fact that I have never believed in or condoned graft or corruption in public office, and regardless of party or politics, I cannot condone this. The commissioners in this statement say that I knew of gasoline being used in private cars prior to the primary on June 12th, and to this I say they are correct, but the commissoiners did not tell you that in many of the sessions of the Commissioners Court I repeatedly brought this matter to their attention and not a single commissioner has ever offered any suggestion to remedy the situation or even any reply to my suggestion of the gasoline being illegally used. I might say that on many occasions I have called particular instances of gasoline being illegally used to the different commissioners' attention in their respective districts and yet I do not know of any commissioner ever taking any steps to remedy this situation.

If the commissioners and Mr. Percy Pitts, who I am reliably informed prepared this article for the commissioners, were present at the many public speakings of mine held in all parts of Chilton County prior to the first primary election, I am sure they heard me denounce in strong terms the illegal use of Chilton County's gasoline. The people will remember too, that Mr. J. E. Easterling, the driver of the gasoline truck, in answer to my criticism of the way the gasoline was handled, stated that he had a record of all the gasoline handled by him at his home in Chilton County before the primary, and I also publicly denounced this as being a dangerous and unsafe practice for the Commissioners Court to allow.

Now the commissioners state in this article that they are going to have these receipts copied and signed by Mr. Easterling and present the copies to the examining authorities. The four commissioners and their attorney, Percy M. Pitts, know full well that I have been criticizing and on many occasions, calling the misuse of the county's gasoline to their attention and yet all of this knowledge and criticism has been ignored by them. I feel that my record is clear upon this because I am helpless to act without the cooperation of the commissioners.

In this connection I presented to the Commisoiners Court at a regular meeting September 3rd, the following recommendations:

1. That the Commissioners Court select a competent person to deliver the county's gasoline to the road machines.

2. That the Commissioners Court place such person under a sufficient bond for the faithful performance of his duties.

3. That an order be made by the Commissioners Court that the gasoline truck be locked in the garage which has been prepared on the county's property every night, and that the gasoline truck not be permitted to leave said garage at night.

4. That an order be made by the court having tickets or receipts for gasoline prepared, and when the gasoline is delivered to the county machinery that the same be signed by the person receiving, and prohibit the person who delivers the gasoline from signing the receipts, and that said receipts be filed along with the other records of the Commissioners Court and that the same might be made public and entitled to public inspection at all reasonable times.

5. I recommend that the use of the county's gasoline be more closely scrutinized in order that no gasoline might be delivered or used in any manner except strictly for county purposes, and that all persons in the employment of the county who use the county's gasoline for other than county purposes be discharged after a fair hearing.

6. I recommend to the court that the county sell the five trucks that they now own, as it is my opinion that the county's hauling can be done cheaper by hiring it done than by owning their own trucks and this will also give the work to the people of the county.

7. I further recommend to the court that if the commissioners will not agree to sell the county trucks, that a place be prepared in each commissioner's district and have the said trucks locked up at night and prohibit the use of said trucks at night time, unless in cases of emergency and necessity.

8. I further recommend to the court that no county gasoline be placed in any vehicle except county road tractors and county owned trucks and that such county road tractors and trucks be operated only and exclusively when actually performing services for the county."

Mr. H. E. Robinson made a motion to adopt said recommendations and there was not a second to said motion and thus the recommendations were not adopted. I submit to the taxpayers whether or not these recommendations are timely in view of the situation regarding the gasoline in the county. The only offer made by the commissioners court, and I might say the first, to remedy the gasoline situation, was to call a mass meeting, the purpose of said meeting to give them and the people an opportunity to explain what they knew about the gasoline being illegally used, and as to this they refused to fix any date for the mass meeting.

If the people of Chilton County are satisfied for the records to be kept at a man's private residence when the man, himself, is the person charged with the responsibility of handling and accounting for this gasoline, then I have no further statement or criticism to make, and if the people of this county are content to permit the county's gasoline to be used in private cars, then I will have to submit to this also.

This is not the only matter that has come before the Commissioners Court in the past year or more in matters of which I stood opposed to the Court. There have been many illegal claims presented to the Court and passed by the commissioners and approved by their attorney, Mr. Percy M. Pitts, which I have turned down. Also three of the Commissioners, themselves, have had bills which were illegal and which I have turned down and then later amended the claims and accepted considerable less amounts than originally filed, and these claims are now on file in the probate office. The claim of Mr. Pitts, himself, for $500.00 as county attorney was passed by the Commissioners Court and I turned this down in view of Code Section 5024 which clearly says that no county or state officer can make a contract or be in the employment of the Commissioners court. Mr. Pitts being a member of the legislautre and a state officer, is prohibited from drawing this money, and I therefore, turned this claim down. I have discussed the legality of these claims with Mr. Pitts and the Commissioners and have suggested that they bring action against me in court in the form of a mandamus proceeding and let the court determine whether or not these claims are legal, but none of the parties have seen fit to take such action.

The commissioners in their article charge me with politics and if it is politics for an officer to try to safeguard the county's money and to see that it is spent in a legal way, then I am guilty.

Two years ago, Mr. J. C. Atchison and Mr. C. D. Duke circulated a campaign card over Chilton County where they stated that the debt of Chilton County was only $75,000. At the present time the debt of the county is $83,000, an increase of $8,000, and the present Commissioners in their term have spent over $200,000 more than was spent in the same period of time by their predecessors. Chilton County today, for the first time in many years, is unable to pay its bills. It is apparent to anyone that Chilton County is headed for bankruptcy and I have done by best to fight against this and to save the county's financial standing. But a man alone cannot do much, and if this situation is not enough to arouse the people of this county, then I am helpless to prevent the ultimate outcome.—Respectfully, L. H. Reynolds.

Local Politics And Republican Nominees

have been nominated by the majority of their party to serve us in public offices.

Much speculation has been made as to what is the attitude of Judge Reynolds toward the Republican ticket in this campaign. The Union-Banner ventures to say that the Republicans of Chilton County have no intention or desire to push Judge Reynolds or any of his supporters out of the party. Quite to the contrary, the need of his and their help and support is keenly felt.

Although it seems that such an appeal should be unnecessary, we believe we can speak for the entire Republican party of Chilton County in saying that we would welcome and rejoice at the whole-hearted support of Judge Reynolds and all his followers, (among which we are proud to have been in the past) for a Republican victory in November.

We do not believe anybody can offer a valid reason why any Republican should now desert his party and support the Democratic ticket. If Judge Reynolds had been nominated, he and his supporters would demand that all Republicans support him. Mr. Mims and his supporters now have the same right to expect the support of all Republicans, Judge Reynolds not excepted.

Will Announce Plans For Continued Law Practice Right Away

The resignation of J. O. Middleton as attorney for the Farm Credit Administration, became effective Saturday.

Although Mr. Middleton submitted his resignation in June, 1933, he was retined to handle civil cases in Alabama and Georgia on account of his record, it was announced.

The work of the office will be carried on by Byron Tatum, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who was assigned to aid Mr. Middleton a few months ago after Mr. Middleton had been designated to handle bankruptcy trustee and receivership work in the United States District Court.

Mr. Middleton, it was announced will continue to engage in some bankruptcy trustee and receivership work, which will require a small amount of his time, and said he would devote most of his time however, to the practice of law.

His work as Farm Credit Administration attorney drew high commendation from the General Counsel of the Administration.

Mr. Middleton has served as assistant U. S. attorney at Mobile, Birmingham and Montgomery. His work in the early days of the seed loan cases resulted in his assignment as assistant to the attorney general and later as attorney for the Farm Credit Administration to handle civil and equity cases involved in collection of debts due the government. A great amount of litigation, including some very large cases, were handled by Mr. Middleton as attorney for the government.

Mr. Middleton is a voter of Chilton County. Although in public and official life since young manhood, his official work has always been of a legal nature except during the time when he served Chilton County in the Alabama Legislature.

During his public career he has made many friends who compliment him for his ability and fairness. He is especially well thought of in Montgomery County where he resided prior to his removal to Chilton County while a young man.

During his private practice in Chilton County, Mr. Middleton handled many important civil cases before the Circuit and Supreme Courts. While representing the government he was fortunate in having the bulk of the preparation of pleadings assigned to him. All of the many thousands of indictments drawn by him were upheld as to legality. His success in preparing civil suits for the government was almost as noteworthy.

Mr. Middleton is proud of the fact that while serving as assistant U. S. attorney at Montgomery some years ago his transfer to a similar place at Birmingham was requested by U. S. Attorney C. B. Kennamer, now judge of the U. S. Court for the Middle and Northern Districts of Alabama.—Montgomery Advertiser.

You will please take notice that the association will meet in its annual session with the Concord Baptist church, two miles east of Clanton, on October the 9th and 10th, 1934.

Seventh District Republicans Meet

Jasper, Ala.—Behind closed doors barred to persons not delegates, Republicans of the Seventh Congressional District gathered here Wednesday for a caucus at which time it was decided not to enter candidates to oppose Democratic nominees from the district for the coming general election.

It was unanimously decided at the meeting not to disclose action of the group to newspapers. So perfect were wishes of the body carried out that news of the meeting did not leak out until Thursday.

Judge Johnson, of Oneonta, chairman of the district's committee, presided at the meeting Wednesday. Delegates from near all of the nine counties of the district were present.

Serious doubt was expressed at the gathering, a Republican leader stated, as to whether or not a party candidate to oppose Representative W. B. Bankhead for Congress would carry a single county in November's election. Popularity of the "New Deal" was said to have been responsible for the committee's action in declining to enter candidates for the several district offices.

Cotton Farmers Ask For Repeal

Austin, Texas, Sept. 15.—A demand for repeal of the Bankhead cotton act by congress, or suspension of its enforcement for another year by President Roosevelt, was contained in a resolution introduced in the Texas senate today by T. J. Holbrook, of Galveston.

The resolution, referred to a commitee without debate, sought to declare opposition of the Texas legislature to the act.

The act also has been criticized by a resolution in the House of Representatives, which would call on the United States Attorney General to institute proceedings to have it declared unconstitutional.

"Texas producers will derive no benefit whatever from the Bankhead act," the resolution recited, because "any reduction in the production of cotton in Texas will be offset by an increase in the production of cotton in foreign countries."

Holbrook said two of the largest cotton firms in the United States intended to open offices in South American cotton producing countries "to meet their export requirements, because of the announced policy of the United States government to curtail and reduce the production of cotton in Texas and other states."

Schedule Announced For Contests Ahead of the High School Team

Football fans of this section will see an almost new team in action when our first game opens. While we have lost quite a few of our old men by graduation, we will have a light, but fast team. Coach Searcy is whipping them into some splendid training with the assistance of Varnell with the first year men. The spirit is as fine as could be expected under the conditions of the hot weather, and the fact that some of the boys have broken training during the summer months. The new equipment has arrived and the boys look fine in their new suits. It is not known just what the line-up will be when the whistle blows, but each player is fighting for his place.

We have a heavy schedule which is as follows:

September 28, Selma High at Selma.
October 5, Verbena High at Clanton.
October 12, Wetumpka High at Wetumpka.
October 19, Columbiana High at Clanton.
October 26, Marbury High at Clanton.
November 2, Prattville High at Prattville.
November 9, Montevallo High at Montevallo.
November 16, Holtville High at Clanton.
November 23, Isabella High at Clanton.

Harlingen, Tex.—A protest against the Bankhead cotton bill was enroute to President Roosevelt Saturday after city and county officials had pacified a group of armed farmers, angered at what they termed an attempt of the federal government to tax cotton growers.

Two carloads of farmers, armed with shotguns and rifles, had started to the county agent's office at San Benito to demand tax exemption certificates Friday when halted by the officials. The farmers and the officials met later and drafted a demand that the Bankhead bill be made inoperative immediately. It was sent by air mail to the president.

Officers reported the farmers to have been "in a dangerous frame of mind" after becoming angry at "delays which caused losses to them when cotton dropped in price."

The New Deal In Chilton County

[AN EDITORIAL]

People generally have been reluctant to offer criticism to the New Deal over the country, even when it was felt that such might be in order. This condition has not been absent in Chilton County. Lots of things have gone considerably "against the grain," but our people have "grinned and endured it" because they did not want to be responsible for or accused of hindering the return of better times. We all felt a responsibility of doing our part in this worthy direction.

Big speakers have come here—right into our county—and done all in their power to uphold the actions of the New Deal and the Roosevelt administration at Washington. There has been every effort made to show up the merits of the movement. Not much has been said or done against it.

But the New Deal, like most everything else, has two sides to it. Not everything about it is good, by any means, neither is it all bad. But our people have remained silent about the bad features as long as they are going to. They are beginning to realize right where the tight places are and where the pinches really hurt; and more than that, folks are opening their eyes as to where we are drifting and what is apt to be the final outcome of all these new and hitherto untried measures. Most of all, our people are waking up to the fact that the government is fast draining its financial reserves and impairing its credit. It cannot spend money always as it has for the past year and a half, and still function properly, and people are beginning to realize it.

It is not unlike the fellow who dropped from a tall building, and as he came down past the third story said to himself, "Everything is all right so far." So long as the government keeps putting out its billions it is all right, but a blind man can see that our national credit will soon become impaired. And it looks as though we are approaching national bankruptcy faster than we are recovering from the depression—if we are in fact really recovering at all.

The industrial workers are torn up with strikes, business and industrial operations are regimented until they fell like they are in a straight-jacket. The federal government is trying to furnish money for everything, make everybody do this and not do that.

The agricultural administration is probably making itself felt more here in Chilton County right now than any other branch of the new operations. Farmers have about lost their bearings in trying to follow out the program regarding raising, destroying and marketing their cotton. Like many other classes of people they have never been able to see through what the government was trying to do for them, but they have been willing to try anything that was presented to them as being a heralder of better times. Our people in Chilton County have displayed finest loyalty to those who proposed to put us back on our feet.

But we are beginning to feel that we can run our own business better than anybody else can or than some unseen or unknown person can tell us how to.

We were in hard circumstances when the Democrats took charge of the country in March, 1933, but we are beginning to realize that we had rather live scanty and "tuff it out" a few years and know that we were headed toward sound recovery than to trade off our liberty for temporary relief only to find that we had really gotten nowhere toward permanent prosperity, but had found ourselves fast in the clutches of autocracy and communism.

Now, down to our local business in Chilton County—our politics, if you please. We said above that our people were loyal, and we stick to that. The Republicans of Chilton County have lent their aid to the federal authorities in their programs. We forgot about politics to a great extent. But can we afford to be swept off our feet by the alluring "bait" that the Democrats have been placing before us. We hate to admit that some Republicans have been overcome by the tempting inducements placed before them, and are thinking seriously of voting for some of the local Democratic ticket. So to speak, some Republicans have swallowed the hook, sinker and all, but mind you here, those Republicans will be sick of it before long. The Democratic party in Chilton County fundamentally is just what it has always been, and the Republican party is too. Men are fallible beings, but principles are principles, and time, even panics, do not change principles. We hope the Republicans of Chilton County will think soberly before they vote in the coming November election. We have lots at stake, and we cannot afford to let trifles and pretty-looking vanities throw us off track and leave us there to be sorry for years to come.

Democratic "bait" is always alluring. It is made more alluring when it is seasoned and flavored with silver and wrapped up in green back; it is most alluring when it is offered thus to a fellow about two-thirds in rags and whose stomach has not been good and full for weeks or months.

Any time a fellow just hauls off and offers to "give" you something, you may know that there is a trick in it somewhere. You will find yourself paying for it and paying dearly if you don't mind.

The Democratic nominees in Chilton County have been conducting a nice, quiet, sweet campaign and were trusting to the popularity of the New Deal to slide them into office in November. This has been looking very good, but the sailing is beginning to get a little rough now in places. The New Deal is not setting so well—in fact, the shine on the outside is beginning to wear off and the people over the country are beginning to see what it is really made of underneath the surface.

Republicans of Chilton County, let us not be deceived. Look beneath the shine on top. Rub your eyes and try to penetrate the mist that is in front of you. There is danger down the wrong road, and it will pay us to apprehend it. Experimenting is often very costly.

Another thing the people of this country, and Chilton County have become a little "groggy" over is the whiskey business. That is another "bait" the Democrats have offered us, and some have swallowed that too. We are going to be sick of that "inducement" before long. The question comes home to us in Chilton County, and a person does not have to be a philosopher to see it. It is an issue in the present political campaign in Chilton County, although nothing publicly has been said about it. The voters of Chilton County should think "soberly" over the whiskey and lawlessness question when making up your minds how to vote in November.

SERIES OF MEETINGS TO BE AT CHURCH OF CHRIST SOON

Evangelist Ivison L. Boles of Montgomery, Ala., begins a series of meetings at the church of Christ in Clanton on September 30th, at 11 a.m. Mr. Boles is noted for his pleasing manner, good delivery, clear thinking and knowledge of the Scriptures. If you fail to hear him you will not get all that is coming to you.

The meeting begins September 30, at 11 a.m. and will continue each night until further announcement is made. Come.

Extra Tax Fees After This Week

Penalties and extra charges and fees, as required by law, will have to be added to all tax payments in Chilton County not made on or before next Saturday, September 22, according to a statement given out by Tax Collector W. G. Culp Monday of this week. In making this statement it was the announced purpose of Mr. Culp to give publicity to same in order that all taxpayers concerned might know about it and save themselves these extra fees by paying delinquent taxes this week.

Mr. Culp's statement given to the newspapers for publication, is as follows:

"About two months ago I issued a statement calling the attention of delinquent taxpayers to the imposition by law of certain fees and extra costs, if taxes were not paid by a certain date. Some have responded to the warning, but many have not yet paid.

"I desire again to warn the people concerned to the approach of the end of the grace period on tax payments. I have gone the limit of my ability to extend time of payments of taxes, in my desire to help those who are delinquent. My powers to make further extension are exhausted. After next Saturday, September 22, all unpaid taxes will have to carry the addition of such fees, penalties and extra costs as are provided by law. I can make no further extensions.

"All taxes not paid by next Saturday will be subject to a decree of the Probate Judge for sale of the property on which taxes are due. I will have to submit same to the Probate Judge for decree, which will necessitate the addition of extra costs and fees according to law.

"I hope that all who are delinquent in tax payments may be able in the time remaining to save those extra costs. I would help you by further extensions if I could, but it is not in my power to do so."

C. Fenn Jones Elected Mayor

Will Take Up Duties of Office On the First of October

Mr. C. Fenn Jones was elected Mayor of Clanton in Monday's balloting by a vote of more than three to one over his single opponent, Mr. P. D. Wilson. Along with Mr. Jones all five of the present members of the Town Council were re-elected for another term of two years.

Following is the tabulation of votes as posted by election officials after the final count:

For Mayor

C. Fenn Jones	374
P. D. Wilson	109

For Councilmen

W. L. Popwell	348
Grady Heflin	444
H. S. Shaw	395
J. Watts Moore	424
L. E. Diefenderfer	403
J. E. Gowan	260

Dr. Gowan was the only new man seeking a place on the Council. He failed to make even a serious dent in the wall of popular approval that has been built up by those who have previously served in that capacity.

Both candidates for Mayor are new aspirants for the place. The present Mayor, J. Lee Smith, was not a candidate for re-election, as he is running for Probate Judge.

Mr. Popwell and Mr. Diefenderfer are members of the present Council by appointment. The former was appointed to fill the place of Mr. Reedie Taylor, and the latter took the place of Mr. Grady Broadhead.

Mr. Popwell was defeated in the election for councilman two years ago, but came back as a winner this time. Mr. Diefenderfer has never been a candidate before. He ran among the highest in Monday's balloting.

Grand Jury In Called Session

Judge Tate Recommended Investigation of County Gas Business

The Grand Jury of Chilton County was empanelled by Circuit Judge, F. Loyd Tate, Monday morning. In his charge to the jury Judge Tate, among other things, specifically instructed the jury to make a full investigation of alleged misuse of gasoline of Chilton County, pointing out that it is in the power of the grand jury to extend such investigation to cover actions of individuals, county employees and county officials with reference to uses of the county's gasoline.

Another thing which was stressed in the charge of Judge Tate was concerning investigation of violations of the law against driving motor vehicles by persons under the influence of liquor.

The members of the Grand Jury in session this week are as follows:

John A. Boockholdt, foreman; Joel T. Childress, Jace L. Holley, Clyde C. Lenoir, Wilbur Ward, R. Mose Robinson, Adolphus Gentry, William G. Shaw, Lee Headley, W. Eddie Childress, Geo. W. Calloway, W. Frank Reynolds, John T. Cooper, William D. O'Neal, Lee Ellison, Henry H. Armstrong, Timothy Donovan, W. Monroe Roebuck.

In his charge to the jury Judge Tate called attention to the unusual volume of crime in this circuit in recent months. While unwilling to name a specific cause for apparent increase of law violations, he followed with a lengthy discussion of present-day conditions.

Mention was made of the so-called "New Deal" in our government, in which the jurist took occasion to state to the grand jury that the tendency is to shorten hours and increase pay, which program, in his opinion, would ruin us, unless some healthy relaxation is provided for the idle hours. He referred to the old saying that "an idle mind is the devil's workshop."

Further in his discussion he stated that he had inquired from people of all classes and from all walks of life as to their opinion of present-day conditions. He said the only answer he could receive is that the people are hoping, and when asked what the basis of their hope is, they could offer no reason for being hopeful.

Delving deep into governmental affairs, he asserted that the system of our government, upon which liberty has been founded, apparently has been swept away, and the rights of the people taken away from them and given by congress to the president; bureaucratic forms of government in every county have been established, so that we are today governed through bureaus on orders from Washington, and personal rights and liberties of most of our citizens in county and state have been swept away.

The general interpretation of those who heard the discussions of Judge Tate is that his condemnation of many present day government practices constituted a most scorching denunciation of the "New Deal."

It is rumored that strangers have approached farmers in the county offering them above the market price for their cotton. Place your cotton in the government loan or sell to a reliable cotton buyer, any person who offers you above the market will bear watching. Before trading with strangers, consult your banker or your county agent.

MAN'S EYES CHANGED FROM BLACK TO BLUE

We hear of funny things nowadays, but here's one that is really unusual. Up until six or eight years ago Uncle Tom Parrish, now about 70 years old, had black eyes. Now his eyes are decidedly blue. And Uncle Tom can see fairly well yet. The old gentleman has suffered from partial paralysis a time or two, which may account for the change in color of his eyes.

Miss Mary Parr, field representative of the American National Red Cross, was a visitor to Clanton Monday, in the interest of work which comes under her supervision.

Chif among her interest on this visit was preliminary organization for the annual Red Cross Roll Call for membership, which comes in the period from Armistice to Thanksgiving.

After conferring with local Red Cross officials. Miss Parr announced the tentative selection of J. Mell Martin as chairman of the Roll Call membership for this year. Mr. Martin will be requested most earnestly to accept this important job.

A publicity campaign was outlined by Miss Parr which will bring the Red Cross Membership appeal to the personal attention of every person in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Franklin and son, John, of Montgomery, were in Clanton last Sunday visiting relatives.

Mr. J. W. Hayes and Mr. Sis Foshee attended a Chevrolet meeting in Montgomery Wednesday night.

SINGING TO BE AT BETHANY

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper to announce that there will be a singing at Bethany Baptist church eight miles south of Clanton in the afternoon, the fourth Sunday in September, beginning at two o'clock.

We will use the Leading Light book. We wish to revive our singing at this place. The interest is greater than has been for years. A number of the best singers in the county have promised to be with us on that day. Mr. W. M. Devaughn said that he would bring his quartet. So we are expecting a big day that evening. We especially invite one and all. If you can't sing, come anyway. We will appreciate your presence.—J. W. Devaughn.

ANNUAL SINGING AT TABERNACLE

The annual all day singing at the Tabernacle was postponed from the fourth Sunday in August until the second Sunday in September on account of the Bibb County Singing Convention at Centreville. It is not known at this time where the date of the singings will stand as they are or will be changed back to the old date.

The singing was called to order by Mr. J. P. Edwards with two songs. Mr. Marvin Doss led the prayer. Mr. J. Hudson Williams was elected chairman for the day and Mr. R. Olin Williams secretary. Then business took place on the old hill with an ideal day ahead.

The directors for the morning were as follows: W. G. Culp of Clanton, Claude Carnegie of Centreville, John Deason of Eoline, Russell Scott of Lawley, A. H. Glasscock of Jemison, E. L. Glasscock of Jemison, R. Olin Williams of Billingsley, Arthur Deason of Brent.

Now we all went to dinner, and you talk about a good one, it was fine. For the afternoon Mr. J. Hudson Williams sang two songs, and Mr. Akins Collins was added to the list of directors. Mr. R. Olin Williams sang a bass solo, and folks we had some good quartettes, too. The Brent Tabernacle quartet rendered several numbers during the day. The girls quartet, composed of Misses Lonnie, Alma and Bernice Gentry and Sidney Cash gets better every day.

This brings us to the close of the day with a good singing and a good time. We were dismissed with prayer by Mr. Jeff Hicks.—J. Hudson Williams, chairman; R. Olin Williams, secretary.

Farmers who have government cotton are advised to have same classed and stapled by a licensed classer. John Durwood Mullins holds such a license, and will be glad to serve all who call on him.

About All Of Us

Gentlemen: To Any and All Creditors Anywhere in the World.

"I am enclosing $4.00 on my account that is much past due, but wish to inform you that the present shattered condition of my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you my check in full in response to your request. My present financial condition is due to the effect of the federal laws, state laws, county laws, incorporation laws, by laws, brother-in-laws, mother-in-laws, and outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws I have been held down, held up, sat on, walked on, flattened, squeezed, and broke until I do not know what I am, where I am, or why I am.

"These laws compel me to pay a merchant's tax, capital tax, income tax, incorporation tax, real estate tax, auto tax, property tax, gas tax, light tax, cigarette tax, school tax, syntax, liquor tax and carpet tax.

"In addition to these laws I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization that the inventive mind of a man can invent. Give to the Society of St. John the Baptist, the Woman's Relief, Navy League, the Children Home, the Freeman's Benefit, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Gold Digger's Home; also, to every hospitl and chritable institution in town, the Red Cross, the Black Cross, the White Cross, the Purple Cross, the Flaming Cross and the Double Cross.

"The government has governed my business so that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected, examined, reexamined, informed, required, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known and unknown need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I refuse to donate to all and then go out and beg, borrow or steal the money to give away, I am ousted, cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied about, held up, held down, and robbed until I am just about ruined.

"The only reason that I am clinging to life at all is to see what is coming next."—Just any of us. Contributed by G. I. Smith, Thorsby, Ala.

Government Exhibits At Ala. State Fair

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 18. — The government exhibit which will be sent to the Alabama State Fair opening in Birmingham Monday, September 24, will be the most complete government exhibit ever brought to a fair in Alabama and will be replete with demonstrations and information for the farmers of Alabama. One of the features which is sure to attract attention in the poultry show building is the "talking hen." This robot hen not only talks to the fair visitors in English that they can understand, but she also lays an egg. Quite a remarkable hen. No telling how many eggs per day she will lay if given enough encores by the crowd.

This hen is bigger than any Rhode Island Red or Plymouth Rock one ever saw, too. She is ten feet high, sixteen feet long and has a frontage of fourteen feet. One could cut regular porter house steaks off that hen if she ever runs afoul of a strangle-hold expert in a neck wringing contest.

Animals that talk seem to be one of the watchwords at the fair this year, as the government is also sending the talking cow along to Birmingham. This cow is known as "the milk factory" and she spends every waking hour giving milk. She is equipped with a radio amplifyer that tells all about feeding and many other things relating to the dairy industry.

Joseph W. Hitchcock, chief of exhibits for the United States government, will send two men here with the two car exhibit and they will remain in Birmingham throughout fair week.

Another feature of the government exhibit is entitled, "The Realm of the Honey Bee." It is a continuous moving picture of the honey bee at work as he goes about the rather sweet pastime of gathering and manufacturing honey for the waffle trade. Perhaps the screen version of the bee industry will also show a close up of a drone's yawn—who can tell?

Uncle Sam's part in Alabama's rabbit show in the poultry building will be to contribute revolving mannikins showing how the food and fur industry consumes Mr. Rabbit once his jugular vein has emptied out his life's blood and he is being made ready for market.

In this connection, manager P. T. Strieder states that the black and white rabbit ranch of Tampa, Fla., will have an interesting demonstration in the rabbit building, showing how rabbits contribute to the hat, coat and fur life of the country. This feature will show these garments in the process of manufacture with lectures and etc.

R. B. Jones, Chief of Division of the Poultry Department of the State Agricultural Department under Commissioner Seth P. Storrs, will have charge of the state exhibit in the poultry department and will spend the entire week at the fair grounds.

Dozens of other features too numerous to mention will be sent here by Uncle Sam and also by Commissioner Storrs's state department of agriculture. This is an insurance policy that the poultry and agricultural departments of the fair this year will eclipse anything ever attempted in this line in Alabama.

WEBER WAGONS

For 89 Years WEBER WAGONS Have Been The Popular Choice of Discriminating Farmers in All Sections of the Country

WEBER FARM GEARS AND BOXES ARE BEST KNOWN BY THE SERVICE THEY GIVE

The name "Weber" on a farm wagon means much to the man who owns one. It is the identification mark of quality, backed by over 89 years of farm wagon manufacturing experience.

If your requirements demand a strong, light-draft wagon for hard use over all kinds of roads, we urge you to investigate the Weber first. Compare this fine wagon with others in its price class, then you be the judge.

When you inspect a Weber wagon at the McCormick-Deering dealer's store, do it carefully. Notice the thoroughly seasoned "A" grade wood stock in the wheels, axles, reach and tongue. Don't fail to examine the wheels, for in Weber wheels only the finest of oak and hickory spokes are used. The hubs and rims are made of "A" grade oak and the steel tires and hub bands are placed on the rims by a hydraulic press. Weber farm gears and boxes are built to give satisfactory service over a long period of years and can be supplied in various capacities and sizes to meet practically every hauling need. Your investment in a farm wagon can be made doubly profitable if you select a Weber.

We have just received a solid carload of WEBER WAGONS one and two-horse in all sizes. Our prices are right for we will give you the benefit of lower prices made possible by car lot purchasing. Let us show you these wagons and quote you prices. We will accept your old wagon in trade. We will also accept your used car in trade on wagon.

All WEBER WAGONS can be bought with small down payment and liberal terms on balance.

$485 AND UP, F. O. B. DETROIT

"WE decreased our ton-mile cost 35% by changing to Ford V-8 Trucks," writes a Wisconsin transfer company.

A California user reports hauling gross loads of 14 tons over a hilly, 80-mile run regularly in three hours.

Haulers right in this community are making similar records with the new Ford V-8 Truck. Talk especially to those who formerly used expensive "big equipment." Their loads mean little to the brute pulling-power of the 80-horsepower Ford V-8 engine. "Tough spots" and hills hardly slow it down. With its high speed, the new Ford V-8 is actually giving many haulers extra trips per day.

But don't stop at these facts. Look at cost sheets. Figures for gas, oil, repairs and replacements will show that the ton-mile operating cost of the new Ford V-8 is actually lower than that of a "4." The new Ford brakes and clutch take abuse that ordinarily would mean a trip to the repair shop.

The new Ford V-8 literally sets a new standard of truck performance and economy. It is America's great truck value.

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER

Many were the hearts stricken with sadness and grief when the death angel came into her home near Thorsby, Ala., on the night of August 24, 1934 and carried from us our aged mother, Mrs. Beatrice Manning, widow of Mitchell B. Manning, who preceded her to the grave May 4, 1914.

She was born January 11, 1850 in Tallapoosa County, was the daughter of J. M. and Rebecca Lauderdale. She moved with her parents to Coosa County, near Rockford, where she grew to young womanhood and was married to Mitchell B. Manning of near Rockford, December 15th, 1870. To this union was born eleven childrtn, eight boys and three girls. Six boys and two girls are living, J. W. having died June 22, 1900; Grover Julius, April 24, 1902; Laura Mason Webb, wife of S. J. M. Webb died October 31, 1932.

She was a member of the Missionary Baptist church and was a constant Bible reader, and when she worked, as she did when able, it was always with her Bible by her side. For a number of years she had been in failing health and on the 30th of December, 1933 was taken seriously ill and patiently bore her suffering, ever cheering and encouraging those around her until the end.

Sunday, August 26 in Rockford Baptist church, Rev. Wallace Cook, assisted by Rev. E. L. Manning, conducted her funeral, in the presence of a crowded house of sorrowing relatives and friends. Pallbearers were six of her grandsons, under the direction of Spigener. Burial was in the family lot of the cemetery in Rockford.

Surviving her are eight children, D. O. of Maplesville, A. R., A. B. and M. of Thorsby, G. E. of Pratt City, E. M. of Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. W. T. White of Maplesville and Miss Letha Lona V. Manning of Thorsby; one sister, Mrs. Victoria Goodgame, Goodwater, Ala.; twenty grandchildren, fourteen great grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

Mother, we miss you, oh, we miss you. We miss your gentle voice, your loving form. A place is vacant in our home that never can be filled. A pain is in our hearts that time alone can heal.—Written by A. B. and Leatha Lona V. Manning. b-pd

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 31:1-9; 37:36, 37.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. —Isaiah 26:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King's Prayer and God's Answer.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Directs Nations.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God the Ruler of Nations.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Recognizing God in National Affairs.

I. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz.

1. Prophecy concerning Immanuel (Isa. 7). The occasion of this prophecy was the alliance that was formed between Israel and Assyria. Their threatened invasion of Judah greatly alarmed Ahaz. Isaiah assured him that God's purpose concerning the nation would not fail. As an object lesson, he was instructed to take with him his son, whose name meant "The remnant shall return." He compared the confederate kings to two smoking firebrands which would soon be extinguished. He urged upon Ahaz the exercise of faith in God, offering to confirm his faith by working any miracle desired.

2. A promise of Divine protection (Isa. 31). Ahaz foolishly called for the help of Assyria against Israel and Syria. Isaiah rebuked him for this, showing him that his help was in God.

II. Judah Invaded by the Assyrians (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh meets a deputation from Judah (vv. 1-21). He represented Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. His plan was to minimize Egypt's anticipated assistance. His method to accomplish this was: a. Intimidation (vv. 4-9). He tried to bully them into submission. He taunted them with their weakness, and told them that Egypt was a broken reed.

b. Misrepresentation (v. 10). He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God, even declaring that the Lord had sent him to destroy Egypt.

c. He endeavored to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing such a panic, the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language.

d. He promised them plenty in another land (vv. 16, 17). He urged them to make an agreement with him, and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty similar to their own land. Knowing that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted, the people were loyal to Hezekiah.

2. The deputation's report to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments in fear and dismay, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

III. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37).

1. He resorted to the house of the Lord (v. 1). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that whoever in time of distress resorted to his house would be heard by him (2 Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. He sent unto Isaiah (vv. 2-7). The natural and logical thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. Isaiah sent back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.

3. Hezekiah's prayer (vv. 14-20). He spread the letter of Sennacherib before the Lord and prayed. His prayer was direct and simple.

a. He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea.

b. He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19).

c. He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord, showing to the surrounding nations that he was the only Lord God.

4. Isaiah's message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).

a. That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).

b. That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hands (vv. 24-28).

c. That judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35). Deliverance would soon come, and that through the energy of the Lord of Hosts.

IV. The Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and slew in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men. Therefore Sennachrib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem, and after his defeat he went back to Ninevah to live, and there while worshiping in the house of his god, he was assassinated

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

Will Rogers said, "Everybody is ignorant about something." Somebody else has said, "Everybody is crazy about something." I know Will is right, and I am persuaded to believe that everybody is more or less crazy. In other words, no one is absolutely perfect mentally. When man fell he became imperfect physically, mentally and spiritually. The only absolutely perfect person the world ever saw was Jesus Christ. He had perfect poise, and all of the noble qualities were well balanced in His personality.

Waves of insanity sweep the world. A few years ago everybody rich and poor, educated and uneducated, went crazy about a Florida real estate boom. Later representative citizens and lowly citizens of all communities went insane about the Wall Street boom. Anybody with any sense at all should have known that the Wall Street balloon would burst. Man has always been crazy. The world reached its highest culture in Greece, but man did not have enough sense to save that civilization. Capital in this country is selfish. Labor is selfish. Both crowds are crazy.

The latest craze is the religious craze. Preachers are letting rattlesnakes bite them in the pulpit. If the devil can't freeze us to death he tries to burn us up with fanaticism. Everybody knows that the cold scholastic modernistic movement has emptied the churches and wrecked the faith of multiplied thousands in this nation. Modernism has failed. Now, in the midst of the distress and unrest of this disorganized age when people are feeling after God, a wave of wild religious fanaticism seems to be sweeping over us. God gives us people that stay in the middle of the road, people with trained minds and warm hearts. If we over develop the head and under develop the heart, we become scientific and cold. If we over develop the heart and under develop the head, we become wild religious fanatics.

It is unscriptural for a man to let a rattlesnake bite him as a demonstration. Paul did not pick up a viper to show the people around him that he was too good to be poisoned. The viper bit him and God took care of him, but Paul was not making a demonstration. Paul was in the line of duty. He was helping build a fire. He was not hunting snakes, he was hunting sticks. The devil told Jesus to cast himself from the temple and make a spectacle of Himself. Jesus said, in substance, that that would be tempting God. I tell my boys and girls in the Bob Jones College that if duty calls them under a tree when a storm comes to go under the tree and ask God to take care of them. If it is His will He will do it. No one has a right to go under a tree in a storm unless duty calls him there. If duty calls a man into a den of rattlesnakes, then he should go if he knew that every rattlesnake in the den should bite him and that death was inevitable. A man who demonstrates, as a certain man did recently that a rattlesnake won't hurt him is a religious maniac. He is suffering from religious ego mania. In other words, he is suffering from religious "big head."

IN MEMORY OF H. T. LITTLEJOHN

The death angel visited the home of Mrs. H. T. Littlejohn on Thursday morning, September 13 and carried from their midst their beloved husband and father, Mr. H. T. Littlejohn. He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, two sons, Mack and Harold, three brothers and two sisters.

The body was laid to rest in the Liberty Hill cemetery Friday morning, September 14, at 11:00 a.m. Rev. S. J. Ezell and Rev. A. L. Foshee conducted the services. Martin of Clanton was in charge.—Written by Gertice Riggins and Jewell Cost.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of thanking the people of this community and surrounding communities for the help, kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father, Mr. Hiram Littlejohn, who died September 13. Also do we thank Rev. S. J. Ezell and Rev. A. L. Foshee for their comforting words. May the Lord bless each and everyone is our prayer.—Mrs. Hiram Littlejohn and children.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

September is the month in which we celebrate the coming into being of the Constitution of the United States. If there is any considerable question about how, in fewer than 150 years we have become he richest and potentially, the most powerful nation in the world, the answer can be found in this great American document.

Never in the history of the world has there been anything like the development of the United States of America. Our national achivement is the wonder and envy of the entire civilized world.

And a great deal of it has been due to the form of government under which we have lived. The early fathers were a fearless and a hardy race, the bravest and most enterprising of Europe's citizens who came here because they loved liberty more than conentment, opportunity more than safety. But in spite of this, it is doubtful whether we could have achieved our present greatness as a nation, had it not been for the framers of the Constitution, and the government which they fashioned for us.

The proof is easy to find. Before the creation of our Constitution the American nation was a loosely connected aggregation of colonies, hemmed in by the ocean on one side and red savages on the other. There was no common feeling, no common purpose. There was every danger that these colonies might fall apart and set up a series of petty governments. So serious was the situation that many thought a monarch, recruited from Europe's royalty, was the only means of safety and stability.

But the Constitution changed all of this, and soon the United States of America was a going concern. It has been a going concern ever since. It has succeeded because our Constitutional government has given us the greatest possible amount of personal liberty, together with a profound and effective nationalism. Its system of checks and balances has worked successfully, and has done so because the Constitution is a practical document, framed not by theorists and professional reformers, but by honest, sane, hard-headed Americans, who numbered among their ranks some of the finest minds in the civilized world of their day. They built not upon theory but upon experience.

In these modern days of internationalism and depression there has grown up in our country a tendency to sneer at the solid accomplishments of the past, to make light of personal liberty and of patriotism, to seek to substitute for the solid American precepts of the Constitution, a doctrine made in Europe, or perhaps in the Orient.

These ultra-modern preachers of the new faith tell us that the days of rugged individualism are gone, that the old customs and the old religion have outlived their usefulness. Instead of seeking to make our own way according to our ability, our industry, and our integrity, we are told that, under the new dispensation, Uncle Sam will do it all. Individual effort will not be the measure of our success; it will come to us through regimentation and government regulation and control, perhaps in the long run through federal ownership of property and control of the rights of the citizen. This doctrine, we are told is better than that which was taught by the Constitutional fathers. Many are inclined to accept it because it provides a way out, an alibi for our own shortcomings, no matter what these may have been.

But this so-called new idea, which is not a new idea at all, will not work. It has been tried in the past and has failed, just as it will fail again. Constitutional government, the American plan, has proved a success. If we cherish it and follow it, we will again pull from the slough of despond as we have so many times in the past. If we listen to the strange voices and follow off after strange gods, we will pay in ruin and despair, and our children, and our children's children too, will pay in full measure for our folly.

Let us then in this month of September, rededicate our efforts to the maintenance of American Constitutional government. Let us renew our faith in sound Americanism and send back to Europe and Asia the false doctrines which can do nothing but spread ruin and despair in the free atmosphere of America.

HISTORY OF OUR FLAG

There is an interesting history of the American flag, now the oldest national emblem in the world, in the current issue of the National Republic. It was written by Capt. Donald R. Gerrish, District Chaplain of the First New Jersey CCC. In part Captain Gerrish writes:

"A flag is floating in the breeze over Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Massachusetts. We can scarcely visualize that day of destiny, and of hope. On that January day of 1776 the flag we see is the Grand Union Flag (the British Union, and thirteen stripes.)

"We wait until June 14, 1777, for the Continental Congress to decree the flag of the new nation shall have thirteen stars, where the British Union had been, in a blue field. The house in which Betsy Ross made the first flag of that design is a national shrine, and justly so. In the struggle on the battlefield of Brandywine that flag first faced the fire of its foes, on September the eleventh. With the growth of the nation and the addition of the first two states—Kentucky and Vermont, in 1794—two new stars and two new stripes were added, and into three conflicts that flag was carried to victory. In 1818 Congress decreed that the flag should consist of the original thirteen stripes, and a star for each state in the Union. The red of the flag represents the valor, the white the truth and the blue the loyalty of a united people! Calvin Cooledige well said: 'It is the flag of a people who have arrived and have the determination to remain.'

"The day has arrived in which Americans must see the flag, not alone in its historic setting but see it against the blue of the sky, in a turbulent world. What does it mean that today, here and there, throughout the republic there is another flag, which alien-minded natives and foreign-born individuals are pushing to the front? Where else in the world among self-respecting people would that be allowed? What is there in that flag of red which does not stand forth in the flag of these United States? There is something in that other flag of hatred, class struggle and violence, which has no place in America! To these shores from many lands have come millions of men and women who have made the nation what it is today. Room for them? Yes, and a welcome too! But breeze sufficient for only one flag. In the words of President Wilson, 'the flag shall wear a new luster' in the high resolution of a patriotic people, the emblem of whose unity, and justice, and might, it shall forever be! There is a rather recent emblem representative of the effort of America to win its fight against industrial and economic difficulty. To use that emblem as a mask for unpatriotic greed, and selfish individualism, has been a rather dangerous procedure. But lines of marching men have by law been compelled to carry the flag at the head of their columns, while their hearts have been swearing allegiance to another flag which has followed in their ranks. It would be well to make a pilgramage occasionally to the Hall of Flags in the State House at Boston and stand uncovered in the presence of those battletorn standards until the full meaning of the costliness of our American institutions of liberty, and law, and justice, shall forever make the flag the symbol of a great history, a great responsibility, and a great hope!"

The administration at Washington informs us that food profiteering will be prevented this fall and winter. There is to be no gouging of the consumer. This sounded fine until we happened to think of their platform back in the campaign of 1932 promised a balanced budget, reduced government expenditures, a cut in the number on the payroll, sound money and tariff revision.

If the government at Washington is going to keep on increasing the number of political jobs as fast as they have been increased in the last twelve or fifteen months, it might be a good idea for the athletic departments of our colleges and universities to give a course in pie-counter jumping.

According to the Chicago Tribune the government is constructing a new $19,000,000 irrigation dam in Arizona at a point where there isn't any water. Well, what's wrong with that? After the project is completed, Congress can appropriate another nineteen million to haul water to the dam.

The other evening we heard a woman ask what in the world will become of the present generation. That's an easy one lady. They'll fall in love, get married, have children and do all sorts of things, and as they grow older they'll worry about what's to become of the younger generation.

NEED FOR RELIEF

While the argument goes back and forth between Mr. Richberg and his critics as to just how far, if at all, the New Deal has helped us back on the road to prosperity, Commissioner William Hodson of the Department of Public Welfare in New York City has issued a report on public relief in the nation's greatest municipality which reveals the grim fact that the depression is still with us. Mr. Hodson declares that nearly 400,000 families, or about one fourth of the entire population of New York City are now receiving assistance in the different forms of relief. Before the end of the year Mr. Hodson predicts that about a half million families in New York City alone, representing approximately 2,000,000 people will be on public relief. In the nation Mr. Richberg himself estimates that 5,000,000 families will be on relief by February 1, 1934. In part Mr. Hodson said:

"More and more people seem to be coming to the end of their resources with each new month. What a huge undertaking the relief work of the city is may be more readily appreciated when the picture is presented in terms of dollars. At the present rate we will have spent during the entire calendar year $201,000,000 for all forms of public relief in the city."

Unfortunately New York is not the only city in the country in which relief is needed and will be needed in increasing degree during the coming winter. It will be necessary for every community and state to do its utmost in assisting in the great humane program. Now is the time to get ready for it. Drawing rosy pictures of the future will not solve the problem.

While the debate waxes hotter on how far we are out of the depression the relief rolls continue to grow. Another unfortunate circumstance lies in the fact the cost of living has increased materially during the past year, and this affects those whose incomes have not increased as well as those whose incomes are larger, and the former are very much in the majority. It is time to tighten our belts and to get ready to do our bit in relieving the situation so far as possible. In spite of all the optimistic statements about what the New Deal has accomplished, the relief rolls are longer than they were a year ago.

COOLIDGE STANDARDS

"It is the fashion," said Congressman Beck at Plymouth, Vt., "of some of the academic apprentices who now constitute an overgrown federal bureaucracy to sneer at the administration of Calvin Coolidge." He reminded them that, if they were able to command the lavish and often too wanton expenditures of billions of dollars, the opportunity was partly due to a reduction of the public debt by $10,000,000,000 and the promotion of prosperity and public comfort by a corresponding reduction of taxation, through the sound political philosophy and financial sagacity of Calvin Cooledge.

They could be reminded of other things equally important. Though it may be their fashion to sneer at the administration of Calvin Coolidge and to claim that he and his administrative associates were responsible for bringing on the later economic collapse, President Roosevelt himself has often asserted that the goal of his bureaucratic policy and expenditure of billions was to bring prices back and with them business activity and employment to the levels of 1926, or one of the years in which Coolidge was presiding over the affairs of the nation and the public welfare.

Why seek to return to that era and to the conditions of the country in Coolidge's administration if, in fact, his political philosohy and his administration were the sinister cause of the economic setback of the world? They know better.

The writings and speeches of Calvin Coolidge abound in warnings of economy and in the assertions of the fundamentals of our political and other institutions and their progress. They are in sharp contrast to the output of the "academic apprentices"—Tugwell for example—and the time will come when the people will reread and reappreciate them as terse and forceful expressions of the essentials of national life and progress. —Springfield Union.

INCREASED BUILDING COSTS

It is now generally recognized that one of the reasons, and in fact the principal reason, why there has been no revival of building is that the costs are too high. It may be that there is a shortage of a million homes in the country, as many experts tell us. But the people are not going to do any great amount of building with the costs of construction up to where they were in the boom year of 1929. They will not do it, even on money loaned by the government to any great extent.

James A. Moffett, federal housing commissioner, realizing the handicap which high prices are to the building industry, made a statement that builders will be protected by the federal government against exhorbitant prices of building material. This is all very fine. Nobody loves the profiteer, in construction or in any other line.

But the increase in the cost of building and in the various materials which go into building has not been brought about alone by profiteering. It has been due in great part to one of the government agencies—the NRA. Anyone who doubts this has only to examine the facts to ascertain how much more it costs to operate an industry under the codes. B. C. Forbes, the noted financial writer, said recently in an article in the Washington D. C. Hehald, that he knew of one industrial company in the United States that was compelled to operate, under not ten, twenty or thirty, but under eighty codes. Do you think the operating costs of that company have been increased any during the past twelve or fourteen months? This may be and undoubtedly is an extreme case, but there are thousands of concerns which are operating under more than one code with a consequent increase in their cost of doing business and of the price of the materials they sell. This applies to the building supply as well as to all other industries.

So it would seem to an impartial observer that one way to stimulate building would be to lower its costs by abolishing a great deal of the red tape in which it is entangled.

No wonder it took forty-two years to build Solomon's temple, says a Hopkins man. He had one thousand and one wives. Think of the suggestions of various alterations they made to the contractors.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

Secretary Wallace is credited with expressing the written opinion that we ought to cease giving government aid to our merchant marine and have our foreign trade handled for the most part by foreign ships in the mistaken belief that this would induce foreign countries to buy more of the products of our farmers. The protest which followed the publication of this statement was loud, and only died down after president Roosevelt had issued a statement on the merchant marine which contradicted the views of Mr. Wallace as against public policy.

The Navy League of the United States has very properly issued a statement endorsing the views of President Roosevelt as opposed to those of Secretary Wallace. The statement issued by Mr. Macy, the president of the league, commenting on the Presidents statement said in part:

"He rightly pointed out the need of merchant ships as an adjunct of the navy in time of war or national emergency, as well as the need of American ships to carry our trade during a general war when foreign ships are withdrawn from American trade or driven from the sea.

"We are neutral under such circumstances from 1914 to 1917, and we have short memories, indeed, if we have forgotten so soon the penalty we paid for our lack of American ships.

"A navy consists of a battle fleet, a merchant marine and naval bases. It is a case of 'all for one, and one for all.' The adequacy of all three, as the British have known for centuries, and as Americans cannot too soon learn is essential to adequate naval power.

"It is also necessary, 'to assure the protection of our world-wide foreign trade, not only in time of war but in time of peace. In 1908, our battleship fleet could not have made its memorable cruise around the world without depending upon foreign ships for its fuel supply, but this instructive, if humiliating lesson was soon forgotten. During the World War our navy had to depend upon the merchant ships of our allies. What would have happened had we fought alone?

"In 1914 our merchant marine, having received no government support of any consequence since 1859, carried less than one-tenth of our seaborne foreign commerce. When war broke out, most of the foreign ships we had depended on for 90 per cent of our ocean trade were immediately unavailable.

"In consequence, American goods consigned to world markets congested our dock terminals and railroad sidings for miles. The freight rates soared to ten times their normal levels. All sections of the country felt the destructive effects of our shortage on sea transport. Our farmers alone suffered a loss estimated at $600,000,000.

"When we entered the war, we were forced to spend $3,500,000,000 for a hastily constructed aggregation of ships, not properly designed for world trade competition and therefore mainly a wasteful burden after the war. Today, after fifteen years, we are paying nearly $100,000,000 a year in interest alone for the pre-war neglect of our merchant marine.

"This is more than four times the amount of our present investment in subsidies essential to our foreign trade merchant ships, $23,000,000, without which they would be swept from the seas by lower cost foreign competition which has the added benefit of subsidies.

"With the aid of government subsidies, American ships now carry about 36 per cent of our overseas foreign commerce. While this is a great improvement over pre-war conditions, we should go forward, not back. We should have a merchant marine carrying at least 50 per cent of our seaborne foreign trade in order to control freight rates, develop and maintain world markets and have in readiness at all times adequate naval reserve in case of war."

DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, has called attention to the unreliability of statements frequently made by radical speakers as to the mal-distribution of wealth in the United States. It is frequently said by these class-hatred organizers that something like seventy-five per cent of the wealth of the country is held by two or three or four per cent of the population. The statement is of course erroneous and misleading. In figuring the total population, the figures always take a percentage of the entire population which includes infants in arms, youngsters in grade schools and colleges, married women whose husbands are property owners, and many others who should be excluded in making such comparisons.

But even aside from that, as Dr. Butler well states, the evidence at hand disproves the statements of the radicals regarding the distribution of our national wealth. As he points out there are more than 15,000,000 holders of corporate securities in the United States; 45,000,000 people who have savings accounts totaling twenty-five billions of more; 10,000,000 members of Building and Loan Associations whose assets total more than eight billions of dollars; 115,000,000 life insurance policies with a face value of more than a hundred billion! In addition to that it may be added that half of the families in the United States own their own homes and more than half of the farms are without mortgages. Compare these figures with any that can be gathered in regimented countries like Russia, Italy, Germany, Poland and Austria. Compare them with figures which can be gathered in any other country on the face of the globe, for that matter.

The fact is, as Dr. Butler pointed out, that radicals and real liberals are entirely different sorts of beings. Few radicals are really liberals. What they seek is not the extension of personal freedom in the interest of the individual but complete regimentation to make the state all powerful over the individual. Their redistribution of wealth, if carried to its logical conclusion, would be the elimination of wealth. They would equalize by sinking all to the common level. They will not increase the number of life insurance policy holders, building and loan association members, security holders, and so on, if given power to carry out this plan but will "equalize" ownership of wealth by destroying wealth, either through necessarily heavy taxation or inflation.

PILING IT ON THE TAXPAYERS

The Boston Evening Transcript complains that "while the home owners of Boston struggle to find the money wherewith to pay a 1934 tax rate of $37.50—the highest in the history of the city—some of Boston's municipal leaders are already talking of a still higher rate for 1935."

What are Boston's home owners doing to protect themselves against extravagance in government? Are they telling their municipal leaders that they must cut off unessential activities? Have they done anything to organize against the distributors of the people's money?

Boston is one of the many American towns where politicians are piling taxes on property owners. All the warning against extravagance in government has accamplished little. Politicians seek votes and the greater the number of persons on the payrolls the more assurance politicians have that they will be continued in power.

Taxes are mounting for the reason that the people do not assert themselves. Too many Americans are imbued with the mistaken belief that government scatters easy money. It isn't easy money. Persons and concerns which pay taxes draw their funds from the people who support them. Government obtains its funds from the payers of licenses and taxes.

Former Senator James A. Reed, Missouri Democrat, at the World's Fair, Chicago—"The world is not safe for Democracy abroad. Neither is Democracy safe in this republic . . . The citizen forced to surrender his gold . . . was robbed by his own government. Was there ever so rank a piece of brutalized rascality?"

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of The Chicago Tribune, in Philadelphia—"You are not free when a military despot can excommunicate you from the industrial world without trial . . . Do you want it to be treason to criticize your own government? An agent of the Department of Labor and Gen. Johnson have already made it so."

Former U. S. Senator Otis F. Glenn, R., Ill., speaking in Chicago — "The constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of his property without due process of law has certainly been, in spirit, violated by the cancellation of contracts without hearing, by the confiscation of privately owned gold . . . by the declarations in various states against the collection of moneys due on mortgages."

Woodland Products

With the aid of mills over the state we have compiled another brief report on prices being paid for the different woodland products. Some products do not seem to be active enough to enable us to get a fair average of their value. However, a large part of these are covered in the price of logs and stumpage.

Prices generally seem to be up from six months ago, while market activity and the volume of products moving are not all that could be desired. In studying these reports from various mills one thing noted especially is that not enough distinction is made between different grades in logs and the quality of standing timber. Most standing timber (stumpage) is bought on the basis of the No. 2 and better logs it will cut, while some buy No. 3 and better, and not enough allowance is made for stumpage that will run high in good logs. The same applies to logs where they are bought on the basis of No. 2 and better where a large number may be "better." A great deal more attention should be given by sellers of stumpage and logs to the quality and value of their products as is done with other commodities. All quotations are on 1,000 board feet measure.

Long leaf stumpage ranges from $2.00 to $12.00 with an average of $5.00 being paid for No. 2 and better grades. This is brought up to 20 miles distance with an average of 10 miles from the mill. Quotations range about as high on the low grades by some mills as for higher grades by others, and low prices quoted by some on high grade products.

Shortleaf Pine Stumpake ranges from $1.00 to $5.00 with most quotations at $2.00 to $4.00 and an average being paid of $3.00 for No. 2 and better up to 20 miles from the mills with an average of 8 miles away.

White Oak Stumpage ranges from $2.50 to $5.00 with an average of $3.50. Offers are on No. 2 and better grades of logs at an average of 10 miles distance from the mill. Here again very little regard seems to be shown for values of different grades. At least, premiums are not high for the better grades.

Red Oak Stumpage ranges from $2 to $5.00 with an average of $2.75 for trees yielding No. 2 and better logs. Distance from the mill is about the same as for white oak.

Red Gum Stumpage is from $1.00 to $4.00 and averages about $2.65 for No. 2 at 10 miles average distance from the mill.

Yellow Poplar Stumpage ranges from $1.00 to $4.00 with an average of $3.85 for No. 2 and up at 10 miles distance.

Hickory stumpage runs $2.00 to $5.00 and average $3.00 at 10 miles distance from the mill.

Ash Stumpage has a wide range running from $3.00 to $15.00 with an average of $5.50 for No. 2 or better.

With the better kinds of hardwood like ash, red gum, white oak, poplar, etc., there is a rather wide spread in value between the different grades of logs and it pays the owner to sell by grade if possible.

Farmers who are in position to harvest and sell logs and thereby realize cash on spare labor should be interested in the following prices on logs delivered at the mill. Most prices are on No. 2 and better grades with the better grades bringing several dollars premium over the common grades. A few make offerings on No. 3 logs.

Longleaf ranges $6 to $15 and averages 10.

Shortleaf ranges $5 to 12 and averages $8.

White and red oak ranges $7.50 to $20 and averages $10.

Red and black gum ranges $7.50 to $25 and averages $10.

Yellow Poplar ranges $8 to 30 and averages $12.

Hickory ranges $8 to 30 and averages $13.

(One mill makes a difference in the price of $10 from No. 1 to No. 2 grades.)

Ash ranges $8 to $25 and averages $13.

Of course, code rates govern the prices on different grades of lumber and are more or less constant over the state.

Cross ties are quoted at 60c for No. 3, 70c for No. 4 and 80c for No. 5 in northeast Alabama. These are presumably hardwood ties. Dense pine in southeast Alabama are 30c, 40c and 50c.

The outlook in the minds of the majority doesn't seem very bright. Some are pessimistic, others believe it will be better. A great deal seems to depend on the government's housing act and the newly created demand for wood products. Possibly an improvement after a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone of Dothan have recently moved to Clanton and have rooms with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Martin. Mr. Stone will be in charge of the Reemployment Bureau in Clanton. He will succeed Mr. Kelley.

TIME TO PLANT PEAS AND VETCH

The time is here for planting hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas. The best time to plant according to the experiment station at Auburn is between September 15 and October 15. A mighty good rule to follow is to plant after the first good rain in September. The earlier winter cover crops are planted the earlier they can be plowed in next spring.

We would like to suggest the following procedure in planting hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas:

1. Purchase good seed.
2. Get at least 20 pounds of vetch or 30 pounds of peas for each acre you plan to plant.
3. Get good inoculation and follow the instructions on the package when using it. Be sure to inoculate the seed.
4. Either sow broadcast or drill. Cover the seed 2 to 4 inches deep, depending on the type of soil. On heavy, clay soil, the seed should be covered about two inches. On sandy soil, cover 3 to 4 inches.

These crops will usually do better if the land is ridged at planting time so that water will not stand and cover the plants. Austrian winter peas are very easily drowned.

The best results I saw last spring was where the seed were broadcast and a middlebuster used in the cotton middles to cover the seed. This makes the ground rather difficult to plow in the spring, but assures an early growth of peas.

On poor land, or any land that has not been heavily fertilized for the past few years, phosphate will pay big dividends under vetch and peas.

Basic slag is the best fertilizer for these crops due to the fact that it contains a high per cent of lime and is cheaper than superphosphate. Four hundred pounds of basic slag should be used per acre.

MR. N. G. CARROLL DIED

Funeral for N. G. Carroll, age 67 years, was held Tuesday morning at Providence church. Interment was in the church cemetery, with the Rev. J. D. Hughes, assisted by Rev. Nelson and Rev. Hightower, officiating. Spigener Funeral Home was in charge.

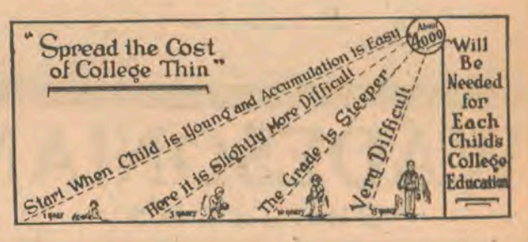
Use Life Insurance to Pay the College Bills

Some day son or daughter will say, "I am ready. I have graduated with honors from high school." . . and you will face the problem of college bills.



Ask this question:

"Would it be easier for me to pay five or six percent interest on four thousand dollars during the next fifteen years, or to pay four thousand dollars cash in four years?"

Under the Life Insurance plan the cost is spread so thin that a payment of only five or six percent annually upon the sum needed is all that is required to accumulate a college fund—providing you do not wait too long to begin.

A Life Insurance company will contract to complete the college fund whether or not father is alive when the great day comes.

Four thousand dollars cash for each child in the space of four short years—or five or six percent on that sum if the start is made now.

Which plan is easier, safer, better?

Carnival Midway At Ala. State Fair

Birmingham, Ala. — The Alabama State Fair, opening here Monday, is bringing the world's largest carnival midway to this district for the first time.

The midway is made up of the Royal American Shows with 24 attractions, 14 thrilling new rides, and a score of other features. This organization brings a personnel of 1,100 performers, managers and helpers to the Alabama State Fair on 42 double-length railroad cars.

In addition to the midway the Alabama state fair has the largest group of grandstand attractions ever assembled anywhere in the south. There will be automobile races, government and local agricultural exhibits, and the most complete assortment of free performances ever assembled here.

Fair board officials are determined to make the 1934 event the greatest in the history of Alabama and have reached out into the centers of amusement to obtain such outstanding attractions as the Royal American Shows which this season played the largest state fairs throughout the north and Canada and are on their first visit to this state.

The featured attraction of the entire Royal American Shows is the lion motordrome which comes to the fair direct from outstanding success in the World's Fair midway of a century of progress in Chicago. This show brings Miss Marjorie Kemp, world's premier wild animal trainer, and her famous automobile riding lion, said to be the most daring performance in show history. Miss Kemp and her lion ride in an automobile on the vertical motordrome wall at 60 miles an hour. This show also brings Capt. Walter B. Kemp, famous movie stunt rider, who performs sensational tricks on the perpendicular wall.

The hippodrome show with the Atlantic city steel pier high diving horse ridden by an 18 year old Georgia girl in a sensational leap from a 40-foot tower, is another outstanding show.

Other world's fair features include the Sandusky Sea Monster, the Life Show, American Midget Village, Havana Rhumba Show and Thad Rising's famous brown skin vanities minstrel. The odditorium of Ripley's freaks, direct from the world's fair, include 15 strange and unique people of which Pop-Eye Perry is the star. The tropical night show, Hawaiian beach girl show, and the temple of mystery are other unusual attractions.

Among the rides are the only four-in-line giant ferris wheels in the world, ridee-O, whip, lindy loop, skooters, caterpillar and hey dey. There are such fun houses as the Jasser, glass house, bug house, buggy ride and rocky road to Dublin.

An unusual free attraction is the battery of four warship searchlights which have a combined intensity of 200 million candle power. These lights can be seen for 60 miles around Birmingham and are manually operated by a crew of nine former sailors.

Monday is children's day. All the schools in Jefferson County will be closed so that youngsters can take advantage of the free admission for pupils. Other counties are joining in the movement.

The Alabama State Fair will continue throughout the week with afternoon races as well as grandstand attractions and fireworks at night.

MARTIN MEMORIAL SERVICES SET FOR SEPTEMBER THE 30th

The date of the Martin memorial services at Old Bethesda Church, Equality, has been set for Sunday, September 30th. Postponement of a former announced date was made on account of the inability of some to attend at that time.

PLEASANT GROVE
JEMISON

Pleasant Grove people are doing very well these days. Our sick people are feeling better except little Douglas Glass, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vollie Glass. He has been to the hospital and is back home, but probably may have to go back, but we hope not.

Mr. and Mrs. Justice Waldrop's little daughter, who is in the Baptist hospital in Selma, is improving some. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Grady Sewell and Mr. Erastus Cleckler were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Zuber one night last week.

Mr. Sanders Champion visited his aunt, Mrs. Pratt Crumpton, of Macedonia community, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spivey and Rev. Paul Oden and some friends from Mulberry were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Childress Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Paul Oden preached a very wonderful sermon here Sunday morning. We thank God for such a wonderful young man as Paul. Although handicapped with blindness to the things of this world he has a clearer vision of heaven than many who have their eyes open to this world.

We had a B. Y. P. U. social at Mr. Tom Zuber's Saturday night and we had a real enjoyable time. We thank those who were not members for their nice behavior, and sincerely hope that all the dear boys and girls around here who are not Christians will soon realize the necessity of a Christian life for real happiness here and for the joys of eternity. We are praying for you.

Rev. Maurice Hodgens has entered Howard College for another year. May God's richest blesing go with him throughout the year. He preached at Jemison Sunday. We are very proud of such a staunch Christian boy as Maurice. So let's all help him to go forward and higher in his great calling. May God bless him.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wright visited Mr. and Mrs. Jim Woodley Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Clarence Marcus and little son, Aldene, visited the Misses Champion Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Govers Price and sisters, Misses Velma and Myrtle, and Mrs. Evans went to Clanton Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Zuber were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Miskelley Sunday.

SINGING AT NEW SALEM

There will be a singing at New Salem church next Sunday afternoon, September 23, beginning at 2 o'clock. All singers have an invitation to attend.

Mr. George Sansom, who has been in the veterans hospital at Tuscaloosa for the past month, is spending this week with his folks at home near Sardis.

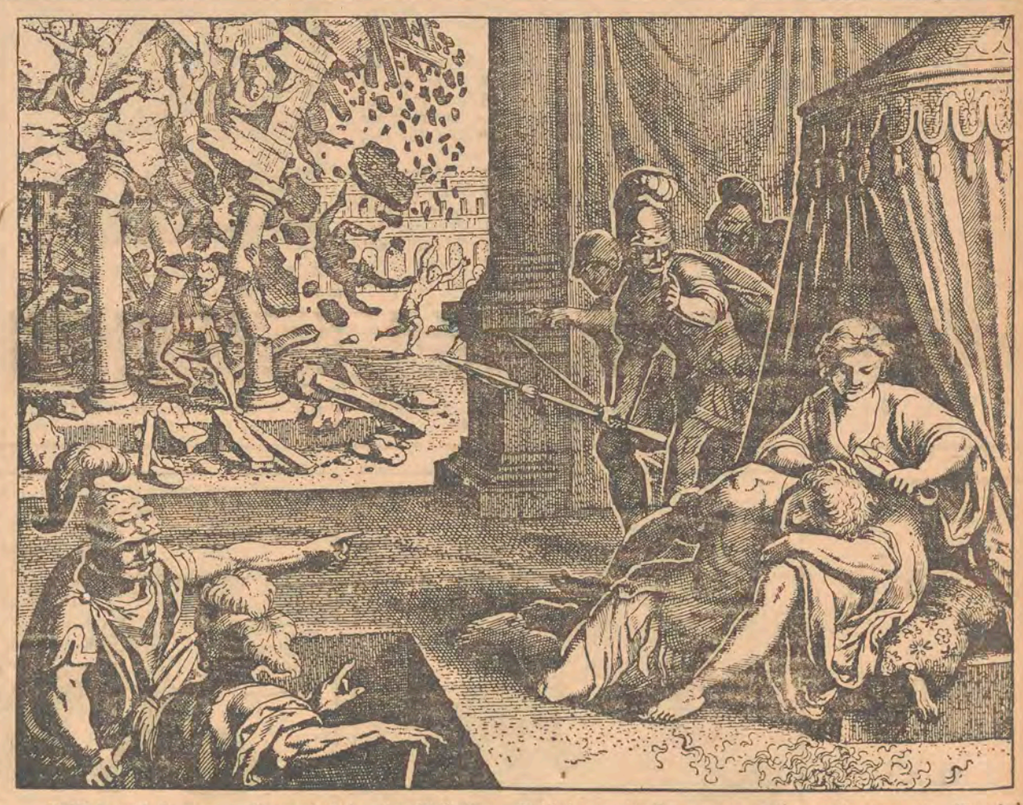
The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures



Delilah and Samson.—Corrupted by the Philistines, Delilah sought the source of Samson's strength. Wearied at last with her questioning, he told her: "If I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man."—Judges 16: 16-17. Delilah then made Samson sleep, and cut off his hair. The Philistines put out his eyes and imprisoned him. Samson's hair began to grow again, however, and one day when the Philistines gathered to make sacrifices to their god, Samson was called in to make sport for them. Samson asked to be led to the pillars which supported the house, and took hold of them. "And Samson said, Let me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might; and the house fell upon the people therein. So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life."—Judges 16: 30. In the right foreground Merian, Seventeenth century engraver, shows Samson being taken by the Philistines, and in the left background he shows the destruction of the house and the death of Samson.

County Farm Agent's Notes

HOW TO SELECT GOOD SEED CORN

Selection of a supply of good seed corn is an important October job for every Alabama farmer.

Careful selection on the farm will give a corn that is superior to varieties grown in some other sections under different soil and climate conditions. Selection should be done both before and after harvest. Before harvesting go through the field and select seed ears, keeping in mind the following points:

1. Select for vigorous stalks as shown by superiority over surrounding stalks. Do not select stalks that are good because of extra space or other favorable conditions. Select stalks of medium height that do not break.

2. Select for two or more ears per stalk and preferably with ears turning down. Use both ears from a stalk.

3. Select ears with shucks extending well over tips.

4. Select ears from stalks which are free from disease.

It is necessary to select many more ears than will be needed for planting for these should be reselected after harvesting. In this last selection the following points should be kept in mind:

a. Select ears having smooth, hard, dense, heavy and relatively large grains.

b. Select long, heavy ears, with not too many rows of kernels.

c. The shuck and cob should be clean and show no discoloration.

d. Preferably the ears should be well filled out. This character, however, is of minor importance.

e. Store seed corn so that it will be protected from mice and insects.—J W. Fant, County Agent.

ABOUT PLANTING OATS

Oats should be planted on practically every farm as a further insurance that feed will not have to be bought in 1935. It costs little to seed this crop, little labor is involved, and it occupies the land during the winter. Because of the severe drought in other sections of the country, feed will likely be expensive next year.

1. Plant oats September 15 to October 15. Plant oats in cotton middles before picking is finished rather than wait to plow the land. Fall-sown oats have doubled spring-sown oats over a 20 year period. Early fall sown oats greatly outyield November sown oats.

2. Sow oats at the rate of two to three bushels per acre.

3. Oats should be top dressed with nitrate the first of March.

4. Plant Texas red rustproof, fulghum, or appler. Norton is a comparatively new variety in Alabama, but it is more cold resistant than other varieties.

5. Smut treatment. Oats should be treated for smut before sowing. The cost of treatment amounts to only a few cents per bushel.

Directions for Treating Oats

1. Buy a one-quart atomizer-type sprayer from a drug store or hardware store. Costs about 50 cents.

2. Get from a drug store one pint of formaldehyde, 40 per cent, solution for each 50 bushels of seed to be treated. Costs about 50 cents.

3. Pile oats to be treated on a clean floor, canvas or a tight wagon bed.

4. Pour formaldehyde from the bottle into the sprayer; fill the bottle with water and pour into the sprayer.

5. While the oats are being shoveled from one pile to another, give one good squirt of the solution to each shovelful of oats as they are moved.

6. Round up the treated pile of oats and cover with bags which have been sprayed inside and out with the solution in order that the formaldehyde gas may be retained and penetrate the entire pile.

7. Leave oats covered five hours or over night.

Oats treated by this method do not swell and will readily run through a grain drill even the same day they are treated.

6. Rust. There is no known remedy for rust. Planting rustproof varieties will reduce damage from this disease.

Plant a few acres of oats on your farm by October 15.—J. W. Fant, county agent.

NEW SALEM SOCIAL CLUB

The New Salem Social Club held its regular meeting the 13th of this month. We are planning on quilting some quilts before long, so watch for the announcement.

We made a small donation to the Mt. Carmel community to help in the building of their church and hope to do more. Also, we hope others will help in the building of this church.

We still urge all church members to be present with us on Thursday before the third Sunday of each month. We are working for the church and you will find that we have helped it in many ways.

Ready To Make Cotton Loans

It was announced Tuesday by Mr. Welch, of the Alabama Cooperative Cotton Association, that all things are now ready for making the 12-cent government loans on cotton to the farmers of Chilton County. The necessary forms are now on hand at the County Agent's office.

Mr. Welch states that charges for carrying government loans on cotton this year will be much lower than last year. In addition to 4 per cent interest charges on the money borrowed, the only charges this year will be 25 cents a bale per month, which covers all warehouse charges and insurance.

Three things were pointed out by Mr. Welch as necessary for farmers to do in securing government loans.

1. Have the regular Bankhead certificates attached to the warehouse receipt.

2. Have cotton insured and have the word "insured" stamped or written across the warehouse receipt.

3. Bring a sample of the bale when application for loan is made.

It was stated that an accurate record will be kept of all loans made in the county showing owner of the cotton, weight of the bale and grade of the staple. This will, according to Mr. Welch, greatly facilitate the matter of immediate and accurate settlements at future dates when the cotton is sold.

Another interesting feature is the fact that cotton can be carried over in the local warehouses of Chilton County just as cheaply as is possible in other cities of this territory.

All farmers who desire government loans on cotton are requested to apply at the office of Mr. Fant, the county agent, in Clanton.

CAN, CAN — ALL YOU CAN

(By Vesta Smith)
Home Ec. III—Jemison High School

Home canning is the best means of providing a sufficient supply of nutritious foods during the winter months. Food preservation saves money, labor, time and energy. By having a generous supply of home canned fruits and vegetables, jelly, preserves, pickles and dried fruits, a well-balanced meal is insured at a few moments' notice. Better health, better work, better sleep, better play can result only from having wholesome well balanced meals.

For these reasons I took a Food Preservative project during the summer holidays. We felt that we needed some instruction in this work, and a number of the girls met with their home economics teacher at one of the girls' home. We canned string beans, English peas, and beets. At two other meetings we canned corn, soup stock, and beans.

We were expected to learn to can fruits and vegetables, make jelly, preserves and pickles, dry fruits and store all in a suitable place. In order to do this well we had to select containers and choose the best methods of preservation of foods. We also had to be careful about getting the right proportion of seasoning and determining the length of time for cooking. We studied the selection of food for preservation and the care of food after it was dried.

During the summer I have canned corn, string beans, kraut, chili sauce, peaches, blackberries, strawberries, tomatoes, soup stock, and squash, and have made plum and strawberry jelly, peach, watermelon rind and fig preserves. I have also dried peaches and figs and stored all in a suitable place.

These foods were home grown and would have otherwise been wasted. The total cost of the project was eight dollars and thirty-six cents; approximately four and one-half cents per quart.

The bulletin and magazine articles which I have read were very helpful. Some of these were "Steps in Home Canning by all Methods," "The Ball Blue Book," "Modern Methods of Home Canning," "Simple Methods of Canning Fruits and vegetables," "Success in Canning Fruit," and "Canning the Year Round."

Below is a recipe which might be helpful to someone:

Pear Relish

8 quarts pears, 2 quarts onions, 8 green peppers, 2 large cans dill pickles, 1 cup salt, 2 quarts vinegar, 2 pounds sugar, 12 teaspoons dry mustard, 4 tablespoons flour, 2 teaspoons tumeric in a little water.

Mix water, tumeric, flour, mustard, sugar and vinegar. Put pears through food chopper, add salt and drain. After standing one hour add onion, pepper and dill pickle. Add to first mixture which should be boiling. Let boil one hour.

This makes a delicious sandwish spread.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

FARMERS WANT HOMES EXEMPT FROM ALL TAXES

Auburn, Ala.—Indications are that Alabama farmers desire that small homesteads be exempt of all taxes.

"We endorse and commend the growing demand for exemption of small homes up to a valuation of at least $1,000 and preferably to $2,000," said a resolution passed by farmers attending Farmers' Week here early this month.

The resolution was passed after Governor-Designate Bibb Graves had reiterated his campaign promise of a $2,000 tax exemption for homesteads. "We don't want any sheriff to have any excuse for taking your homes," Col. Graves said, "for that is man's castle and should never be taken from him."

SOWS SHOULD PRODUCE MORE PORK SAYS BURNS

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers can make each sow produce a ton of pork twice a year, declares F. W. Burns, extension livestock specialist.

"This can be done by using purebred boars, good sows, and by providing an abundance of palatable home-grown feed." he said.

Mr. Burns gives Alabama hog producers ten management suggestions for making their farming operations profitable. These suggestions are:

(1) Keep records on the hog business; (2) breed sows to purebred boars for March and September litters; (3) use portable, clean farrowing houses for sows; (4) provide green feed for sows with litters; (5) keep a mineral mixture before the hogs; (6) feed a protein supplement; (7) grow a succession of forage crops; (8) provide clean water and shade; (9) keep lice off hogs; and (10) set goal of a ton of pork for each sow twice a pear.

GIN CERTIFICATES GOING TO FARMERS

Auburn, Ala.—The Alabama allotment board has distributed over 100,000 regular gin certificates to farmers in 18 counties and are issuing the certificates at the rate of approximately 20,000 a day.

J. L. Edwards, chairman of the allotment board, reports that all certificates coming from the 90 per cent allotment to the counties will be sent to formers before the first of October. The total allotment to Alabama is 884,375 bales. Nearly 400,000 certificates are being issued to cover this allotment.

Farmers to receive certificates from the 10 per cent allotted to the state, for exceptional cases, will be furnished their certificates after issuing of other certificates has been completed.

SINGING AT CEDAR GROVE

Constipated 30 Years Aided by Old Remedy

"For thirty years I had constipation. Souring food from stomach chocked me. Since taking Adlerika I am a new person. Constipation is a thing of the past."—Alice Burns. Adlerika is sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

ABOUT LOANS ON COTTON

Many farmers in the cotton belt have ginned their cotton, need money for it and are holding it waiting for details on the proposed government loan. Thus, farmers who need money are being forced to sell their cotton or make a small loan at some bank. This program, according to Mr. Williamson, will enable farmers to get at once sixty dollars a bale for their cotton to take care of immediate needs and enable them to hold their cotton until they are ready to sell. If the market rises they can call their cotton and sell it anytime they want to, receiving the benefit of increase in price. If the market goes down they will have their twelve cents per pound and will not be responsible for any losses."

The American Cotton Cooperative Association was a leading factor in the working out of the proposed federal loan and has been leading a move since 1932 to security the parity price of fifteeen cents for cotton. During the present season farmers who signed the reduction contracts and received rental benefits and who take the twelve cent loan will just about receive the 1910-1914 parity for their cotton.

The directors and managers of the fourteen state and regional associations represented in the board of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, which is the central sales agency for the state associations, have been meeting in New Orleans for the past two days working out the details on the association's twelve cent loan and handling routine affairs of the association. Directors representing every section of the cotton belt were present. There are some 250,000 farmer members of the state and regional associations with representatives attending the meeting.

WAYS TO CONTROL SCREW WORM

Auburn, Ala.—Dr. C. A. Cary, state veterinarian, gives farmers the following directions for controlling screw worms:

(1) Build pens or yards to hold cattle; (2) build chute with stanchion as outlet and it may be 20 inches wide. Have boards on inside of chute and 4 to 5 feet high; (3) if necessary to get at pocket, if worms are under skin or in the tissue, open with knife; (4) have cholorform or benzol to apply on the screw worms. Do not drop live worms on ground; (5) apply a mixture of tar, 1 part to 2 parts of old chankcase oil; (6) repeat this treatment every day for 3 days; thereafter, treat once every 3 or 4 days; (7) burn or bury all old meat and dead carcasses. The live stock sanitary regulations requite it.

FOREST TREE SEEDLINGS ARE AVAILABLE THIS FALL

Montgomery, Ala.—A total of 651,137 tree seedlings will be available this fall for reforestation purposes in Alabama, says Col. Page S. Bunker, Alabama State Forester. Of the total quantity of seedlings, 244,204 are black locust, 71,000 osage orange, 66,774 bald cypress, 58,287 white ash, 55,223 black walnut, 47,199 long-leaf pine, 45,018 shortleaf pine, 22,140 slash pine, 12,408 overcup oak, 8,396 white oak, 7,980 live oak, 7,980 persimmon, 2,768 red cedar and 1,001 cow oak. Practically all of these seedlings have been produced during the current year. All of these plants will be distributed to tree planters interested in reforestation for timber production with the exception of approximately 220,000 black locust trees which will be held in reserve for use at the emergency conservation work camps engaged on soil erosion projects.

The seedlings can be secured by tree planters at $1.50 per thousand f.o.b. Livingston. The trees will be shipped at intervals during the planting season which extends from December 1 to March 15.

Application blanks, on the reverse side of which will be found the regulations governing the distribution of seedlings, can be obtained from the office of the state forester at Montgomery. Shade and ornamental stock are not available for private plantings, since it is not the purpose of the state commission of forestry to compete with private nurseries. However, a considerable quantity of desirable transplants are produced annually at the nursery to be used in connection with the development of the state parks of Alabama and for highway beautification. It is anticipated that a large number of shade trees will be planted on the state parks by the Civilian Conservation Corps from the state park camps.

President Asked To Drop Officials

Washington, Sept. 17. — America First, Inc., one of several groups founded recently with the announced purpose of defending the Constitution, has called on President Roosevelt to dismiss government officials "opposed to our Democratic system of government."

In a letter to Mr. Roosevelt, James True, president of the organization, said recovery had been retarded because capital and industry feared "arbitrary and detrimental action on the part of many of the officials you have appointed to office."

"Obviously following the theories of Karl Marx," True wrote, "Your administrators and advisers have based their plans on the Soviet Russian system of regimentation and collectivism."

He listed "a few of the most prominent" in order that "there may be no question as to the actual belief and motives of the officials to whom we refer."

First on the list was Donald D. Richberg, general counsel of NRA, secretary of the executive council which recently filed with the president optimistic reports on recovery progress.

Others were Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture; James M. Landis, federal trade commissioner; Frederick C. Howe, AAA consumers counsel; Henry T. Hunt, general counsel of PWA; and Paul H. Douglas, of the NRA Consumers Advisory Board.

True referred to Richberg, who recently was in controversy with Hugh S. Johnson over the NRA reorganization plans, as "acting president" during Mr. Roosevelt's summer vacation.

All were listed as members of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Richberg and Tugwell as contributors to a magazine which was called an "advocate of revolutionary socialism." With reference to the Civil Liberties Union, True quoted from the report of the Lusk committee to the New York Legislature in 1928 that it was "a supporter of all subversive movements, attempts not only to protect crime, but to encourage attacks upon our institutions."

Other officials who True said "have been actively affiliated in Socialistic and Communistic movements were: Secretaries Ickes and Perkins; William E. Dodd and William C. Bullilt, ambassadors to Germany and Russia, respectively; Sidney Hillman, of the NRA Labor Advisory Board; William Leiserson, chairman of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board; Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority; Francis B. Sayre, assistant secretary of state; Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the automobile mediation board; Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work; Mordecai Ezekiel, assistant secretary of agriculture.

Asserting industry feared "reprisals from these officials, True asked the president to instruct all government employees that there would be none, "even though their legitimate activities may indicate convictions that do not conform to the policies of your administration."

True also asserted that the government this fall planned to "inject itself into all business as a matter of general belief," employing 5,000,000.

"This is an attempt," he said, "to take profit out of industry and private business and to put the burden on the backs of already overtaxed federal taxpayers."

Advancing 12c On Your Cotton

Local classing and receiving offices of the Alabama Cotton Cooperative Association farmer operated cotton cooperative for this territory, this week are advancing twelve cents on cotton for farmers in this territory, in accordance with the recent action of the board of directors of the American cotton cooperative association in New Orleans voting to loan to farmers through their own facilities twelve cents per pound on seven eights inch low middling and better pending the working out of the details of the proposed Federal Loan of twelve cents recently authorized by President Roosevelt. Eleven cents per pound will be paid on cotton classed low middling or better in grade and below seven-eighths in staple.

The American Cotton Cooperative Association is the central sales organization for the fourteen state and regional associations over the cotton belt of which the local association is a part. The combined membership of these associations is reported at better than 250,000 farmers cotton producers.

These loans are immediately available and payment is made when the farmers present the cotton at the classing or field office. Regardless of any decline in the market, farmers will receive full twelve cents per pound and sustain no losses. If the market increases they can sell their cotton any day through the facilities of the American Cotton Cooperative Association.

This action was taken, according to N. C. Williamson, president of the association, in order that farmers may secure a sum equal to the proposed government loan pending the working out of details by the government.

Dr. Leroy Mims, of New York, arrived in Clanton Monday to visit his father, Mr. E. H. Mims. Tuesday Dr. Mims received instructions by telegraph to proceed from here to Augusta, Ga., to continue his work in the government service.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala.—Coincident with the opening of the new shrimping season in Alabama coastal waters, I. T. Quinn, commissioner of game and fisheries, issued a regulation prohibiting the taking, selling or purchasing of small shrimp.

The order prevents the harvesting or marketing of shrimp when more than 40 are required to weigh one pound. He said the regulation was necessary because the industry in this state was endangered by the taking of small shrimp.

The Alabama shrimping industry provides employment for about 600 persons during a period of 10 months and approximately 175 boats were sent out when the season opened in August. The demand for canned shrimp is increasing each year and about 850,000 cases are sold annually from the Mobile section.

Mobile, Ala.—The story of how a tarpon knocked out a fisherman has been related by Capt. W. E. Akridge of Mobile, chief state oyster inspector.

Captain Akridge said Percy Curren of Bayou LaBatre, was assisting a group of fishermen in hauling in a net, just off Coffee Island, when they discovered a large tarpon was included in the haul.

As the tarpon was brought to the surface of the water it opened wide its mouth, ripped through three plies of the net and struck Curren a terrific blow in the mouth, knocking him unconscious.

The fisherman was taken to a hospital and two stitches were required to sew up the wound. The tarpon escaped.

Huntsville, Ala.—Three in one catfish story has been told here by fishermen G. L. Hereford, Herbert Sanders and H. B. Williamson.

Approaching a trot line they had set out in Flint River, about two miles west of Gurley, they discovered a 48 pound yellow cat tugging at the end of the line.

Close inspection revealed that a 1½ pound channel cat had been snared by the hook and that the big fish had attempted to swallow the smaller one and was held fast by the fins of the latter.

After wrestling with the big fellow for 40 minutes the three anglers brought him to the bank and inside the yellow cat they found a one pound blue catfish.

FAIR WILL CLOSE FOREVER OCT. 31

Biggest Events of Whole Chicago Exposition Are Ahead.

Chicago.—"The exposition closes definitely and forever October 31. It will not open next year."

With that statement, made in response to a question put by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, Lenox R. Lohr, general manager of A Century of Progress, spiked the rumors flying about the country that the World's Fair was to be a permanent institution.

After October 31 the magic fairyland that has thrilled tens of millions of sightseers from every corner of the globe for two years will fade into memory as miraculously as it sprang up. Moving in to replace the gay throngs whose laughter and carnival spirit resounded over Chicago's lake front will be crews of wreckers, going methodically about their solemn business of demolishing the world's greatest show.

Plan New Spectacles.

Meanwhile the rush is on. From the south, east, west and north the millions are coming for their last look at the Fair. They have finally awakened to the realization that never again will they see anything like it. This, coupled with the advent of the cool, sunshiny fall weather for which Chicago is noted, is expected to make the final weeks of the exposition record-breaking in attendance.

Despite the announcement of the closing Oct. 31, none of the attractions of the Fair—the fascinating scientific and industrial exhibits, the gigantic free shows, the fine music, the happy Midway with its breathtaking rides and unique shows, the unmatched transportation exhibits—will be altered before the end. Rather, the Fair has plans under way for spectacular special events of a magnitude to dwarf anything Fair-goers have yet seen.

Famed Scenes Become Memories.

But on Nov. 1 the axes will begin to fall. Gone will be the quaint foreign villages, with their charmingly authentic reproductions of life and scenes in fifteen lands scattered all over the earth. The spires of picturesque Old Belgium, the towers of sunny Italy, the winter loveliness of the Black Forest, the white arches and bright minarets of Tunis, the rich romantic lore of Merrie England—all these will leave Chicago's lake front, to be seen again only after thousands of miles of travel across the seas.

Gone will be the happy crowds whose merriment filled the cafes, the rides, the shows and even rippled with the spirit of the Fair under the turquoise banners of the majestic Avenue of Flags. Gone will be the jeweled setting of the lagoons, with the thousands of lights uniting earth and sky in a giant kaleidoscope of mobile color.

Travel Costs Reduced.

Listed among the best-loved features of the Fair, which will fade into the past with the Fair, are Wings of a Century, great transportation pageant with a cast of 200 actors and the largest collection of ancient vehicles ever assembled, which has already played to an audience of more than 2,000,000; the House of Magic, where a great scientific laboratory is turned inside out to make the mysteries of test tubes do stunts for the entertainment of Fair-goers; the world's largest fountain, which pumps enough water to supply a city of 1,000,000 people; and the spectacular water carnival and circus of the free lagoon theater.

A CORRECTION

In last week's Union-Banner the item occurred that Mr. and Mrs. Grady Harris attended the ball game in Birmingham Sunday of last week. This was a mistake, and we gladly make the correction.

POOL TO HANDLE EXCESS COTTON CERTIFICATES

Creation of a national pool to facilitate sales and purchases of surplus tax-exemption certificates issued under the Bankhead Cotton Control act was announced by the Secretary of Agriculture, who fixed 4 cents a pound as the price wor which the tags shall be sold throughout the cotton belt. The price is approximately 70 per cent of the tax of 5.67 cents per pound imposed by the act on the ginning of cotton. The pool plan does not provide for government purchase of any excess certificates. Holders of excess tax-exemption certificates may turn them over to the manager of the national surplus cotton tax-exemption certificate pool who will handle them for producers under a trust agreement.

When the pool is closed all funds on hand from sales of certificates, after deducting expenses, will be distributed among producers, and each producer will receive his share in the proportion the poundage surrendered by him bears to the total poundage in the national pool. In addition, each producer will be returned his pro rata share of the unsold surplus certificates, which may be used next year in the event the Bonkhead Act is continued another season. The plan also includes provision for local sales of tax-exemption certificates at the same price by individual farmers provided the sales are made through the office of the assistant in cotton dajustment in the county in which the certificates sold were distributed. This means, in effect, that farmers who do not produce as much as their allotment will be able to realize some cash return by selling their excess tax-exemption certificates either through the county assistant in cotton adjustment or through the pool in Washington.

3 PERSONS DEAD AFTER SHOOTING AT LINEVILLE

Lineville, Ala., Sept. 17.—Three persons were dead today as the result of a shooting near here yesterday. Garon Gregg, 22, white man, and Bud Trimble, 50, negro tenant farmer, died in what officers said was a duel at the negro's home.

Today Mrs. J. H. Gregg, mother of the slain man, died of shock caused by her son's death.

Officers said Howard Shults, a witness to the shooting, told them that Gregg and Trimble "had some words" and that Gregg went home and got a shotgun. The negro shot Gregg in the heart as he fell mortally wounded of a stomach wound, authorities said they were told.

He is a native of this community and has great numbers of friends who will be glad to learn of his promotion.

Mr. Brewster goes to Brent as manager of a new store to be opened by Taylor's there next Saturday. The many friends of Mr. Brewster regret that he is to leave Clanton.

CAR DRIVING LICENSES TO BE THE GOAL OF LEGION

One of the major objectives of the American Legion of Alabama during the coming year will be to secure the enactment of state legislation prescribing the qualifications for automobile drivers and requiring a license for every person who drives a car in Alabama.

Announcement was mede in Montgomery Monday that the Legion will press for passage a bill when the legislature convenes next January. The Legion has pledged its cooperation to safety councils and other organizations to make the highways and streets safer for travel, said a prominent member of the executive committee.

OLD RELATIVES MEET AT HOME OF MR. JIM PARRISH

Last Tuesday, September 11th, all the living sisters of Uncle Tom Parrish met at the home of his son, Jim Parrish on Lay Dam Road, where Uncle Tom also lives, and they all enjoyed the day together. Besides Uncle Tom, those present were: Mrs. Rebecca Ann Wyatt, Mrs. Mary Powell, Mrs. Mahala Robinson and Mrs. Mattie Mims. All the living brothers and sisters were together with the exception of Uncle Lige Parrish.

Clanton Athletes Will Be Referees

For the first time in the history of the school every man officiating in any of the three major sports, football, basketball, and baseball, will be registered with the Alabama High School Athletic Association, and will have the authority to officiate in any athletic event in any high school in the state of Alabama for the scholastic year 1934-1935.

We are glad to announce the names of five citizens and sportsmen of Clanton who have consented to officiate in the above named games, and who have been passed upon by the Central Athletic Board in Birmingham. They are as follows.

Jack Hayes, Sie Foshee, Bill Simpson, Elywn Gore, Vernon Baker.

The purpose of registering an official is to put athletics on a higher plane of sportsmanship and general good feeling of all fans and others interested in clean athletics, to make clear any misunderstanding that might arise during the playing of a game that is authoritative, and to foster and promote an ethical relation between young men who are each vieing with each other on opposing teams, The National Federation High School Athletic Rules will be used hereafter, instead of the Inter High School Athletics Rules or "Spaulding's" as has been used in the past. Fundamentally, there are no major changes in the rules. We are following the rules that will be used throughout the United States. Each of the above officials has been given a copy of the N.F.H.S.A.A. rules.

L. C. Warr, president of the third district Athletic Association; Coach Searcy, Vernon Baker and Bill Simpson attended an "interpretation" meeting at Selma on September 6, at which thirty-three of the high schools of this, the third district, had representatives. Coach Paul Grist, of the Selma Y. M. C. A. had charge of the program. Some interesting points were brought up and made clear at this meeting.

Again, we want to thank every fan who has supported our games in the past, and we want to invite you again this year. We want you to know that it is your town that wins or loses, and not any single individual. These boys are fighting to keep your school on the map. Let's pull together for another successful year in every way.

MRS. LENOIR WITH MAZAR'S

CHILTON SINGERS INVITED TO JEFFERSON CONVENTION

Mr. H. H. Godfrey of Birmingham, secretary of the Jefferson County Singing Convention, was in Clanton Wednesday visiting a relative in the hospital here, and called on The Union-Banner leaving an invitation to all singers of the county to meet with his convention the fifth Sunday in this month. They have a split session of their convention, meeting in the afternoon at 1:00 o'clock at the Pike Avenue Baptist church. That night they meet at 7:00 o'clock for about two and a half hours singing at Carpenter's Hall, Ensley. The convention meets every fifth Sunday, Mr. Godfrey stated.

There will be several good quartets and some prominent singers present at both these places of meeting.

Mr. A. B. Carter is president of the Jefferson County Convention, and Mr. Johnnie Stamps is vice president. Both these gentlemen as well as Mr. Godfrey are well known to most of the singers of Chilton County.

ELMORE CITIZENS BOUGHT HOMES NEAR ENTERPRISE

Mr. Joseph E. Varner of Lightwood community in Elmore county, together with Mr. M. D. Johnson from the same place, was in Clanton Wednesday attending to some business matters.

Mr. Varner reported to The Union-Banner that he and Mr. G. Marcus Jones, also of Lightwood, had recently bought homes near Enterprise schoolhouse and both would move there this winter. Mr. Johnson is also contemplating buying if he can find a suitable place.

Both places were purchased from Mr. Lee Boockholdt, and are adjoining Enterprise school grounds and Pleasant Valley property.

We are indeed glad to have these men with their families come into our county. Mr. Varner is a singer and is already acquainted with a number of our people. He used to live at Hatchett Creek in Coosa county.

COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION HERE FIRST SUNDAY OCTOBER

It si not long now until the date for the regular fall session of the Chilton County Singing Convention, which is to be held at the courthouse the first Sunday in October.

The Dr. Pepper Quartet of Birmingham has definitely agreed to attend, and this group of singers will also put on a concert at the courthouse Monday night following, sponsored by the convention. The convention always has some expenses to meet, and it is intended to defray these expenses by getting a part of the proceeds from this concert.

Prof. P. B. Shaw of Brookside has promised to attend, and says he will bring a trio and a ladies quartet with him. Mr. Shaw always has something good to offer the music lovers. There will be other prominent singers here too.

THREE-MILL TAX VOTED

Wetumpka, Ala. — A three mill school tax was overwhelmingly voted for Elmore County in the special election held Tuesday. The vote in the county was 2,568 for and only 435 against. Considerable opposition to the tax developed in the early stages of the campaign and at one time the outcome of the tax was uncertain. The campaign was hot and intense but the outcome insures Elmore County schools of seven and nine months term.

BIG BUSINESS HOPES TO END RULE OF NRA

National Manufacturers Association Propose Upset of Labor Policy

Washington, Sept. 24.—The Roosevelt administration was put on double notice today that big business and industry are engaged in a determined campaign to modify or end its social and economic program.

The National Association of Manufacturers, organization of big industry, announced it is going into politics and seek to educate the electorate through questionnaries on business subjects sent to all candidates for congress.

This coincided with the report of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce special recovery committee, proposing in effect that the Roosevelt labor policy be upset through recognizing minority unions and modifying the collective bargaining guarantee of section 7-A. While advising against reenacting or extending national industrial recovery act, the committee proposes to retain self-organization of industry, with the government to have no supervision or modifying power, but only "approval or veto." "Definite exemption" from the anti-trust laws is also asked.

The manufacturers' association 12-question quiz for congressoinal candidates indicate the organization's critical attitude to the Roosevelt labor policy, to compulsory unemployment insurance and old age pensions, to government competition in business, and to large-scale spending.

Letters have also been sent out to large and small manufacturers carrying the word that "the time has come to take stock of the many exeriments of the last two years and to decide which of them shall be continued, modified or abandoned."

These letters are signed by President Clinton L. Bardo of the national association of manufacturers, who will direct the political campaign. Bardo is one of the steel and shipbuilding magnates who contributed to "Big Bass Drum" William B. Shearer, who claimed credit for wrecking the 1927 Geneva arms conference.

The J. P. Morgan influence is powerful in the national association of manufacturers through the key figures, President George Houston of Baldwin Locomotive and President Lewis H. Brown of Johns-Manville, both regarded as Morgan dominated corporations.

The national association of manufacturers has long been known as a powerful influence in tax and tariff making, operating through a year-round lobby here. Never before, however, has it entered so openly into a political campaign. Here it is copying the American Federation of Labor in polling candidates before the election.

Like the A. F. of L. the National Association of Manufacturers intend to compile the answers and publish them for use in election districts. Their campaign will require the expenditure of money, but the association has some of the fattest pocketbooks in the country upon which to draw.

"The business man finds himself in politics whether he wills it or not," says Bardo's letter to manufacturers. "Voting has become an important part of business. Therefore, the duty of industrial management is to investigate the opinions and integrity of candidates, and inquire into their qualifications."

Mr. Stone also requested that we mention the fact that it is necessary for all who have registered at the office for work renew their applications every thirty days. This renewal may be made by mail or by personal appearance at the office of Mr. Stone.

New Wholesale Grocery House

Clanton Wholesale Grocery Co. Will Be Ready To Open In a Few Days

According to present indications it appears that Mr. R. W. Taylor will be ready to open his new business, the Clanton Wholesale Grocery Company, within the next two weeks. Already many carloads of merchandise have arrived, and more is coming in every day.

The new building has been arranged with all necessary fixtures for handling goods, and the employees are busy each day assorting and classifying everything as it comes in and putting each article in its proper place.

Mr. Taylor announces the following employees who have been engaged for conduct of the business: Wiley M. Bean and Aubrey Taylor in the office; W. J. Bililngsley in charge of the shipping department, assisted by Buddy Ellison and Clyde Mims in the warehouse.

An interesting statement was made Tuesday by Mr. Taylor, concerning the business, in which he said:

"We will be ready to open for business in a few days, and will present to the trade as complete a line of merchandise as can be found in any wholesale house in Alabama. We will cater solely and exclusively to the wholesale needs of local merchants in the Clanton territory.

"We have sought to organize our business with the view to serving our customers in the most efficient manner, and will incorporate that principle in the daily conduct of our affairs. Under our management we will have access to a gigantic cold storage plant, an advantage which few wholesalers have. This will enable us to take care of many needs of the merchants which could not be met without cold storage facilities."

SIDNEY STEVENS BRINGS IN FINE STALK OF CANE

Mr. W. Sidney Stevens of Route 5, Lay Dam Road, brought The Banner a nice stalk of sugar cane Saturday as a specimen from his patch. The stalk measured six feet of well matured cane. Another foot of it could be used.

Mr. Stevens said that he had about one-third acre of cane, some of which was even better than the stalk brought in. It would not average that good however.

Bandit Killed Texas Farmer

Dead Man Is Great Uncle Of Grady Heflin of Clanton

An Associated Press dispatch from Poolville, Texas, last Thursday gave an account of the slaying of Joe Pickens, 75, wealthy farmer, who was shot to death early Thursday morning by a masked man who had entered his home demanding money.

The dispatch said Mrs. Pickens and two daughters were awakened when the man entered the house. They said the gunman waved a pistol at the aged farmer as he lay in bed and demanded:

"I want your money." They said Pickens was shot before he could reply. Officers were summoned by the two daughters who ran a mile and a half to the nearest telephone.

The dead man was a brother of Frank Pickens, who was shot from ambush at Moulton, Alabama, in July. Also he was an uncle of Mr. J. J. Pickens, former Clanton resident, and great uncle of Mr. Grady Heflin, cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank.

More Light On The Gasoline Business

Last Report of Examiner, According to Copies Available, Says Shortage Is Only 7,122 Gallons, Instead of 79,131 Gallons

In a signed statement in The Union-Banner of September 6, relative to the check-up of the county gasoline business, the members of the Commissioners Court said:

"The examiner who examined delivery tickets of the gas truck driver did not have in his possession nor presented to him the delivery tickets for the months of May, June, July, August, September and October, 1933 (the period when I. P. Kennedy was clerk of the Commissioners Court.)

"We are having signed duplicate copies of delivery tickets for this period presented to the state gasoline department, which, when included in the report, will materially change the claim of the Tax Commission in respect to alleged shortage of county gasoline."

According to a statement of Commissioner C. D. Duke, the Commissioners secured the delivery tickets referred to for the Kennedy period, and gave them to Mr. J. H. Carleton, auditor of the gasoline department of the State Tax Commission.

Mr. Duke further stated that Mr. Carleton, after including those tickets in the examination, returned to Clanton with an additional report, under date of September 20, copy of which has been furnished us in the form of a letter from Mr. Carleton to Mr. A. B. Tucker, of the gasoline department of the state tax commission. In this letter Mr. Carleton says:

"On my first report, covering the period from March, through May, 1934, there showed no record for 79,131 gallons of gasoline. Attached hereto please find supplemental report covering this period.

"Inventory plus receipts amounted to 138,888 gallons. Withdrawn into road machinery, 123,729 gallons. Withdrawn into other than road equipment, 8,037 gallons.

"Please note that there is a difference of 7,122 gallons, a greater part of which could have been lost in handling of this volume over period stated."

Copy of another letter from Mr. Carleton to Mr. Tucker, dated also September 20, 1934, says:

"On examination of Chilton County records they develop the following gasoline consumption in other than road machinery:

"Year 1929, gallons 4,806 at 4 cents, amount $192.24; year 1930, gallons 2,676 at 4 cents, amount $107.04; year 1931 gallons 1,764 at 4 cents, amount $70.56; year 1931, gallons 1,956 at 5 cents, amount $96.55; year 1932, gallons 5,008 at 5 cents, amount $250.40; year 1932, gallons 699 at 6 cents, amount $41.94; year 1933, gallons 5,617 at 6 cents, amount $337.02; year 1934, gallons 3,020 at 6 cents, amount $191.20; total $1,286.95."

So far as The Union-Banner is able to learn, the reports quoted above from the copies of letters furnished us, have not yet been made official from the state tax commission to the Commissioners Court of Chilton County.

It will be observed from the above figures that the first report on gasoline, filed with the Commissioners Court some weeks ago, showed a shortage of 79,131 gallons, while the copies of the last and complete report of the same examiner shows a shortage of only 7,122 gallons which, he says "a greater part of which could have been lost in handling of this volume over stated period."

Grand Jury Made Suggestions For Operating County Gasoline Business

Five Recommendations Offered To Commissioners Court In Hope That All Grounds For Criticism Might Be Eliminated

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. Circuit Court of Said County and State. To Hon. F. Loyd Tate, as Judge of said Court:

We, the grand jury, empanelled for the July Term of the Circuit Court, after receiving your honor's most able charge, entered upon our investigations of the matters that came before us as grand jurors and herewith submi tthe following report:

During our investigation we have considered 48 cases and have examined 134 witnesses and are returning herewith 31 true bills.

We have made a personal inspection of the county jail and believe it to be sufficiently safe for the keeping of the prisoners and find that the prisoners confined therein are being well fed and cared for with reasonable comfort.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public, and in our examination of the sheriff's account with the state for feeding prisoners we find that it is being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the office of the county superintendent of education, we find that his books, records and papers are neatly kept and in so far as we ascertained were being kept fully in accordance with the law.

The grand jury have the following recommendations to make to the commissioners court, with reference to the handling of the gasoline belonging to the county and believe if these recommendations are carried out that it will eliminate much reason for criticism by the citizenship of the county and will be much better than the present plan that is being followed.

1. We recommend that the county gasoline distributing truck be kept in the county warehouse or garage that is located near the jail in the town of Clanton when not in use in distributing gasoline to the various Commissioners' districts of the county and when so kept in the county warehouse or garage that it be securely locked.

2. That each commissioner and the Commissioners Court as a whole, let the employee of the county who is in charge of the distributing of gasoline to the various Commissioners' districts, understand that in no event is he to place county gasoline in any motor vehicle other than those that belong to Chilton County.

3. That the county employee delivering gasoline to the various county employees receive a receipt for the amount of gasoline or oil so delivered, which receipt should be signed by and in the name of the employee of the county that the gasoline is delivered to.

4. That the employee of the county who has charge of the county's bulk gasoline station, and whose duty it is to distribute gasoline to the various Commissioners' districts, should at least once a month account to the Commissioners Court as a whole for every gallon of county gasoline that he has handled.

5. That the employee of the county who has charge of the county's gasoline, should be required by the Commissioners Court to make bond, which, in no event, should be less than $1,000 to insure the faithful performance of his duties in handling the county gasoline.

The grand jury did not return a true bill against Clyde Hudson and he should be released from jail unless other charges have been preferred against him other than the one investigated by the grand jury.

On our inspection of the almshouse we find 27 inmates, all of which are white. The grand jury is of the opinion that the almshouse is being well handled by those in charge and that the occupants get meals and attention in so far as the arrangement for taking care of the inmates will reasonably permit. The grand jury recommends to the Commissioners Court that the well at the almshouse and the piping in the well be cleaned, as we found the water to have a peculiar odor and taste, which in our opinion can be remedied by thoroughly cleaning the well and the piping.

The grand jury wishes especially to thank your honor for the very able charge given us when we were first empanelled as it has been most helpful to us through our investigations.

Sheriff Gillespie and his deputies and Mr. Loss Robinson, the bailiff for the grand jury, were most courteous to us during our investigations and rendered us valuable assistance in the dispatch of the business before us, all of which we greatly appreciate.

We have complied to the best of our ability with your honor's charge. We respectfully ask that we now be dismissed until such time as your honor may see fit and think proper to have us to again convene.

This September 21st, 1934.—John A. Boockholdt, Foreman.

Stars Did Fall On Alabama

Carl Carmer's picturization of Alabama in his "Stars Fell on Alabama" omits the intangible; it is an interesting and true-to-form depiction of what the naked eye can see and what lovers of tradition like to talk about when discussiong the south or any of the individual states comprising it. It is the usual contribution of the Northerner who gets his usually biased facts hurriedly. It is indeed interesting and well composed. But it is only a part of the truth.

The stars did fall on Alabama. They fell in myriad heaps. When God saw fit to create the land we call Alabama and begun to put into it His precious gifts for our sustenance, He let the stars fall in abundance to give this commonwealth more natural resources than any area of similar size on the globe. But Carl Cramer didn't hear about it, else he forgot to put the fact into his book.

The stars fell and gave Alabama more navigable streams than any other state in the union.

A star, a brilliant meteor, fell on John Pratt in the little village of Cherokee, and from it sprang the first practical typewriter the world ever saw.

Another star fell in the eastern part of the state, and from it was conceived the first machinery for manufacturing artificial ice.

A star fell and gave us Helen Keller, the envy of the whole civilized world.

Two brilliant stars fell on Alabama and gave us Dr. William Crawford Gorgas, the world's greatest sanitarian, and Gen. William L. Sibert, whose engineering talents, linked with the talents of Dr. Gorgas, presented to the western hemisphere the Panama Canal, which is recognized as one of the greatest engineering feats in the history of the universe.

The world recived its first electric street car from Alabama because it fell on Montgomery.

Science and medicine owe much to the genius of Professor A. F. McKissick for the first apparatus used in the United States for the demonstration of the X-Ray. A star fell on Auburn where Prof. McKissick gave his invaluable apparatus to the world.

So many stars fell on Alabama, the mineral district of the state gave to mankind the only earthly spot where iron, coal and limestone, the three essential elements of steel, are found within a stone's throw of each other.

There is enough coal in the Alabama coal district to cover the whole of England three feet deep. It took a lot of stars to accomplish the feat.

Another star fell on Auburn and inscribed in the indeliable history of Alabama the fact that the Alabama Polytechnic Institute was the first southern college to establish a chair of electrical engineering.

A star fell on Alabama to give to the world General Robert Lee Bullard, whose record of achievements in the late world war is inscribed in the history books of every civilized nation.

Stars fell on Alabama and gave to the world such personages as Augusta Evans Wilson, Johnson Hooper, Sidney Lanier and scores of other contributors to the classic literary works of the world.

Stars fell on Alabama to give it third place among the forty-eight states in the production of hydro-electric power.

Stars of rarest purity fell on Alabama to give it the lowest death rate per white population east of the Rocky Mountains.

Stars fell on Alabama in late years and from them Alabama gave to the world of sports, literature and filmdom such celebrities as Octavus Roy Cohen, John Mack Brown, Lois Wilson, Henry Walthall, the Sewell Brothers and others.

A star fell on Alabama and gave to this nation the first railway track west of the Allegany Mountains.

A star struck Alabama to give this state the distinction of having granted the first diploma ever issued to a woman by any chartered institution authorized to confer degrees.

Out of these barren hills and swamp infested dells which Mr. Carmer so dramatically pictured, came a horde of stalwart young men, answering the call of their nation to defend the world's democracy. No other state gave more in proportion than did Alabama. Stars must have fallen on those barren knolls and swampy lowlands.

A sentimentalist once said something about God piercing the blue canopy of heaven to make peep-holes through which to look down upon His children; that the holes we see at night are the stars; that the fragments pierced by Him fell to the earth and made violets. There are lots of violets on Alabama's "barren hills," but the blind can not see them.

FRIENDSHIP NEWS

Rev. W. E. Robinson preached here Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night. Attendance was good.

Sunday School Sunday morning and B. Y. P. U. Sunday night were well-attended.

The singing Sunday afternoon drew a large crowd of both singers and listeners. It was a most enjoyable and uplifting hour of worship in song.

We will have our singing every 4th Sunday afternoon, to which all are invited. Program will begin at two o'clock.

On Thursday night singing has been discontinued for some time now, because folks are busy gathering crops.

CHEAHA PARK ENLARGED

With the acquisition of additional acreage in Cleburne and Clay counties, the area of Cheaha State Park has increased to more than two thousand acres, announces the Alabama State Commission of Forestry. This Park occupies the summit of the highest mountain range in the state, Cheaha Mountain reaching an altitude of 2,407 feet above sea level.

An tutomobile road is being constructed from the valley near Oxford into the basin of Hillabee Creek and thence to the summit of the mountain. A second road is being built from the vicinity of McElderry up the mountain from the west. Meanwhile, the Clay County FERA has constructed another road intersecting the first one and affording access from the southeast.

A State Park CCC Camp, under the direction of the Alabama Commission of Forestry, is completing these roads and constructing other improvments. A second camp is scheduled to begin operations in October.

Dee Bates, disabled World War veteran, of Providence, Beat 16, was in Clanton Friday. Mr. Bates is now able to walk a little with the aid of crutches, for the first time in more than a year.

NOTICE

All who has canned fruit for New Salem church, please bring it to the church not later than the first Sunday in October.—Mrs. J. O. Smith.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

One of the preacher boys at the Bob Jones Colledge delivered a most interesting sermon at our chapel service recently. He spoke on the "Prefigured, disfigured and transfigured Christ." Jesus was prefigured in the Old Testament. He was transfigured on the mountain. He was disfigured on the cross. The things which were done to Him would have killed any other person who ever lived. Man could not kill Jesus. He said Himself "No man taketh my life from me. I lay it down myself. I have power to lay it down and power to take it up again." Men and demons tried to kill Jesus. He was beaten and he was bruised. When he went to Calvary He was so weak from the shedding of blood that He fell under the weight of His cross. When He hung on the cross He hung there the most mangled form eyes ever beheld. No painter could put on canvass a picture which could describe how Jesus looked. Indeed the prefigured and transfigured Christ was disfigured on the cross. "The transfigured Christ was disfigured, so disfigured man might be transfigured."

No man can use liberty right unless He is able to live under discipline and restraint. No man has the character to give orders with the right spirit unless he himself is able to take orders. Jesus who had the power to command the wind to cease blowing and the water to be still, who was able to speak to a fig tree so it would wither and die, was also able to take orders from His father. "I do always the things which please the father," He said. The best training for the enjoyment of liberty is to put about youth the proper restraint and discipline.

The Bible never told any man to run from the devil. It says to make the devil run from you. Submit yourself to God, resist the devil and he will flee from you. Jesus whipped the devil and He is the only person who ever did it. If we submit ourselves to Christ, the devil will flee because Christ has whipped him. While the Bible does not tell us to run from the devil, it does tell us to run from the appetites of the flesh. We are told to flee from fornication. In other words, it is harder to win over self than it is to win over the devil. Jesus said, "Avoid the appearance of evil." Don't put yourself in the way of temptation. Run from your appetites. Run from your passions. Don't stay there and ask Jesus Christ to take care of you. Flee! The Bible teaches that we have no temptations which are not common to man. It teaches that God will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able. It teaches that God will provide a way of escape. One way of escape from passion and appetites are two good legs. God wants us to run and if you don't run you are disobeying God. It is a sin to stay and expose yourself to unnecessary temptations.

Two negroes who hadn't seen each other for a number of years discovered that each had been married in the other's absence.

"What kinda woman youall get, Sambo?" asked the one.

"She's an angel, Rastus, dat's what she is" replied Sambo.

"Boy, youah sho is lucky," said the jealous Rastus, "mine's still livin'."

OBITUARY

On November 29, 1867, God breathed into this world a new spirit in the person of Mr. N. G. Carroll. On September 17, 1934 God allowed that same spirit to pass to the world beyond from which none ever returns.

He was married in 1888. He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, seven children, two brothers and four sisters. The children are Elzie Carroll, of Jemison; Louis, Ernest and Thomas Carroll of Clanton; Mrs. Ida Messer, of Spigener; Mrs. Lovedy Wyatt and Mrs. Lela Mims, of Clanton. He also leaves seventeen grandchildren.

He joined the church at the age of 21. Burial was at Providence, with Spigener Funeral Home in charge. The funeral was preached by Rev. Hughes, Nelson and Hightower.

Weep not dear ones. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord. To the family I extend my deepest sympathy. —A Neighbor.

Mrs. George McCain has been in a hospital in Sylacauga for the past week.

Henry Ford Is Making Steel

Dearborn, Michigan, Sept. 24—Henry Ford is today in full swing on the final move that will give his industry an absolutely independent supply of the 36 different kinds of special steels which it requires.

The move involves the building of two huge new steel mills, installation of a vast amount of special machinery and sufficient additions to his present power equipment to drive the new mills.

The construction will require eight months to complete and will cost between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000.

When the new mills are ready, Ford can produce 3,000 cars a day without buying a pound of steel in the market.

He will have attained a position, so far as steel supply is concerned achieved by no other private manufacturer in the world. All other great manufacturers using steel are dependent on outside producers—even the great European and American ordnance and railroad equipment manufacturers.

Ford's move will tend further to make the Detroit area a great steel-producing district by the addition of 1,500 tons of finished steel a day.

Workmen have already nearly completed the sinking of the caissons for the foundations of the two big mills which will be erected to the East and Wect of the present open-hearth and steel-mill buildings. That to the east will be a continuous cold-strip mill capable of turning out sheets up to 84 inches wide; that to the West a continuous hot-strip mill, turning out strips 48 inches wide.

Built of steel and brick in the same design as the present steel-mill the new buildings will provide 229,400 square feet of floor space and this, together with 64,500 square feet of floor in the present buildings will be required for the new operations. They will provide sheet steel for Ford bodies and frames.

The buildings alone will cost $650,000. Into them will go special machinery and equipment costing more than $6,000,000—a 54 inch blooming mill, huge reheating furnaces, roughing mills, hot finishing mills, cold mills, 500 feet of continuous pickling tanks and several annealing furnaces. The plants will give employment to 500 additional men.

To produce the additional power needed to drive the new mills will involve a practical duplication of the present Rouge Plant power equipment. Orders for turbo-generators to cost $2,000,000 were placed a few weeks ago. They will be housed in space provided years ago in the present powerhouse. Into this will go a new highpressure boiler costing $2,000,000. In addition, auxiliary equipment for both boiler and turbines, condensers, metering and control equipment, feed and circulating pumps and other machinery will bring the total cost of the new power development well above $6,000,000. The combined cost of power and steel developments will be approximately $12,750,000.

The present steel productive capacity of the Detroit area, including the Newton Steel Company at Monroe, is approximately 6,000 tons a day. The Ford plant operations will increase this production by 25 per cent.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

ALABAMA FARMERS SOON TO RECEIVE $7,803,316

Auburn, Ala. — Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the state extension service, reports that within the next few weeks Alabama farmers will begin receiving approximately $7,803,316 in rental and parity payments.

Director Duncan made this announcement after receiving information from Cully A. Cobb, chief of the cotton section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, that the third cotton parity payment due in December this year will be combined with the second rental payment, and both will be distributed to farmers during October.

"Payment of the second and third installments due under the cotton contracts was combined in order that the distribution of the payments to the interested parties might be more easily and more promptly effectuated."

WINTER GRAZING CROPS INCREASE EGG OUTPUT

Auburn, Ala. — During low egg production this fall and winter poultrymen should remove all unproductive hens from their flocks and use a liberal amount of winter grazing crops, advises H. R. Baily, extension poultry specialist.

"Non-layers and poor layers add just as much to the flock cost as do the good layers, but add little or nothing to the income," he said.

"Green feeds, which are less expensive than other types of chicken feed, tend to stimulate egg production."

TERRACING PROGRAM SLATED FOR OCTOBER

Auburn, Ala. — Terracing demonstrations will be conducted in 18 southeast Alabama counties during October, according to Emmett Sizemore district demonstration agent, who reports that 250 to 600 farmers will attend each demonstration.

The meetings have been scheduled as follows: Henry, October 5; Dale, October 8; Coffee, October 6; Crenshaw, October 10; Pike, October 11; Barbour, October 12; Bullock October 15; Russel, October 16; Macon October 17; Lee October 18; Elmore October 19; Clay, October 22; Talladega, October 23; Shelby, October 24; and Chilton, October 25.

ALABAMA RECEIVES 45,150 RELIEF COWS

The Alabama Relief Administration has received 45,150 head of cattle from the drouth areas of the northwest which are at present being slaughtered and canned for needy families.

GIN CERTIFICATES SENT 60 COUNTIES

Auburn Ala. — Farmers in 60 counties have received their gin certificates and those in the other 7 counties of the state will receive theirs this week.

This is annouced by members of the Alabama Allotment Board, who report that they will begin immidiately issuing certificates to the "exceptional cases" to recieve their certificates under the 10 per cent allotment to the state.

NEED 500 POUNDS OF WATER TO MAKE A POUND OF HAY

To make 1 pound of dry alfalfa hay, the growing plants need to absorb and later give off to transpire from 500 to 750 pounds of water. Irrigation engineers use the term "transpiration ratio" and say that alfalfa has a transpiration ratio of from 500 to 750, the smaller ratio for a cool, moist climate, and the larger for hotter, dryer sections.

Phrasing it another way, engineers of the U. S. Department of Agriculture find that to produce 5 tons of dry alfalfa hay an acre in western Oregon about 20 acre-inches of water a year will be required; that is, the alfalfa will remove from the soil as much water as would be needed to cover the field to a depth of 20 inches, allowing only a moderate quantity for direct evaporation from the soil.

In the Willamette Valley of Oregon, for example, according to M. R. Lewis, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, the 20 inches of water required might be made up of 7 inches stored in the soil from winter rains, 3 inches from rains occurring in the growing season, and 10 inches by irrigation. The proportions would vary with the season.

In more arid regions alfalfa may need as much as 30 inches of water, or even more, to produce 5 tons of dry hay per acre, because the demands for both evaporation and transpiration are greater. To produce annually such crops as are raised in some sections, say 8 to 10 tons an acre, the requirement will be roughly proportioned to that for the 5-ton in eastern Oregon.

Different crops vary widely in their water requirements. In a section where it takes about 20 acre-inches to grow a 5-ton crop of alfalfa an acre, it has been found that it takes 12 inches for corn or beets, about 16 inches for potatoes and only about 9 inches for white beans. If a crop does not get its full proper transpiration ratio it will not manufacture its full quota of marketable product.—From office of county agent.

SPECIAL MEETING TO BE HELD AT PROVIDENCE

There will be a special meeting of Providence Church, Beat 16, on the fifth Sunday in September, at 11 o'clock a.m. for the purpose of completing the business of the church, prepratory to representation at the Unity Baptist Association.

All members of the church are especially urged to attend this meeting.

CONTROL THE PEACH BORER

By Julian Brown, Extension Horticulturist

The peach borer is one of the most serious pests attacking peach trees in Alabama. It probably causes, directly and indirectly, the death of more peach trees than any other single factor. The seriousness of this pest is often overlooked because most of the damage is usually done just below the soil surface. Borer presence and activity may be detected by the presence of gum and frass at the bass of the tree.

Treatment

This pest should be controlled in trees 3 years of age and younger by digging them out the middle of October with the aid of a sharp pointed pocket knife. The dirt should be removed around the base of the tree to expose the area likely to be infested.

On trees four years of age and older paradichlorobenzene, if properly applied at the correct time, will give 90 to 100 per cent control, according to Oliver I. Snapp of the United States Department of Agriculture, who is authority on this subject. Trees 4 and 5 years of age should receive three-fourths of an ounce of this material while one ounce should be applied to trees 6 years of age and older. The soil around the base of the tree should be leveled and the material applied in a continuous band about an inch wide about 1½ inches from the tree trunk. Several shovelsful of soil should then be placed on the ring of crystals, forming a cone chaped mound and pack with the back of the shovel. These mounds around 4 and 5 year old trees should be torn down at the end of four weeks, while mounds around the older trees should be removed 6 weeks after applying the treatment.

If this treatment is to be effective, it must be applied at the proper time, which is October 1 to 10 in North Alabama, October 5 to 15 in the central part of the state and October 10 to 20 in southern counties.

MONTHLY ITINERARY FOR THE HOME DEMONSTRATION AGENT

The numbers of the following paragrahps indicated the date on which the meeting will be held during the month of September:

Lesson for September 30

REVIEW—GOD IN HEBREW HISTORY

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations. Psalm 145:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Goodness of God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—God Working Through a Nation.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Discovering God's Standard for My Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Old Testament Leaders.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the aptitude of the pupils, and the particular grade in the school. For the senior and adult classes three methods are suggested:

I. The Biographical.

During the quarter the following prophets have figured: Ahijah, Elijah, Elisha, Micaiah, Amos, Hosea, Micah, and Isaiah. Assignments of these characters to representative members of the class should be made the week before, so that they may come prepared to present the vital characteristics of these men.

II. The Application of the Prophetic Messages to Modern Life.

Assignments should be made the preceding Sunday, so that the members of the class may come prepared to make application of the vital messages of the prophets to the affairs of modern life. The following questions may be considered as representative:

1. What application can be made of the prophets' teachings as to the land question in the United States?

2. What bearing do the prophets' teachings have upon the problem of pauperism? Do they offer a cure for poverty?

3. What bearing do the messages of the prophets have upon the problem of capital and labor?

4. Do the prophets throw light upon the theological controversies of the present time?

5. Do the prophets have any message for the modern woman?

6. What word has the prophet bearing on the cause of prohibition?

7. Do the prophets have any word concerning modern amusements?

III. The Summary of the Facts and Teachings of the Lessons.

The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson for July 1.

Ahijah, in a most striking symbolic manner, made known God's purpose to wrest the kingdom from Solomon and give ten tribes to Jeroboam.

Lesson for July 8.

In spite of the handicap of idolatry and immorality fostered by two former kings, Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord.

Lesson for July 15.

Because Elijah faithfully declared God's message to Ahab, God miraculously cared for him through a long famine period.

Lesson for July 22.

Though Elijah faithfully and courageously stood for God in a time of great distress, he now fled for his life from Jezebel.

Lesson for July 29.

Jehoshaphat sought advice from the Lord after he had formed an alliance with Ahab. This should have been done beforehand.

Lesson for August 5.

Elisha, in helping the widow, demanded the use of that which she had. The Lord is pleased to use that which we possess, whether it be much or little.

Lesson for August 12.

Formal worship when the heart is out of fellowship with God is an abomination.

Lesson for August 19.

A life of temperance concerns other things than indulgence in intoxicating liquors. Our age is intoxicated with pleasure, love of money, and pride.

Lesson for August 26.

The reign of Jeroboam II was outwardly prosperous. With this prosperity came luxury, immorality, and apostasy. Hosea's message is a vital one for our age.

Lesson for September 2.

Those who oppress the poor shall come to judgment at the hand of God.

Lesson for September 9.

The only way for a sinning people to get back to God is around the crucified Lord Jesus Christ.

Lesson for September 16.

Isaiah presents the consummation of the redemptive purpose of God in the establishment of Messiah's kingdom.

Lesson for September 23.

Hezekiah's behavior shows that the dwelling place of God is a sure and safe retreat for his people in times of distress.

Something to Live For

Do something worth living for worth dying for. Is there no want, no suffering, no sorrow that you can relieve? Is there no act of tardy justice, no deed of cheerful kindness, no long-forgotten duty that you can perform?

Trustful as Children

The normal child is instinctively trustful; and this is one of the meanings of the saying of Christ that his followers must become as little children.

"Why so unhappy, dear?"

"It's my boy friend—he let one slap discourage him last night."

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

S.S.S. the world's great blood medicine

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 24.—Alabama duck hunters this year will do their shooting on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week during a season that will open November 8 and close January 12.

The new season, limiting the shooting of migratory waterfowl to 30 hunting days, has been fixed in conformity with recent regulatons promulgated by the Migratory Bird Treaty Act Advisory Board and placed in effect by the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey.

These regulations were found necessary, according to state game commissioner I. T. Quinn, who is a member of the Advisory Board, because drougth, overshooting and poor breeding conditions in northern areas have reduced the wild waterfowl population to its lowest level in history.

Hunting previously permitted during the half hour before sunrise has been made illegal, but the former restriction on shooting before noon on opening day has been removed. Bag and posession limits on specially imperiled species of ducks have been removed. Because of their critical status, the daily bag limit has been reduced from eight to five and the possession from 16 to 10. The species affected are the canvasback, hedhead, eider duck, greater scaup, lesser scaup, ringneck, blue wing teal, green wing teal, cinnamon teal, shoveller and gadwall.

In addition to these new regulations a recent act of congress requires migratory waterfowl hunters who are over 16 years of age, to carry a federal hunting stamp. These new stamps are sold at $1 each at all postoffices in towns of 2,500 population or more, in county seats and certain designated localities. The fund derived from the sale of these stamps has been set aside by congress to be used in purchasing or leasing marsh lands and water areas for utilization as waterfowl refuges.

The stamp must be affixed to the state hunting license and any person found hunting waterfowl without this stamp may be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment.

The new regulations include an amendment designed to control the principal abuses of baiting migratory waterfowl. The control provided is a system of permits to be issued by the biological survey upon the condition that migratory waterfowl on baited premises will not be shot in violation of state law or regulation. Alabama laws do not permit the baiting of migratory waterfowl and no permits can be issued in this state.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., Sept. 24.— A record-breaking student body has been enrolled at University of Alabama for the new winter session, president Denny, announces. At the end of the first week of registration 4,425 students had matriculated. This represents an increase of ten per cent over the first week's enrollment figures for the 1933-34 session. Dr. Denny stated that past experience indicates that the total enrollment for this session should be in excess of 4,750.

Jim Hardwick, Southern regional representative of the Y. M. C. A., arrived at the University Sunday for a week's conference with Y. M. C. A. student officials and with fraternity groups. Mr. Hardwick also addressed all freshmen problems classes of the university.

Prof. Wendall M. Adamson of the department of statistics, school of commerce, will assist in a survey of industries in Alabama which will be made by the Alabama Relief Administration, Thad Holt, director of the ARA, announces from Montgomery. This will mark the fourth survey in recent years in which the school of commerce has cooperated.

The Alabama football team will open its season Saturday in Denny Stadium against the strong Howard College eleven. The Howard team is said to be a veteran one, and is under the tutalage of Clyde Propst, former Alabama star and coach.

Coach Thomas has been driving his stalwarts hard for this tilt and they will be in good shape for the season's opener.

BILLINGSLEY PLAYS HOLTVILLE

On Friday, September, 28 at two o'clock the orange and blue foot ball team of Billingsley will open its season at home with Holtville. Everybody come.

THE BETHANY SINGING

Verbena, Ala., Sept. 24, 1934.

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me space in your paper for a write-up on our singing at Bethany.

Our singing at Bethany on last Sunday afternoon was a real success. The singing was called to order about 2:15 o'clock by J. W. Devaughn, with more folks than could get in the house.

Directors were as follows: T. E. Wyatt, Dewey Hughes, O. L. Devaughn, Lee Grant, J. W. Cagle and Steve Stanley from Mitchell Dam, W. M. Devaughn, L. T. Grant, I. D. Huett, A. O. Boswell, Floy Devaughn, J. B. Crew, R. M. Brigance, Orvid Hughes, Clifton Deloach, Clarence Billingsley. We had several special songs rendered by Prof. W. M. Devaughn, Floy Devaughn, Melvin Hughes and J. B. Crew.

Now, folks, we had a real singing. We feel like the evening was well spent and was enjoyed by all who attended. We don't know how to express our appreciation for those who visited us, but we want you to feel assured that we are glad you came our way.

We want to especially invite one and all to meet with us on the fourth Sunday afternoon in October. We need your help, we need your presence, we need your cooperation. — Yours for better singing, J. W. Devaughn.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

The state election in Maine every two years creates nation-wide interest because of the tradition that it foreshadows the result which may ensue over the entire country in the election to be held two months later. The saying that "as Maine goes, so goes the nation" is an old one. It dates back to the time when the Whigs won the election in the days of William Henry Harrison. According to the old rhyme Maine "went hell-bent for governor Kent" and followed this action by voting for the national Whig candidates by a very narrow margin two months later. Ever since then Maine has been regarded as the barometer state, especially by the party which wins the September election.

Now if it is true that "as Maine goes, so goes the nation," then the Democrats have some reason for the rejoicing to which they treated themselves on September 11 of this year. The Republican plurality of Senator Hale was cut to a scant 1,200 and the Democratic Governor Brann, who won by a close vote in 1932, was reelected with a plurality of more than thirty thousand. In the Congressional poll the Republicans did better. They won one and lost one, and still have one of the three congressmen which is still not a satisfactory situation in Maine, from the G. O. P. standpoint. Of course it is not always true that "as Maine goes, so goes the nation." In normal times the size of the Republican majority of Maine usually indicated the general swing of the November election. But these are not normal times—quite the reverse. Never were there so many cross-currents in politics and so many shifting waves of public sentiment. The drift of public sentiment between now and November will have a great deal to do with the results in November.

There are cross-currents in Maine as well as in other parts of the country. Without trying to tarnish the New Deal luster of Governor Brann's victory, which was the outstanding event, it must be admitted that issues other than the New Deal had something to do with the result. Governor Brann has been a popular chief executive. He is comparatively young and personally attractive. To oppose him the Republicans nominated a man of age, who made no active campaign, and no personal appearance before the public. Brann had the decided advantage here. In addition, the Republican contest for the nomination left many sore spots and it is reported by Republican workers returning from Maine that the G. O. P. gubernatorial candidate did not have the united support of all factions of the party—that some of them secretly were opposed to him. Governor Brann studiously avoided the New Deal in his addresses but wisely took credit for the millions and millions of federal money which have been dumped into Maine by the national administration. Another cross current was furnished by the liquor question. Maine voted wet by a big majority and this preponderance of wet centiment is said to have affected the fortunes of one Republican candidate for congress who was expected to win handsomely but did not.

So it will be pretty hard to name one particular thing which brought about the result entirely by itself. Greatest credit should go to federal money in Maine. Perhaps the New York Times came as near to accomplishing this difficult task when it said editorially, on the morning after the result was known:

"Principles were vain in the sight of easy money. Many friends of Mr. Roosevelt, cordial to some of his policies, would have been glad to see a different result in Maine, hoping that it might check the incredible tide of expenditure. Whatever other effects expenditure may have its political effect, judging from hte case in Maine, is satisfactory to the spenders."

In this regard it is to be remembered that Maine pays comparatively little of the federal taxes, and federal taxes will have to be collected to pay for the present expenditures of the New Deal. The question is whether the people in the more populous states, who do have to foot the bill, will see things the same way. If they do, then the New Deal will win a smashing victory in November, if they do not then the result may be different in many of the other states. It would seem to be up to the Republicans now, if they want to win, to make the people who pay the federal taxes tax-conscious, and to make the voters in general conscious of just what the present program is costing and how much money will have to be raised for the pay-off in this and the next generation.

LIFE OF A NATION IS ITS YOUTH

"There was a period in our history when the schools, colleges and universities of the country could have been rightly regarded as nurseries for potential statesmen," writes George A. Blasser in the current issue of the National Republic. "But it has long been contended that as a result of the wholesale permations of some of these institutions by socialist, communist and Oriental theories, these same institutions would finally become breeding grounds for airy intellectuals with anti-American and anti-God complexes. The happenings of the last few months, taken in conjunction with the general bellicose declarations of many students, professors and teachers recently begin to strengthen these opinions.

"Forces throughout the world having as their declared aim the destruction of the three institutions upon which civilization rests—the state which protects the right of the individual to keep that which he earns, the church and the home—make no secret of their purpose to utilize the youth in their destructive movement. Hence, the Old World youth movements, which inculcate the theories of communist, socialism, radicalism, in general. Hence, the many periodicals, books and pamphlets, issued and numerous movements organized for young people by communists, socialists and co-working pacifists in the United States, many of them carefully camouflaged under innocent titles.

"On whom must we depend to defend the republic from these subversive forces in the future? The school, college and university boys and girls of today. By putting into their hands such subversive literature as is now flooding our nation and exposing them to the influence of the many trained and skilled subversive leaders and their organizations, so numerous in this country today, included in which are numerous teachers and professors, the nation will sooner or later become one of a moronic character. Abraham Lincoln attributed his political convictions, formed in youth, to the reading of only two borrowed books, 'The Life of Washington' and 'The Life of Henry Clay.' Little did those who placed these books in Lincoln's hands think that they were influencing the destiny of the nation. But they did and the subversive agents of today keenly realize that the poison they are widely disseminating to the youth of America will eventually pollute their minds and win them over to Marxism, Neninism, Stalinism, atheism and other alien theories with the possible result of the communizing or socializing of our institutions. If you are interested in helping to raise in the United States a loyal, God-fearing generation, which will meet the growing assaults on our country, you must do your part now in stamping out the evil forces and their destructive program which is sapping the patriotic and religious fervor from the minds and hearts of our youth. According to recent information, regarded as authentic, the Boy Scouts, alone lost 127,000 members last year, many entering the Young Pioneers, a communist youth movement in the United States which is a branch of the Moscow International. Bishop Bernard Shell of Chicago says that over one million dollars was spent by the communists in the United States during 1933 for anti-religious and anti-government propaganda.

It is now becoming evident that one of the biggest mistakes in foreign policy which our government has made in recent years was the recognition of Soviet Russia on the assumption that Russia would pay its debts, that our foreign trade would increase and that subversive propaganda in the United States would cease.

It is now generally admitted that we are to be disappointed in all three assumptions, just as millions of patriotic Americans knew that we would be disappointed when the negotiations for Russian recognition were put under way.

The lastest news from our state department is that the negotiations for the settlement of Russian debts to the United States have broken down. R. Walton Moore, Acting Secretary of State, is quoted as stating: "We have gone the limit in making concessions on the material questions involved," and he added that "it was not possible to be optimistic that any agreement will be reached."

If American diplomacy had examined Soviet Russia's past record carefully, before recognizing her, it would have been found that she has defaulted in her promises to other countries just as she is now defaulting toward the United States. Great Britain, Germany and other countries recognized Soviet Russia in the belief that the land of the reds would settle its debts and increase its foreign trade with its new "friends." In each case there has been disappointment. Now the United States is getting disillusioned in exactly the same way.

Since Russian recognition our trade with that country has decreased rather than increased, and communistic propaganda and rioting in the United States have grown by leaps and bounds. Now it is becoming evident that Russia is not going to agree to pay its debts. Of course Russia would pay— providing we would lend her the money. What she wants is a big loan and a big credit for purchasing goods in the United States. Then, if this is brought about, she is willing to start paying her claims—of course in long drawn out installments which would be extended over a period of perhaps a quarter of a century.

But the administration is evidently beginning to awaken to the fact that it has been announced that the terms set forth for Russia are reasonabmle and cannot be accepted. Thus another great idea goes glimmering.

The reds, pinks and hybrids who announced a few months ago that Russian recognition would restore our foreign trade and bring back prosperity to the United States have run for cover. But they will be out again when they think they can help put over something else on Uncle Sam.

Aside from increasing red agitation in the United States about the only effect Russian recognition has had, has been to give the friends of Russia a chance to try to befog the friendly relations between the United States and Japan—in the interests, of course, of the soviets.

This is certainly a tough year for the fish in the Middle West. In 1933 they had government pork to eat, and now there is hardly enough water left in the streams to keep them alive.

There may be a lack of confidence in the country just now but there is no lack of confidence men.

If money really talks then the 1934 dollar ought to be able to make just about half as much noise as the 1930 dollar.

Back in 1930 we kicked about the depression, but wouldn't the times we had in 1930 look pretty good today?

COOLIDGE AND NEW DEAL

Inevitably the orators who spoke over the grave of Calvin Cooledige on the eleventh anniversary of his assumption of the presidency introduced politics into their addresses. The contrast between the policies that underlay his administration and the policies that guide the one now in power was too marked to be overlooked. On the one hand, economy; on the other, tremendous expenditures. On the one hand, caution; on the other, bold experimentation. On the one hand, strict regard for the Constitution; on the other, a wide stretching of its provisions. The material for partisan oratory was abundant, and the various speakers, Republicans every one, and of the most conservaitve sort, took full advantage of it.

So doing, they had ample justification, for despite the sneers of the young academicans, the administration of Calvin Coolidge was not entirely deficient in good works, and the principles that guided him are by no means entirely inapplicable now. As Mr. James M. Beck, representative from Pennsylvania, pointed out in his address, the experimenters now at work ought to be profoundly grateful to Mr. Coolidge for his policy of reducing the public debt, for otherwise the credit of the United States would not have been good enough to permit the great borrowing of funds needed to carry out their schemes. Just as thrifty parents do things that they never dreamed of, so Mr. Coolidge by his insistence upon economy has in large measure created the opportunity for the present administration to spend liberally in the pursuit of better times. And just as the children sometimes learn that good fortune is not realized through reckless extravagance, so the present administration may speedily realize that it can retain and rebuild its patrimony only by following the policies by which it was built up.—Hartford Courant.

DISCOURAGING NEW INDUSTRY

On June 16, 1903, incorporation papers were taken out in Michigan for a little company with paid in capital of $28,000. The name adopted was the Ford Motor Company. Mr. Henry Ford owned 25 per cent of the stock and his backers 75 per cent. That was the start of one of the world's greatest businesses.

A chart on the financial page recently showed that fewer corporations are now being formed than at any time for which there are records. The lack of new enterprises, such as the Ford Company was 31 years ago, can be attributed in large part to the legislation and administration of the New Deal. The issuance of new securities has been subjected to a control amounting to prohibition, so that underwriting of new ventures has practically ceased. So many things have been made the subject of arbitrary administrative action that wealthy individuals who at other times have backed new projects and products now find the uncertainties of the future too great. Small capitalists are concerned with holding on to what they have left and are taking no new risks. A metalurgical engineer, with an established reputation, having developed a new alloy of large commercial promise, could find the necessary capital to exploit his discovery only with a large corporation already in existence and possessed of substantial idle funds. The New Deal protects the existing large corporations against new competition. But it also places progress at the mercy of the largest and wealthiest concerns. If they do not see merit in a new gadget, and they are inclined toward conservatism, the inventor cannot find capital elsewhere.

In the past new goods have been brought out by men with small means and usually slender backing. After general recognition of the utility and popular appeal of an article, abundant capital was always forthcoming. But preceding the general acceptance some one of vision, resourcefulness and access to resources had attended to the pioneering and the promotion. It was not the billion dollar corporation but poor men like Duryea, Olds, Haynes, Winton and Ford, with a little capital support, which brought the automobile to the stage where its importance and appeal were widely recognized. A long list of other articles of present day importance have had a similar history.

And it was these new goods which in the past have been responsible for the revival from business stagnation. In the New Deal there is no place for the individual, whom the economist calls the enterpreneur, the fellow who found a backer for an inventor and attended to the selling of the product. If the other Roosevelt, when he succeeded the murdered McKinley, had put the New Deal into effect Henry Ford would not have had his opportunity. Chicago Tribune.

OVER PRODUCTION

The theory that our depression came because we were over-producing is disputed by the Brookings Institution in a report recently made public which asserts that its investigations show that if the real needs and wants of the masses were now supplied it would require a greater production than we had at the peak of the boom year of 1929. The principal trouble, according to the report is lack of purchasing power on the part of the masses.

There is more than a grain of truth in this view and it immediately suggests the question, what is the way to remedy the situation? Surely if our trouble is not over-production but underconsumption due to the curtailed purchasing power, the proper remedy lies not in destroying wealth by plowing under grain, slaughtering pigs and reducing production in general. Neither does it lie in the direction of artificially increasing prices so that the already suffering masses are unable to buy as much and must, therefore reduce that consumption further.

It is true that periods of prosperity are always accompanied by rising rices but this comes about naturally, due to increased demand brought about by increased purchasing. It cannot be effected by artificial methods of increasing prices by destroying goods, limiting working hours and generally increasing costs before natural recovery sets in and the people have the ability to buy. Buying is stimulated by price concessions not by artificial price increases and after all it is the amount of goods consumed which measures the amount of our prosperity,—the tonnage volume, not a dollar increased by higher prices.

What business now seems to need most of all is to be let alone, so that the laws of supply and demand can take their normal course. Five years of depression have greatly increased the wants of the American people but they can only fill these wants as they have the money to buy. Adding a Blue Eagle to the product and increasing the selling price will not do it. It will be much better to let nature take its course.

A REAL CODE

Iowa publishers have devised the following supplementary provisions of the code, which we hope General Johnson will hurry up and approve. Their adoption means millions to small town publishers: For telling the public that a man is a successful citizen when everybody knows he is as lazy as a government mule—$2.70. Referring to a deceased citizen as one who is mourned by the entire community when we know that he will only be missed by the poker circle—$10.13. Referring to some gallivanting scandal monger female as an estimable lady when every business man in town would rather see the devil coming—$8.10. Sending a hypocritical old reprobate to heaven, when we know that hell is too good for him—$5.00 Referring to deceased merchants as "progressive citizens," when they never advertised in their life to help draw trade to town—$1.00.

It is too bad that the president did not also point out that Mr. Wallace's economics are faulty to this extent: If you let foreign ships carry our produce, then you are taking revenue away from American ships. It may be that foreign countries, getting the freights would have more money to spend on our manufactures and grains. But America (not getting the revenue from American freights, would have so much less money. What boots it if America enables a foreign ship master to buy an American automobile if by doing so America prevents an American shipmaster from buying an American automobile?

IS THE NEWSPAPER MAN A LIAR?

If the average newspaperman is a liar he usually lies to protect his community. If a boy gets into trouble the home newspaper says he was a good boy until he got away from home and into bad company. If the town's tightwad that has hugged his pennies to his bosom in life dies, the newspaperman throws a mantle over him and says that he hated wastefulness, and his hate for useless spending made him ever careful for his investments and his charities. If the towngossip dies he carfully avoids referring to her weakness, and tells how she visited the sick and afflicted, and winds up by saying that she was a good neighbor.

If the home team goes away from home and gets the daylights whipped out of them, the home editor tells the unsuspecting world that the team was made up of second string players.

The editor isn't a liar from choice. The truth struggles in his manly breast the same as it does in the village preacher, but the pride of the community and the fear of the irate subscribers to make him a trembling rabbit, and he lies to save the local pride of the town. Still it's a great life if you don't weaken.—Ex.

LET'S GET TOGETHER

Upton Sinclair, candidate for governor of California on the Democratic ticket, and Senator J. Ham Lewis, of Illinois, of the Democratic Senatorial Committee, do not seem to be in entire agreement on what is the official administration attitude concerning Mr. Sinclair's platform.

Returning from a visit with the president, Mr. Sinclair is quoted by the newspapers as stating: "A year ago our EPIC plan was projected a little farther into the future than the New Deal, but the New Deal has caught up with us and we are now one and the same."

In a press dispatch from Chicago, Senator Lewis is quoted as stating that the president would not adopt Mr. Sinclair's EPIC policies in any particular, but that on the contrary he is preparing a statement to the country on his program, to be issued before the November election. Mr. Lewis is quoted as saying:

"I can assure the country that the president's reception of Mr. Sinclair was a matter wholly of courtesy. The president is not going socialistic. He will remain as he always has been, a genuine Democrat, and his policies to be announced to the country shortly will be in keeping with the tenets of Democracy."

Now it appears that somebody is mistaken. Senator Lewis and Mr. Sinclair can't both be right.

A good time to be a pessimist is when some slick duffer calls around and tries to sell you something you don't need, on the installment plan.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, traveling in Africa, report that they came across a tribe of natives who had thought before the travelers arrived that they were the only people in the world. There are some people in our neighborhood like that.

Washie Mims went to Boulder, Colorado, a few weeks ago to see about getting a job on construction of Boulder Dam. He returned this week, says he had made a trade to work there, and leaves Thursday with his family for the Colorado city. He expects to have employment for at least two years, at a good wage.

Monday morning another class was installed in the old dilapidated building of the Clanton Grammar School. Regrettable as it was, such a step was necessary on account of the crowded condition at the school. The enrollment is much more than last year, and another teacher, Miss Jennye Robinson, of Thorsby, had to be added to take care of the work. If you are not yet interested in better building facilities at Clanton Grammar School, visit the place and see the children in the old building and you will be converted.

Wiley Bean says if you can't get where you want to be, get the nearest to it you can. This, perhaps, explains two things about Mr. Bean: He would not have raised any personal objection to continuing as postmaster, and second, he has accepted a position as bookkeeper for R. W. Taylor, in the new wholesale grocery business located directly across the street from the postoffice. Anyway, Mr. Bean was a good postmaster, and he enjoyed the opportunity the position afforded him to serve his neighbors and friends. By the same diligence, efficiency, and close attention to duty, he will make a good bookkeeper, and will enjoy his work in that capacity. Wiley Bean is an asset to any business, and Mr. Taylor is congratulated upon obtaining him.

Mr. R. W. Taylor is receiving congratulations of his many friends upon the fine appearance of his new wholesale grocery business in Clanton. His large stock of goods is now coming in, and he expects to be ready to go out after business soon after the first of October. Mr. Taylor is an old head at the wholesale grocery business. He knows the business from the ground up. He has associated with him a corps of assistants who are well-trained, all likeable fellows, and as polite as a basket of chips. Example, William Billingsley, Wiley Bean, Aubrey Taylor, Buddy Ellison, and last but by no means least, "Gus" Mims.

The present gasoline racket will get boiled down and ironed out in due time. When that is done, it appears to me to be a good idea for the county authorities to adopt and put into practice the recommendations of the grand jury with reference to the conduct of the business. Judge Reynolds has already suggested essentially the same recommendations to the Commissioners, and they deferred action thereon. They doubtless will not hesitate to accept the recommendations coming from the grand jury.

Shortage in the county gasoline business has been, according to most recent reports, reduced from 79,000 gallons to a little over 7,000. There is much discussion of this question by a lot of people who know very little about it. Some say it is politics, but I think differently. So far as the candidates now running for office, they certainly are not to blame or to praise for the gasoline business, any way it goes. They have nothing to do with it, and are not responsible for it. But the people of the county are entitled to have the gasoline business run correctly, and those who are responsible should properly account for their administration—this for the sake of right and good business, regardless of politics.

My old friend Joe Retherford, of Birmingham, was a visitor to Clanton last Friday. I promised not to call him Pumphouse Joe any more, and I will stick to my promise. But who can see him without thinking of the old railroad pump house which he ran here for many long years? Mr. Retherford has been employed by the Alabama Power Company in Birmingham for several years. He enjoys an occasional visit to Clanton, and the opportunity it affords to see many of his old friends of the good old pumphouse days.

All county offices at the courthouse closed from ten o'clock to noon Wednesday out of respect for the father of Tax Collector, W. G. Culp, whose funeral and burial was being conducted at Liberty Hill. Most of the county officers and employees attended the rites.

Announcement was made in the news dispatches Wednesday morning from Washington that General Hugh S. Johnson has resigned as administrator of NRA. His resignation has been accepted by President Roosevelt. Reorganization following retirement of General Johnson, is announced, to go forward in the recovery drive.

A sensational development of world-wide interest during the past week was a revelation of circumstances which are accepted as almost positive identifcaton of the man who kidnapped and murdered the Lindbergh baby in 1932. The man is Bruno Richard Huptmann, a German alien, residing in New York. Police caught Huptmann in possession of $13,000 of the money which Lindberg paid the kidnappers as ransom for his child, which was murdered.

Home Makers Class Meeting

The members of the Homemakers class met Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. Lee Smith, with Mrs. Dewey Eubanks and Mrs. Dubie Chancellor as co-hostesses.

The meeting was called together by the president after a very important business meeting. Rate Making Plan Of Alabama Liked

Many Other States Write For Information Regarding System Here

The Alabama plan for utilities rate-making in force since Oct. 1, 1933, is attracting country-wide attention with the result that inquiries are constantly being received from commissions of other states seeking information, Chief Engineer I. F. McDonnell, of the Alabama Public Service Commission says.

Paul Mallon, in his Whirligig column a few days ago referred in a complimentary way to the Alabama plan, and Thomas A. Tatum, chairman of the South Carolina Public Service Commission, spent several days here last week conferring with Chief Engineer McDonnell, going over schedules and studying methods.

The Georgia Public Service Commission has adopted the Alabama plan, the California Public Service Commission has prescribed rates based on this plan for some of the utilities in that state, and the Tennessee Valley Authority recognized its value by requiring similar rates to be put into effect by the Tennessee Electric Power Company

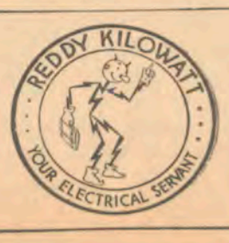
Mr. Mallon, in his article, stressed the $338,000 saved to customers of the Alabama Power Company under the rates that became effective Oct. 1, 1933.

"The Alabama plan," as explained by Chief Engineer McDonnell, "involved the establishment of two schedules of rates, an immediate rate, and an objective rate, favorably affecting about 75 per cent of the total customers of the Alabama Power Company, the only corporation so far affected by the new rating system.

"The immediate rate reduced the bills of 70 per cent of the residence customers an average of 23.1 per cent, instituting for the entire group an immediate saving of approximately $338,000.

"By taking the monthly consumption in kilowatt hours for each customer for the year ended Oct. 1, 1933, and applying the immediate rate, a monthly base bill was established. These bills were used during the present year, which officially ends Oct. 1. These base bills will be progressively lowered 5 per cent each year until Oct. 1, 1936, after which the objective rate will be applicable to all residence customers.

"The effect of lowering the base bills each year, assuming the same use of the service by all customers, is to reduce the rates approximately $100,000 a year until Oct. 1, 1936, when the objective rate will apply to all customers, thereby increasing their annual savings from $338,000 to $600,000."—Reprinted from Birmingham News, Sept. 16, 1934.



Poultry House Lighting Proves Big Profit Maker

A poultryman, receiving electric service from your company, has made a practical test of the effect of morning lights on poultry and obtained very gratifying results.

A flock of 700 was divided into two pens of approximately 350 birds each. One pen was unlighted, the other equipped with electric lights which were turned on early every morning for five months. At the end of that time, the records showed that birds in the lighted pen had produced 545 dozen more eggs than those in the unlighted pen—an average of 19 eggs per bird. And those eggs were sold at twice the summer price. The additional feed consumed in the lighted house was 1290 pounds—less than 4 pounds per bird. Approximately 100 kilowatt-hours of electricity were used, at a cost of $3.00. The total cost, including feed, was less than $3.00.

DID YOU KNOW

THAT 95% of all people over 60 have defective vision. More light is a great aid to these.

THAT one-fourth of our young people suffer from defective vision.

THAT good lighting aids defective eyes even more than it does normal eyes.

Better Light Better Sight

Object Of Nation Wide Campaign Against Impaired Vision

Better Light—Better Sight! That is the objective of a nation-wide campaign in which utilities, manufacturers of optical appliances, paint and wall paper makers, wholesale and retail lighting contractors and others are being drawn together in a solid phalanx in the battle against impaired vision and inadequate seeing.

In this campaign Alabama Power Company, electric dealers, and other agencies throughout the state, working hand in hand, are playing an active role. Objectives of the movement are succintly stated in the platform of the National Committee: "Our eyes, plus correction where needed, plus adequate light properly shaded and directed, plus proper reflecting surfaces on walls and ceiling, equals—better sight."

A unique feature of the Alabama campaign are the night garden parties, which have been held in various communities

The Lighting Department of our company will gladly assist home owners or business establishments in renovizing their lighting effects. Those interested should write to Mr. J. C. Tyson, Jr., care this company, who has the program in charge.

The Sight Meter measures light. Under the New Study lamp it registers 30 footcandles — the right light for study.

AIR CONDITIONING IN MINE

Air conditioning 8,000 feet underground! It's a fact in one of the large gold mines in the famous Rand district in South Africa. An electrical system now furnishes cool, pure air to the 8,000 foot level, where intense heat has been slowing up production. It will permit working of vast ore depcsits at even lower levels.

ADMISSION 10c and 25c

Some Winter Legume Facts

J. C. Lowery, Extension Agronomist

Q.—What is the value of legumes in a cropping system and what is the influence of phosphorus on legumes?

A.—A plot in an experiment at Auburn in which both winter and summer legumes have been included in a rotation of corn, cotton, and oats, has produced more than four times as much corn and cotton over a nine-year period as the adjoining land on which the same rotation followed but legumes were left out. Both areas received the same amount of superphosphate and potash. Phosphate and potash alone failed to increase the corn yield in this experiment and increased the cotton yield only 19 pounds of seed cotton per acre. Phosphate and potash, however, when used in rotation which included legumes, resulted in an increase of 11 bushels per acre in the corn yield and 293 pounds of seed cotton per acre.

Q.—How much nitrogen do the green tops of hairy vetch and Austrian winter peas contain?

A.—Green vetch tops averaged 1.0 per cent nitrogen and Austrian winter peas 0.79 per cent in analyses of a large number of samples at Auburn. Based on these figures hairy vetch that will cut 5,000 pounds of green tops or Austrian winter peas that will cut 6,000 pounds per acre will contain nitrogen equal to that contained in 300 pounds of nitrate. Considerable valuable organic matter is added in addition to the nitrogen. It is recommended that vetch be turned when the green tops will average 12 to 14 pounds per hundred square feet and Austrian winter peas 16 pounds per acre.

Q.—What is the influence of stable manure, nitrate of soda, and hairy vetch on yields of cotton and corn?

A.—Cotton receiving 5 tons of stable manure averaged 1,471 pounds of seed cotton per acre over a five-year period at the Alabama Experiment Station, compared with 1,222 pounds from 325 pounds of nitrate and 1,231 pounds from cotton planted after hairy vetch. However, monantha vetch on the cotton plot was destroyed one winter by cold.

Corn receiving 5 tons of stable manure annually averaged 38.3 bushels per acre, corn receiving 325 pounds of nitrate annually, 35.7 bushels, and corn following hairy vetch, 30.9 bushels. Two crops of vetch on the corn plots were practically lost by cold and by rabbit damage. All plots received the same amounts of superphosphate and potash.

Q.—How long do winter legumes increase crop yields or what is the residual effect?

A.—Light on this question is given by experiments at Auburn in which vetch residue on early-turned vetch produced more corn than 100 pounds of nitrate. The residual effect of vetch turned April 5 produced more corn than adjoining plots receiving 200 and 300 pounds of nitrate. The residual effect of late-turned vetch produced twice as much corn as 200 pounds of nitrate and nearly as much as 400 pounds of nitrate. The residual effect of winter legumes gave an average increase of 224 pounds of seed cotton per acre. It is safe to say that the residual or carry-over effect of winter legumes will increase crop yields to the extent that all cost of planting the legumes at the beginning will be more than repaid.

Q.—What is the value of superphosphate and lime to winter legumes?

A.—In experiments conducted by the Alabama Experiment Station, applications of superphosphate increased the yields of green tops of winter legumes 8,321 pounds at Andalusia, and 8,533 pounds at Hackleburg. Lime increased the yield of green tops 7,356 pounds at Andalusia, 3,863 pounds at Hackleburg, and 5,142 pounds at Prattville. Superphosphate was applied each year before planting the legumes while only one application of ground limestone was made and this at the beginning of the experiment. Many farmers apply basic slag to legumes. It supplies both phosphorus and lime.

Q.—What effect does planting date have on yield of winter legumes?

A.—In an experiment at Auburn, hairy vetch averaged on March 22, 2311 pounds of green tops from September 26 planting; 1,633 pounds from October 26 plantings; 415 pounds from November 23 plantings; and 119 pounds from Decmeber 19 plantings.

Q.—Should winter legumes be drilled or broadcast?

A.—Hairy vetch drilled September 30 averaged 3,100 pounds of green ops per acre compared with 2,393 pounds from broadcast seeding. Austrian winter peas drilled September 30 averaged 6,906 pounds of green tops per acre, whereas broadcast seedings averaged 5,186 pounds. Hairy vetch drilled October 26 averaged 1,966 pounds; broadcast seedings, 1,109 pounds. Austrian winter peas drilled October 26 averaged 5,061 pounds of green tops, broadcast seedings, 3,456 pounds.

Austrian winter peas in the southern half of the state are usually sown broadcast and covered by running out cotton middles with middle burster. This method has been very satisfactory.

Q.—What rate of seeding is advisable?

A.—The yield of green vetch from 20 pounds of seed more than doubled the yield from 10 pounds on October plantings. Twenty pound seedings produced 70 per cent as much green matter as 30 pounds when planted in September, November and December plantings practically failed at all rates of seeding.

Thirty pounds of Austrian winter peas planted September 30 produced as much green matter as 60 pounds planted October 26. No rate of seeding was satisfactory when planting was delayed until November 23.

Plant hairy vetch at the rate of not less than 20 pounds of seed per acre and not less than 30 pounds per acre of Austrian winter peas.

Q.—What legumes withstand cold?

A.—Observations show hairy, wooly pod, and Hungarian vetches and Austrian winter peas to be winter hardy at Auburn. Oregon vetch, red clover, and crimson clover were severely injured or killed by repeated freezes of January 1 to 6, 1928, with a minimum temperature of eight degrees F. Exchange Plan For Old Books

Will Aid Many Students Who Are Not Able to Buy Books

Realizing that buying of school books present quite a problem to many parents and pupils, and also the fact that there are many pupils that have old school books which they will not use any more, County Superintendent, Luther Little has become intensely interested in making the most advantage to all out of the possibility of swapping and exchanging such books among school students of the county.

Accordingly, he has worked out an exchange system, which, if properly worked, will result in the continued use of all old books, and at the same time give a great advantage to many pupils in supplying their needs.

Mr. Little annaunces an exchange system whereby he hopes to put his ideas into practical results. All who may have old books which they do not need any more are requested to bring or send them to the Superintendent's office, or else take them to your school next week, turn them over to your teacher to be put into county-wide exchange.

The teacher will understand the plan, and will see that the books are properly utilized, and that the owner gets the proper return in money or exchange for them.

Parents are requested to check over the old books of the children in the family and help to see that they are utilized in this exchange plan. It will result in helpfulness to all concerned.

What the Legion Will Do For Ala.

Answer Is Given In Statement of Commander W. S. Pritchard

The Legion answers. The question "What Will the Legion do for Alabama in 1935?" was answered today by the announcement of Col. Wm. S. Pritchard, Department Commander in an announcement of an aggressive program by the Legion for 1935.

Incorporated are drastic movements for the betterment of Child Welfare in the state and in the nation and legislation that the Legion proposes to fight vigorously to see enacted in Alabama.

"Touch the children, and you touch the Legion" is justified by the number of movements on the program. Last year the Legion conducted an aggressive fight to force payment of the school teachers in Alabama; taking a test case through the Supreme Court. For 1935 the Legion proposes to make education a primary function of government in Alabama; placing education on an equal parity with other state employees; with further provision that every child in Alabama shall have available seven (7) months of free schooling.

Solicitude for education of children is further provided in the Legion's insistence that the children in each grammar and high school of the state shall have a regular course of instruction in patriotism and flag education. In addition, the Legion is demanding that an oath of allegiance be required of teachers. "We fail to see" Legion leaders say "that an oath is more important in the case of a Notary Public, Justice of the Peace, or other state employee than it is from a teacher, who is training our future citizens."

Ratification of the Child Labor Amendment and the elimination of child labor in industry in Alabama are given a prominent place on the 1935 program.

The promotion of aviation, the prevention of waste, the preservation of government-built CWA airports and the physical development of the children of Alabama are provided for by the American Legion McFadden Recreational Program. Under this plan, financed by Bernard Mcfadden, wealthy philanthorpist and physical culture enthusiast of New York, the American Legion of Alabama is bringing free to Alabama a course in physical culture centered in towns throughout the state.

The men of the Legion paid for the last war; in order most effectively to prevent another war, they are demanding that the profits of war be removed by the enactment by congress of laws conscripting capital and labor in case of war.

Field work in the state by the state service commissioner's office, so that every disabled veteran can have his claim adequately presented, is being given a place in the 1935 program.

Fulfilling its avowed purpose of upholding and defending the Constitution, the Alabama Department of the American Legion pledges itself in 1935 to do its utmost to maintain law and order; to inculcate in the minds of the individual citizens respect for law; and to bring to prompt justice—without respect to person—those who violate the law. In order to push this important part of the work aggressively the following committee on law enforcement has been appointed by Col. Pritchard.

J. J. Sparkman, Huntsville; Roy Albright, Mobile; George Grant, Troy; J. Oscar Lewis, Dothan; Hugh Comer, Sylacauga; Harry Disque, Gadsden; O. C. Carmichael, Montevallo; Ed Underwood, Russellville; Roy Billings, Decatur; Geo. L. Bailes, Birmingham.

The Legion proposes also to insist for Alabama legislation requiring licenses for drivers of motor vehicles.

Home owners are to be protected in the proposed program by exemption from state taxes of homesteads of those residing therein of value not more than $2,000 and area of not ov-160 acres.

Most of the work of the 1935 program is already under way.

The Legion of Alabama for 1935 under Col. Pritchard has announced that instead of being composed of ex-service men, it is composed of men in present service dedicating themselves to the service of their state.

CHILTON SINGERS INVITED TO JEFFERSON CONVENTION

Mr. H. H. Godfrey of Birmingham, secretary of the Jefferson County Singing Convention, was in Clanton Wednesday visiting a relative in the hospital here, and called on The Union-Banner leaving an invitation to all singers of the county to meet with his convention the fifth Sunday in this month. That night they meet at 7:00 o'clock for about two and a half hours singing at Carpenter's Hall, Ensley. The convention meets every fifth Sunday, Mr. Godfrey stated.

There will be several good quartets and some prominent singers present at both these places of meeting.

REFUGE NEWS

Regular services were held at this place Saturday Sunday and Sunday night being the fourth Saturday, but hereafter our regular preaching days will be on the third Saturday and Sunday. Our pastor accepted a call from Highland, which the fourth Sunday being their regular preaching day, we gladly changed back to the third as there were not any conflicts in us changing. We think it just suited everybody because we used the third Saturday and Sunday for several years. Our pastor will now serve Pates Chapel the first, Refuge the third and Highland the fourth.

Mrs. Andrew Johnson, who has suffered much pain with a carbunckle, seems to be some better. We hope she will soon be able to be back at her place in church soon, for we miss her much.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Boaz Finds Ruth Gleaning in the Field.—During the time of Israel under the judges, Elimelech, an Ephrathite of Bethlehem-Judah, and his wife, Naomi, and their two sons went in time of famine and lived in the land of Moab. Here Elimelech died, and after about ten years his sons, who had married two of the daughters of Moab, Orpah and Ruth, died also. Naomi returned to her native town, and Ruth, who could not be dissuaded, accompanied her, casting in her lot with the people of Judah. The two women arrived in Bethlehem at the beginning of the barley harvest in a state of dire poverty. Elimelech had had an inheritance of land among his brethren, but, unless the next of his kin could be found, Naomi would be compelled to sell it. Elimelech had a prosperous relative in Bethlehem named Boaz, who, like others, was engaged in the harvest. Naomi sent Ruth to glean in his fields. By the advice of Naomi, Ruth claimed kinship with Boaz. Boaz was willing to take up the duties of the next of kin, and married Ruth, by whom he became the father of Obed, the grandfather of King David. This illustration is by Merian, and was engraved in 1625.

WOMAN KILLED IN FAIR CRASH

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 25.—Elfrieda Mais, 42, widely known woman race driver, was killed last night when her automobile crashed into a grader after she had driven the machine through a blazing board wall at the Alabama State Fair here.

At least one boy, John Draper, 9, was injured when the Mais automobile overturned down an embankment after striking the grader.

P. T. Streider, state fair manager, said she was actually the champion woman race driver of the world and that she had been engaged in stunt driving the past two years. She first entered the racing game in 1912.

Miss Mais just had completed her performance of driving her car through the board wall and, as thousands of fair visitors looked on in horror, the car, out of control, swerved toward the fair grounds walls, struck a grader, and overturned.

She was rushed to a hospital, but was pronounced dead on arrival.

The new equipment has arrived and the boys look fine in their new suits. It is not known just what the line-up will be when the whistle blows, but each player is fighting for his place.

OBITUARIES — IN MEMORY

It becomes necessary for us again to call attention to the fact that we make a charge of one cent per word for all obituaries over 150 words published in The Union-Banner. So, if you want an obituary, or in memory article, published about a departed friend or relative, it must be confined to not over 150 words, or else money order for the remainder should be included if sent by mail, as outlined above.

If obituaries are sent in containing over 150 words and no money accompanies same, it will be either omitted entirely or, if possible, condensed to come within the requirement, and published.

SCHOOLS FACE SHORT TERM IN LACK OF FUNDS

Hope Is Held That Federal Aid Will Come to The Rescue

Additional funds must be made available during the 1934-35 session just begun, if the schools of most counties and cities in Alabama are to have anything like normal terms. Unless such funds are made available within the next month or two, schools in some 12 counties and cities will have to close before Christmas, and on February 1, 1935, approximately two thirds of all the schools in the state will be closed.

The education office of the U. S. Department of the Interior was so advised in a report forwarded last night from the state department of education, in response to a request received last week for detailed information as to the financial resources of county and city school systems in Alabama for 1934-35, and how much money it would take in supplementing state and local funds on hand and anticipated, to assure normal terms where such state and local funds were not sufficient to keep the public schools open for that period of time.

If the public schools of the state are to operate for normal terms this year, funds approximating $3,598,294 in addition to present anticipated revenues, must be made available from some source, the report advises, figures on funds needs given as follows: Counties, $3,277,639. Cities, $303,940. State Secondary Agricultural Schools $16,715.

Concerning the budget for Chilton County Schools Superintendent Little states that there is enough money in sight to run the public schools of this county for a term of five months and four days. Beyond that time, he says, we must hope for federal aid to finish out our school term.

Fiddlers To Play Saturday Night

Group To Be Selected To Play at Veterans Hospital On October 26th

The Chilton County Unit of the American Legitn Auxiliary will sponsor a fiddlers convention and musical entertainment at the courthouse Saturday night of this week, October 6. Program will begin at seven o'clock.

All fiddlers and other musicians of the county are invited to attend and take part on the program. All lovers of entertainment are invited to attend. A small admission charge will be made, 10 cents for each person.

The purpose of the Auxiliary in having this entertainment is to select a group of musicians to carry to the Veterans Hospital on Friday, October 26, to present a program for the disabled veterans who are patients of the hospital.

Selection of those to go to Tuscaloosa will be made after the program at the courthouse Saturday night by three judges who will carefully compare the performance of each of the contestants. These judges will be composed of people who are not members of the American Legion nor the Auxiliary.

The ladies who are sponsoring this program earnestly solicit the support of the public and the cooperation of the musicians in carrying out their plans. Money raised by the entertainment at the courthouse Saturday night will be used to defray the expenses of the entertainers who will be carried to the Veterans Hospital.

The Dr. Pepper Quartet of Birmingham has definitely agreed to attend, and this group of singers will also put on a concert at the courthouse Monday night following, sponsored by the convention. The convention always has some expenses to meet, and it is intended to defray these expenses by getting a part of the proceeds from this concert.

COTTON STATISTICS

The tabulation of the card reports shows telegraph summary to be correct. There were 3,633 bales of cotton, counting round as half bales, ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1934 prior to September 16, 1934, as compared with 3,503 bales ginned to September 16, 1933.

BANKHEAD ACTS PENALIZES FARMS

Penalties of Law Pointed Out By Editorial In Alabama Journal

So far as Alabama farmers are concerned the penalties of the Bankhead act fall most heavily upon the small farmer who is least able to bear them. So acute has the crisis become that a conference of Southern senators and representatives with the Secretary of Agriculture has been called for tomorrow (Sept. 25.) in Washington. The small farmer who is accustomed year in and year out to raising one or two bales of cotton for his cash crop is so disastrously affected under the Bankhead act allotment provisions that in thousands of cases he is not permitted this year to market as much as a single bale.

When the small farmer is hurt, the whole state is hurt. At the request of the Alabama Journal Mr. F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician of the department of agriculture, has compiled estimates of the cotton production on Alabama's farms this year.

Alabama has 258,000 farms. Of this total, 156,000 farms this season produced two bales or less of cotton. As showing the relative importance and predominance of the small farmer in the state Mr. Gist's estimate of the season's cotton production by size of farm is as follows:

13 per cent, or 34,000 farms, produced an average of one bale each, or a total of 34,000 bales.

47 per cent, or 122,000 farms, produced an average of two bales each, or a total of 244,000 bales.

24 per cent, or 62,000 farms, produced an average of four bales each, or a total of 248,000 bales.

10 per cent, or 25,000 farms, produced an average of seven bales each, or a total of 175,000 bales.

3 per cent, or 8,000 farms, produced an average of 12 bales each, or a total of 96,000 bales.

2 per cent, or 5,000 farms, produced an average of 20 bales each, or a total of 100,000 bales.

One-half of one per cent, or 2,000 farms, produced an average of 50 bales each, or a total of 100,000 bales.

The significance of these figures lies in the fact that 60 per cent of the farms in Alabama each produced two bales or less of cotton this year and that nearly one-third of the state's entire crop was produced by farms of two bales or less.

These figures cry out for some modification of the Bankhead allotment system which will permit these small growers to market their bale or two of cotton. It is the tragic effect upon the small farmer that has called Southern Senators and Congressmen to Washington post haste in order to devise some means of correcting the injustice before it is too late. For the sake of this army of small producers it is hoped that modification can be made before they suffer the disastrous losses that now seem to confront them.—Alabama Journal.

C. C. H. S. TO PLAY VERBENA

The first game of the season to be played on the local field will be Verbena High school. This game should prove to be interesting because Verbent has a new Coach and the boys are working hard to defeat C. C. H. S.

The local boys are to be congratulated for the good showing made at Selma last Friday. Ten boys were lost last year by graduation and the places left open are gradually being filled with light but fast men.

Seven new boys participated in the game with Selma and looked good. It will take a great deal of ironing out, but our local team will make a good showing against all opponents this season.

If you don't want to miss one of the best games here this season, come out next Friday afternoon. The boy need our support. The game will be called at 3:00 o'clock. Popular prices.

Miss Meroney Is Welfare Worker

Employed By Commissioners To Succeed Miss Mary Ellis Here

At the meeting of the Commissioners Court Monday, Miss Nolan Meroney, of Verbena, was elected Child Welfare Superintendent of Chilton County, to succeed Miss Mary Ellis, who resigned some weeks ago to take up similar work in Chambers Counyt.

Miss Meroney is the daughter of Mr. Q. C. Meroney, rural mail carrier at Verbena. At present she is employed in Child Welfare work in Montgomery County. Authorities there made a request to keep her in her present position until the fifteenth of this month.

This arrangement was agreed to by the Commissioners, here with the understanding that Miss Meroney will come here to take up her work not later than the fifteenth, and earlier if possible.

Under the present set-up the county is required to give $100 a month to the federal relief program. This amount may be spent toward the salary of a child welfare superintendent. But if no child welfare superintendent is employed, then the $100 goes into the administration of the county relief program through Miss Austin's office.

Consequently, it is pointed out, the county is able to have the important work of a child welfare superintendent without any additional cost as a whole.

Miss Willie Jean Stewart, of Nashville, spent last week in Clanton visiting the family of her uncle, Mr. W. H. Sartor.

SERVICES AT CHESTNUT CREEK

Rev. J. W. Jones, pastor at Chestnut Creek, Cooper, announces services at that church next Saturday and Sunday. New Wholesale House Is Opened

Will Cater To Wholesale Trade Exclusively In Clanton Territory

With the open and avowed purpose of serving the retail merchants of the Clanton trade territory with a business devoted exclusively to their wholesale needs, Mr. R. W. Taylor, experienced wholesaler, announces himself ready for business with the Clanton Wholsale Grocery Company beginning next week.

Expressing the keynote of his purpose with this venture into the business arena of Clanton, Mr. Taylor says:

"For a long time I have realized along with all other business men, that what the retail merchants of the Clanton territory need, want and demand, is a wholesale house in their midst to serve them in a purely wholesale capacity, and not meddling in the retail trade. This need is exactly what I propose to fill in Clanton, and I invite and solicit the hearty support, patronage and goodwill of all business men who reaplize this need."

Mr. Taylor's business occupies new quarters in the Wade building on Main Street, next to the railroad tracks. It is an ideal place for such a business, with all facilities and accommodations necessary to make for the easiest, most complete service of the kind. Many carloads of staple merchandise already have arrived, and the building is packed from floor to roof with goods of every kind, including groceries, feed, mens work clothes, shirts, overalls, flour, notions, etc.

A visit to this new place will convince anyone that Mr. Taylor is a man of ripe experience in his line of business. The arrangements are complete in every way.

PASTORS MEET MONDAY

The pastors of the Unity and Chilton Associations will be held at the Clanton Baptist church Monday, October 7th, at 10 a.m. A full attendance is urged.—J. W. Jones.

Rural Rehabilitation Program To Begin Operation First of November

Miss Kittye Clyde Austin, director of relief for Chilton County, announces this week that all farm families on relief will be discontinued during the month of October.

At the same time Miss Austin announced that the new farm hehabilitation program will be formulated and put into operation on the first of November.

Under the new program the following classification of farm families is given by the county rehabilitation committee:

(1) Landowners who are on relief and have no available credit. These may be rehabilitated on their own land, and offer the least problem.

(2) Families on relief who were formerly renters of responsible character. This group will be handled very much as in this year's program, but definite rental arrangements will be made with option to purchase.

(3) Share croppers and day laborers. This group will require a great deal of supervision and can best be provided for by placing them in groups where they can receive more individual attention. Families considered to be irresponsible from groups 1 and 2 are included in this group.

(4) Unemployables. These people do not belong in the rehabilitation program.

Rehabilitation will be divided into two groups, as follows:

Group 1. Will consist of those considered capable of managing capital advances. This group will be largely drawn from former land owners and managing tenants whose status has been changed by the depression.

Group II. Will consist of those farm groups who have shown a lack of aptitude or ability for managing a farm. This group will be largely made up of the day laborer type and those dependent upon seasonal employment. The change in status of this group will be merely a reduction in the amount of employment.

The following regulations are prescribed for Group 1:

(1) Only family units will be accepted. Single persons and groups not forming a family unit will not be accepted. Families not having able bodied members capable of doing general farm work will not be eligible.

(2) The head of the family entering this program must sign an agreement accepting the amount of his budget, the kind of purchases to be made, and the expenditure of such purchases by months. This budget should bear a definite relationship to the relief certification, and supplements are not to be permitted except in emergencies.

(3) All expenditures for material and equipment other than subsistence, clothing and medical aid are payable in merchantable farm products, at prices received by other farmers, and a clear understanding to this effect is necessary.

(4) Expenditures for subsistence, clothing and medical aid may be paid in employment on approved projects, if not paid out in merchantable staple commodities.

(5) It is undesirable to undertake the rehabilitation of a family on unproductive soil. Unproductive land will be rejected.

(6) Families are to pay a reasonable rent, but less than prevailing rental, on a relief basis. This is a just charge and must be included in the subject.

(7) At least one project in each county should be of the modified community center type, and those families requiring a great deal of supervision should be more closely grouped.

(8) The Alabama Relief Administration will assit in locating land and homes for rural subscribers and must approve them in each instance, but the responsibility of such locations is not assumed by the Alabama Relief Administration.

(9) Debt conciliation must be effected before a family is eligible. A waiver of debt will be absolutely necessary.

(10) Rural subscribers will be eligible for surplus commodities. Since a large part of relief is going to be made up of surplus commodities, it will be unfair to penalize these families, especially since there will be a lack of cash for all their needs.

(11) Rehabilitation funds will be budgeted to the counties. The county will be told the amount of this budget and also the maximum budget allowed for each family.

The following regulations are prescribed for Group 11:

This group will be largely concentrated on farms and under close supervision. Work stock and equipment belonging to the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation will be used for the cultivation of these subsistence farms. This group will be furnished necessary food and may receive as additional compensation a share of the farm products in proportion to the amount of work they have performed.

No cash will be furnished from ARA funds but the local representatives of the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation will undertake to obtain private employment for members of this group. This may be done by arranging with farmers to hire labor at the local rate, to build terraces, dig ditches, etc. The Rehabilitation corporation can encourage this by furnishing the engineering work. It is believed that in most counties enough employment of this kind can be arranged to take care of clothing and medical requirements.

Reforestation is another field where this group may be usefully employed when they are not occupied in the growing of their subsistence.

BOB JONES LEAVES FOR EUROPE

Cleveland, Tenn., Oct. 2.—Dr. Bob Jones, the well-known evangelist and the founder ond president of the Bob Jones College, located here, left today for Baltimore where he sails October 3rd for an evangelistic tour of the continent of Europe and the British Isles. Dr. Jones was accompanied by Mrs. Jones, Miss Marjorie Parker, national secretary of the Young People's Fellowship Clubs and private secretary of Dr. Jones; Rev. James Zellner and Rev. Fred Brown of Birmingham, Alabama, and Rev. Jimmie Johnson of Montgomery, Ala. These three young ministers are graduates of the Bob Jones College. Dr. and Mrs. Jones and Miss Parker will return to Cleveland during the Christmas holidays. The three young ministers will remain in Europe for at least a year sponsoring young people's revivals, especially in the British Isles. They are working under the auspices of the National Association of Young people's Fellowship Clubs.

In an interview here today Dr. Jones said, "What the world needs is a revival of the old time religion. There is nothing the matter with us except we substituted gold for God, and now that we are in distress, we have learned that gold cannot save us, so we are turning back to God."

HOUSING LOANS AVAILABLE NOW

To Repair and Improve Farm Buildings and Urban Homesteads

Birmingham, Ala.—Federal Housing administration loans are availble for repairing and improving farmsteads, as well as urban property, according to announcement made here today by Robert Jemison, Jr., state chairman for the Fedral Housing Administration. Construction of new silos, barns poultry houses, garages, corn cribs and other farm structures, as well as new fences or repairs to fences, can be financed through banks which have qualified under the FHA plan, Mr. Jemison stated.

With cotton selling at 12 cents a pound and one of the best crops in several years in prospect for Alabama, as well as other crops bringing higher prices, it is confidently anticipated that large investments will be made this fall by Alabama farmers in permanent farm improvements for the dual purpose of improving living conditions and increasing farm income through modernization of equipment.

A number of industrial corporations are cooperating with the federal housing administration in this program, it was announced. The Tennessee Coal Iron and Railroad Company, steel producers, Birmingham, is among these corporations which have issued booklets showing types of farm improvements eligible for FHA loans and carrying plans and other facts about the financing plan, which is sponsored by the federal government. Such booklets are being distributed gratis to promote a building program in the south.

Mr. Jemison announced today that 103 Alabama banks are now qualified to make FHA loans, and that eighteen campaigns have been launched in the following Alabama towns: Anniston, Gadsden, Andalusia, Dothan, Montgomery, Alexander City, Bessemer, Birmingham, Decatur, Florence, Jasper, Mobile, Poenix City, Selma, Sheffield, Sylacauga, Talladega, and Tuscaloosa.

Active efforts will be hade to carry the movement into rural areas as well as urban centers, in order that Alabama farmers may receive full benefits from the program, Mr. Jemison said.

COMMISSIONERS ADOPT JURY'S GASOLINE PLAN

Five Suggestions Will Be Carried Out By The Court

The Commissioners Court of Chilton County in session Monday, passed and adopted an order putting into effect the suggestions made by the grand jury for the operation of the county gasoline business.

Following are the suggestions made by the grand jury, and embodied in the order adopted by the Court:

1. We recommend that the county gasoline distributing truck be kept in the county warehouse or garage that is located near the jail in the Town of Clanton when not in use in distributing gasoline to the various Commissioners' districts of the county and when so kept in the county warehouse or garage that it be securely locked.

2. That each commissioner and the Commissioners Court as a whole, let the employee of the county who is in charge of the distributing of gasoline to the various Commissioners' districts, understand that in no event is he to place county gasoline in any motor vehicle other than those that belong to Chilton County.

3. That the county employee delivering gasoline to the various county employees receive a recipt for the amount of gasoline or oil so delivered, which receipt should be signed by and in the name of the employee of the county that the gasoline is delivered to.

4. That the employee of the county who has charge of the county's bulk gasoline station, and whose duty it is to distribute gasoline to the various Commisisoners' districts, should at least once a month account to the Commissioners Court as a whole for every gallon of county gaoline that he has handled.

5. That the employee of the county who has charge of the county's gasoline, should be required by the Commissioners Court to make bond, which, in no event, should be less than $1,000 to insure the faithful performance of his duties in handling the county gasoline.

Teachers Institute Was Held Monday

Only One Teacher In the County Was Unable To Attend

Under direction of County Superintendent, Luther Little, who was acting by appointment of the state department of education as conductor of the Chilton County Teachers Institute, the teachers of Chilton County were in session at the Chilton County High school Monday for the annual gathering preceding the opening of all schools of the county.

Attendance was 156, which was only one short of the entire number of teachers employed to teach in the county this year. Mr. Porch, of Isabella, was unable to attend on account of sickness.

In the absence of state superintendent-elect, J. A. Keller, Prof. H. G. Dowling, county superintendent of Tuscaloosa County, and president of the Alabama Education Association, was present and made the principal address of the program.

Representing the extension departments of their respective colleges, the following eminent educators were present and had a part on the program:

Dr. James, of Alabama College, Montevallo; Prof. A. C. Shelton, of Jacksonville State Teachers College; Dr. McDonald, of Howard College, Birmingham; Dr. Chestnut, of Auburn; Dr. S. J. Hacking, of the University of Alabama.

These professors organized extension courses with groups of teachers, who will carry on courses of study under their direction this winter. Regular meetings of the groups will be held here at stated periods.

The following were elected as officers of the Chilton County Teachers Association for the coming year: Mr. Earle Thomas, Isabella, president; W. C. DuBose, Verbena, vice president; Miss Virginia Cook, Chilton County High School, secretary-treasurer.

The teachers voted one hundred per cent to affiliate in membership in the Alabama Education Association.

Man In The Moon Replies To Editorial In Chilton County News

In last week's issue of the Chilton County News there appeared a double-barreled editorial, and right on the front page, at that. In fact, for the past several months The News has very nearly made its front page over into another editorial page. That editorial was headed "What the 'New Deal' Means to You." In this article, we intend to take up this front page editorial, paragraph by paragraph, and try to point out a few salient points of the "New Deal" that the editor of the News apparently overlooked.

To begin with, the News editor says that his editorial is not a defense of the New Deal, in that he thinks it does not need defense. He says, also, that all has not been perfect, but that just as fast as the New Deal administrators found weak points, they were the first to work for correction. We agree with the editor that the New Deal needs no defense. That it has failed in many places (and major points) even the most rabid New Deal supporter will admit. Who will defend a failure? We can not even say that we believe the New Deal officials have done the best they could, which is the only defense that could possibly be offered for the failure that the New Deal has proved. And, when business men and farmers sent delegates to the officials to show them weak points in the program, did they take this well-meant advice? They did not! Instead, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, gave notice through the press as follows: "We are running this business and any time we want advice we will ask for it." This autocratic speech didn't set well even with the president, who had given notice that any constructive criticism and advice would be considered and recognized. And the effect it had on the masses should have warned Gen. Johnson that he had stepped on people's toes. But no—the officials were so wrapped up in their new-found power that they heeded nothing. From that day to this, abuse has been heaped upon injustice and the whole dumped upon an unsuspecting people. That is the way the officials have found the weak points and corrected them.

The next paragraph says: "There are a few, however, in Chilton County, who in the heat of a political campaign attempt to criticise this program, knowing that much progress has been made. That is the reason their criticism is little more than the grasping of a drowning man at a straw. They are aware that the people of this county have seen the light . . . " Yes, there are "a few" who criticize the program, and quite a few, at that, if we are to believe the discussions we hear on the street daily. And, as for the progress that has been made, we would like for some of our good Democratic friends to parade some of their progress around our way—we would like to have a glimpse at it. We must admit that we have failed to see the "great progress" that has been made. We believe, though, that the people "have seen the light." We agree with that. And the more light the people see, and the better they come to know the New Deal, the more criticism we hear. Just interview some of the fellows—you'll hear a new and different kick out of each and every man. Nor is this criticism confined to political campaigns. In fact, most of the criticism comes from the rank and file of the people—not from the politicians. And here is the reason. The general run of politicians can usually take care of themselves, financially, but the "one-gallus" man finds himself in a bad way from the many restrictions that are placed upon him, with no way to help himself. In short, he is "between the devil and the deep blue sea." The News editor tends to confine this criticism to Chilton County, for the most part. Pick up your morning paper—any morning—and scan its pages. You will read of requests from every section of the nation that these autocratic and destructive restrictions be removed. Don't be misled—this county's people are not the only ones who are dissatisfied.

The News editor says that many people in Chilton County — Republicans and Democrats alike—are opposed to anyone who is against the New Deal. That is another specimen that we must admit we have not had the chance to look over. In fact, we don't believe the Democrats of Chilton County have one single candidate in the field who would be foolish enough to make his race on absolute endorsemen of the New Deal. They are too smart for that. To be fair, honest, and above-board about the matter, we don't believe that the editor of The News, himself, will lend his endorsement to the New Deal in its entirety, nor try to comply with its requirements in every respect. We do not believe that he would be willing to endorse some points that are so plainly impractical and experimental, nor permit his business interests to run the risks that complete compliance with NRA requirements would necessitate.

Taking up the next paragraph. We would like to look the man in the face who can conscientiously say: "Everything is all right so far, in the sense The News applies it." It is true the Republicans would point out "a great yawning danger out ahead." And the Republicans, we agree, do not point out anything definite. That there is a great yawning danger out ahead even the most simple must realize, and the depths to which our present national course will carry us not even Solomon, in all his wisdom, could foresee. We agree with the News editor that none may say what the final outcome may be, but we can see far enough ahead to know that unless many and drastic changes are made, that outcome will not be pleasant.

This editorial quotes Rep. Joseph W. Byrns that the gain in employment during the past 15 months has been over five million. If this is true, then why is it that at this very moment there are millions more on the nation's relief rolls than at any time during the depression? Start up the highway in your car and see how many are "thumbing" their way about the country, or go down to the railroad and watch any freight pass by, and try to count the "hoboes" who are "on their way" to "just anywhere." If the employment problem has been solved so well, why do conditions remain the same as they were two years ago? In the name of all that is high and holy, let us at least have the honest figures, so that we may face our problem with correct knowledge of it and be better able to cope with it, rather than fictitious and unfounded speculation.

The News editor says for you to ask yourself if you are in better condition than you were two years ago, and if you hanker for the Hoover days again. Maybe you are in some better condition than you were then. But let us consider the people of other countries. They have come out of their depression in some degree also—in fact, in greater degree than the people of our own country. There are business statistics from the other nations of the world to prove that. From this we must realize that we are coming back "in spite" of the New Deal rather than "because" of it. The depression HAD to end some time, and from evidence gleaned from these world statistics, we would have been further—much further — along the road to recovery if we had never heard of the New Deal or the NRA. England, for instance, was much harder hit by the depression than was Uncle Sam, yet they are much further along the road to recovery than we are. And they did it without sacrificing any of their people's personal liberties or property rights. Neither did they try to tap an inexhaustible money supply and let the government run everything and pay for everything. That has been one of the curious twists to this recovery business. Our officials have tried to spend their way back to prosperity. If that is good business, then the business men of this nation and the world have been laboring under a great illusion for lo these many years. It seems strange that a bunch of high-brow college bred theorists and experimenters would know so much more about business and how it should be conducted than those old hard-headed business men who have been running the business affairs of the nation for so long and making a success of their work.

The News editor belittles the danger of autocracy. He thinks we are not headed for autocratic government. We don't think so, either—we already have it, in great degree, and anyone with bat brains can easily see that more and more pressure is being brought to bear with every move the officials make. The News editor bears down on the definition of autocracy. He says it is the concentration of power in the hands of a few. That is true. And we would like for the editor of the Chilton County News, or anyone else, from the president on down, to open up his history book and point to one time in the history of the United States when our governmental powers were placed in as few hands as they are today. The News Editor has indicted his own party officials in his own words. Those pussy-footing congressmen who, after being elected to go to Washington to represent their people, surrendered their sovereign rights and the rights of those whom they were supposed to represent, and gave all their powers of representation over into the hands of one man, have proved themselves traitors of the deepest dye to their people. Their act on this occasion would put Benedict Arnold to shame — Arnold betrayed an army—those Democratic congressmen betrayed a whole nation—their nation, and their own people. Instead of our people having a voice in governmental affairs through their congressmen, we now have all power vested in one man, who is "assisted" by theorists, who wouldn't recognize a practical idea if they happened to stumble over one. College professors run our country, who haven't the slightest bit of experience in the work they are supposed to superintend. Is that a sensible procedure? Men are at the head of the agricultural department who very probably wouldn't know the difference between a cotton boll and a wild crab-apple. How can they know the farmer's problems? And, knowing as little as they do of these problems, how can they effect measures—practical measures — for the relief of farmers? Would a farmer know how to drive a locomotive? Hardly! Yet it is just as reasonable to think of a farmer driving a locomotive as it is to put a college professor up to tell farmers how they should go about their farming business. Yes, we agree that an autocracy exists when all power is in the hands of a few. And, further, we submit that such a condition exists in the United States at this very moment, and that the condition is being made worse every time they make a change.

In the next paragraph, The News editor asks: "Just which of the two administrations fit in the class of an autocracy?" I would like for every man to ask himself that same question, and use the definition of an autocracy as a rule to judge by. A Democracy, such as we have been governed by in the past, is a government made up of a president and a congress, the latter being elected by the people, and these two working together for the better interests of the whole people. An autocracy exists when all power is in the hands of a few, to do with it as they will, to give orders along with which are issued penalties for their non-compliance. Is not this latter condition the same which we have today?

The News editor terms our American liberty a "Phantom." Shades of Washington, and those other heroes that have gone forth to war, into the valley of the shadow of death, many of them giving up their lives and remaining there, that the future generatoins of America might enjoy liberty. Americans do not really realize the extent of their liberty, but if they could live in some other countries with governments such as our own is fast coming to be under the present regime, then they could appreciate the fullness of their liberty. Libtry gives to each and every person to do exactly as he pleases, so long as his acts do not encroach on the liberties of his fellow man. We would like for every person to ask themselves if they have as much liberty as they did two years ago. Did you have to sign up for cotton acreage then? Did you have someone at Washington tell you how much cotton you could raise? Did you have someone tell you that you must pay a tax over a certain number of pounds of cotton? Did you have a flock of one-man laws to overshadow you, with penalties set forth in case they were broken? Did our merchants have someone tell them what they could sell their goods for? Did your cleaners and laundrymen have someone to set a price which they must charge you for pressing your clothes, and if they chipped off a nickle from the price, were they thrown in jail? No! Those conditions did not exist two years ago! But they DO exist now, and there have been plenty of people who have cooled their heels in jail because of slight infractions of such rules of the NRA. Is that liberty? Washington and his Valley Forge heroes would never recognize it as the ideal they were freezing, fighting and dying for. They would believe that their efforts had been in vain, and that King George III still reigned. We believe that he who calls our American liberty a "phantom" has uttered an insult to our star-sprangled banner, to the heroes who framed our government with liberty as their main objective, and to the millions of Americans who have bled and died that "Old Glory" might signify to the world a message that she waved over "the land of the free." We believe those who speak of our liberty as a "phantom" have proved themselves ungrateful for the advantages their American birthright has biven them, and have proved themselves unworthy to be called Americans.

The News editor says Republicans call the Democratic spending spree "Democratic bait." We do not call it that. To us, the Democrats are only living up to their reputation of plunging into anything and everything without any foresight as to what their rash acts might result in. He mentions 13-cent cotton, against a price of five cents. But he does not mention that this was the first time in history that cotton sold that low during a Republican administration, and that for only a short period; nor does he mention that the Democrats have never failed to send it that low, and that on some occasions farmers could not even get a bid on their products. Neitheir did he point out that food and clothes are from two to three times the price they were when you sold cotton for five cents. And, another thing, at that time you COULD sell it when you pleased—now you must have all kinds of permits before you can sell, and then you are told how much you can sell. Many farmers have told me they had rather do the work to make a bale of cotton than to do the running around necessary to sell it.

Nor have we any fears for the nation's financial balance, as the News editor believes. To be fair, there is no such thing as a balance, neither in real money, nor on the books. The Democrats talk much of balancing the national budget. They are keeping a double-book system of accounts. In one book the budget is balanced, because no expenditures are entered in this book which would pull expenditures above receipts. In the other book is kept all the "special expenditures," which are piling the national debt higher and higher every day. In fact, if all of the nation's debts were paid today, it would take nearly five times as much money as the total value of all the nation's assets. That's the way the Democrats are "balancing the budget," and that's the condition of the national "balance." Here is a simple application of the double-book system. Suppose a man had a $1,000 income per year, and his living expenses for the year amounted to that figure. He would be balanced for the year. Then suppose he buys a $700 automobile, and puts that debt down in another book. His budget book would still be balanced, but he would still owe $700 just the same. That's the way we are keeping our budget balanced. But just remember this: You and your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and all their posterity will have to keep paying on the debts that are recorded in that second book for years to come, whether the budget is balanced or not.

The News editor writes of bank failures. Remember this: All banks were closed under presidential order, and none but those with backing as strong as the rock of Gibralter were allowed to open. No wonder they do not fail. And no wonder the government doesn't mind guaranteeing the deposits—I don't believe any of us would mind endorsing one of John D. Rockefeller's checks—it would stand a pretty good chance of being good. No one minds betting on a certainty. And we would be glad to have the News editor point out to us the 20 business houses which were vacant two years ago, and are now occupied. We have been around these parts for quite a while—we were here in 1932, and are here now, and we may be pretty dumb, but we must confess that we can't think of the 20 empty business houses which were empty in Clanton in 1932 and are now occupied. Name 'me for us, Mr. editor.

Yes, we believe the citizenship of Chilton County HAS seen the effects of the New Deal, and we, too, believe they will remember and will not be misled—AGAIN. We believe that all have seen instances where self-respecting men and women have lost that prized self-respect and have come to the point where they are willing to "live on charity." We, too, are glad to see the needy taken care of; but all too often have we seen people take advantage of this "free-will" spirit, which we believe will bring about bad results in the long run. The Republicans believe in building on a rock—not on sand.

And certainly The Union-Banner is not in accord with this New Deal, in its entirety, and neither are the Republican candidates. But this does not mean that our candidates will not do everything in their power to get Chilton County's share, inasmuch as the pie is being passed around. We would be glad to have the News editor compare our county with other counties of the state, and see if our Republican officials haven't secured all that was coming to Chilton. He will find that Chilton's share compares favorably with that secured by other counties.

The News editor says that when Roosevelt took office we could not trade with foreign countries, because of their depreciated currency. That is true. But what method did he use in trying to equalize. Instead of making a trial at getting their currencies stabilized and brought up to a par with ours, he depreciated our own, causing a loss to every man in America who was thrifty enough to have saved any money. In other words, if you had $100 in the bank when Roosevelt took office, and it is still there, it is worth only $59.60, or $40.40 less than it was two years ago. That's what "managed" money means to us.

The News editor quotes President Roosevelt as follows: " . . . I place the security of the men, women and children of the nation first. This security for the individual and the family concerns itself primarily with three factors: People want decent homes to live in; they want to locate them where they can engage in productive work; they want some safeguard against misfortunes which cannot be completey eliminated in this man-made world of ours." The editor asks: "Is that not something worthwhile for you to consider?" Yes, we must agree that such a situation would be the next thing to heaven itself. But in this, even if the government should set out to accomplish such a work, it would only be another attempt to accomplish the impossible. Can the government attempt to furnish every man with a nice home, situated just where it would suit his convenience best or where it would please him most, and can our government attempt to safeguard people against the misfortunes of life? We don't think so. We believe all this another glorious air castle that Democrats hold before people to try to deceive them into keeping Democrats in power. Ask yourself if your government can guarantee you and everyone else all these things. You KNOW it is impossible.

The News editor says the people of America will say to Roosevelt and the New Dealers: "Well done," when their term of office is over. We, too, believe they will say that, in the same sense that one speaks of a steak or an egg, when it is through, and ready to take away. When an egg is "well done" we take it up and make short of it. Yes, we believe the whole New Deal crowd is "well done," and should be removed—however, some of them were rotten to begin with, and should never have been used in the first place.

In closing we want to say just a few words about our national Constitution. For more than 150 years the Constiution has been guiding the destiny of this nation and made a good job of it. Under its direction we have become the strongest and richest nation on the face of the globe. The present administration would set aside the Constitution as obsolete. They say it belongs to the ox-cart days, and that it has outlived its usefulness. And every move they make goes a step further in ousting the Constitution as our national government road map. The situation is the same as might exist if we should say that the Bible is obsolete because it was written back in the dark ages, when men rode in chariots and wore sandals. We, as Christians, still believe that if one follows the spiritual direction of the Bible he will reach his heavenly goal. And, as Republicans, and firm believers in the Constitution of the United States, we believe just as firmly that the Constitution is not obsolete, and strict observance of its governmental directions will keep this nation on the high road to prosperity and success. We have all confidence in the Bible for our spiritual direction, and just as much in our Constitution to direct our national policies.

Another thing. The Democrats always speak of "the dark days of Hoover, in 1932." They never remind you that the depression was a backwash from effects of the World War. They never remind you that during Cleveland's administration people boiled dirt of their smoke-house to get a little salt. They do not remind you of the time when Wilson broke faith and his word with the American people, when, after being elected on the slogan: "He kept us out of war," read to the congress a declaration of war less than a month after he took office the second time. They do not point out to you the enormous slough of debt that the present administration is plunging the nation into. And these Democrats cannot point to another Republican administration outside of "the dark days of Hoover" which anywhere near paralleled every Democratic administration in the matter of hard times. And they do not tell you that the Democratic congressmen thwarted every move of President Hoover to better conditions. No, they do not tell you any of these things. They hold out to you glittering promises of wonders they HOPE to perform. But remember, "All is not gold that glitters," and "a house built on sand is sure to fall."

But these Democrats are not blind, by any means. They see the handwriting on the wall, regarding the NRA. Individuals and business interests have stood back—waiting—giving a chance for the "wonder workers" to perform their miracles. At first the nation stood aghast at the effrontery of the power-drunk officials. Then a spirit of cooperation swept the country. That is the reason these officials have gotten away with their autocratic acts as long as they have. But now individuals and big business alike are beginning to feel that ample time has been given for results to show, and the results are not considered great enough. From all over the nation people have at first asked, timidly, for some change in the national course. When this received no response, they made their requests more pointed. At last they have DEMANDED that something be done. Now the Democrats understand that the American people are bigger than any set of bigoted autocrats, no matter what their power, and that the people must win in the end. So, they are remodeling the NRA. They are making concessions at every turn—trying to stay in favor with the people. They have gone so far as to remove Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the "ram rod" of the works, who said: "We may have to ram this NRA program down their (the people's) throats, but we'll do it. Bitter medicine has to be forced down a balky mule, you know." But Johnson has been removed any way—resigned—UNDER PRESSURE, if you please.

The News editor says we are drowning people catching at straws. We think the Demmies have just put on the LAST straw to break the camel's back of the American people's patience. There is no straw for them to catch at.—Man in the Moon.

BOB JONES COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The Bible is a book made up of what God has said, what man has said, and what the devil has said. What God has said is always true. What man has said may be true or may not be true. What the devil has said is usually a lie.

"We believe in the inspiration of the Bible." What do we mean by that statement? We mean that whatever the Bible says is so. If the Bible says that God said something, then God said it. If the Bible says that man said something, man said it. The Bible says "the fool hath said in his heart there is no God." The fool lied. There is a God. The Bible is an inspired book, and when it says that the fool hath said in his heart there is no God, then it is true that the fool said it. When the Bible says that the devil told Eve in the garden that the tree was good for food and that it would make one wise, and that it was pleasant to the eye; then the devil said what the Bible said he said. When the Bible said in one place that Paul said "I speak as a man," then the Bible means that Paul said just what it says he said and that it was not the statement of God, but the opinion of a good man.

The trouble with people is that they do not take the Bible like they take any other book. They do not take the Bible for just what it says. That is the reason they do not understand it. They think the Book is too deep for them. They do not think they can know the Book. There isn't anything about this world or the next that any man needs to know to help him live right but what he can find this in the Bible. There isn't anything a man needs for his own happiness in this world or in the world to come but what he can find this thing in the Bible.

The Bible is the only book that was ever written that speaks with absolute authority about the will of God for a life. The Book tells me who I am, where I came from, what my present state is, and what my eternal destiny is. It tells me how God wants me to live, and what His will is for my life. If I can not find between the pages of the Bible a revelation of God's will for me, then there is no revelation for the will of God for my life anywhere in the world. It stands to reason if there is a God who made man that this God would make known to man His divine will. This thing God has done in the Bible, which is the Book of Books.

Jesus doesn't offer to go with men anywhere, but He follows men everywhere. He will not go with men to places of questionable amusements or on wicked journeys, but He follows men with His mercies even though they go to the deepest depths of sin. How many times have we heard men say "Had it not been for the goodness of God I would have been in hell long ago."

Men have no right to go to any place to which they cannot invite their Lord. We have no right to do anything upon which we cannot ask His blessing. Every relationship of a Christian is a sacred relationship;

WHAT NEGROES ARE DOING

Community Singers

The community singers met at the county training school last Sunday. There were singers present from all over the county and a goodly number from adjoining counties. A very interesting program was rendered, after which officers were re-elected for another year. Under the leadership of such an able woman, Mrs. Leila Woods, as president of this group, it has been an asset to this and other communities in Chilton County.

Big School Rally

At three o'clock in the same building a special drive was initiated to pay that long past due note of $280 at the Peoples Savings Bank. For the last three and one-half years very little had been paid above interest. Realizing that just paying interest does not pay a debt, the pastors and friends of the county training school raised $50 last Sunday to be paid on the principal. Although everyone did not represent in this rally, the trustees, principal, faculty and student body takes pleasure in thanking those who did their best in trying to put the rally over in a big way. The fifth Sunday in December has been set as the day for another big rally. We hope to be able to wipe out this debt washing dishes and keeping a home as a home should be kept, mending of clothes and nursing babies. These things are just as sacred as praying. I believe in a divine call to the ministry, but every position is a holy position when we fill that position for the glory of God.

The editor has often said, "There is a tendency to separate life into compartments. We have a compartment of religion and a compartment of life. Jesus Christ did not so divide life. He came that men might have life and that they might have it more abundantly. He was always conscious of the presence of His father. The man who has an abiding God-consciousness in all of his relationships is living an abundant life.

"I would like to be a Christian, someone said, "but there is too much to give up." How ridiculous is such a statement. God is no cruel monster. God wants us to have all we ought to have. He doesn't ask us to give up anything except something that might hurt us or might hurt some one else if we keep it. No one should want to keep something that might injure him or somebody else. We give up brass and He gives us gold. We give up cheap jewelry from the ten cent store of the world, and He gives us diamonds and emralds and pearls out of the sky. We give up a lame horse and a worn out wagon and we ride with Him and angels in heavenly chariots .

School Opened Monday

The County Training School opened wide its doors to children from all over the county last Monday, October 1. A very interesting program was enjoyed by students, patrons and friends in the assembly room. A very brief address on "Sacrificing for Education" was delivered by Elder Mitchell, of Montgomery, Ala., and father of Miss Blanche W. Mitchell, a member of the training school faculty. Rev. E. W. Burt responded very favorably to the above address.

We were also very glad to have with us on the first day our farm demonstration agent, Mr. Worthy Hughes, who commented on the address and brought to us some helpful information concerning the farmers conference which will be held at an early date.

Adult School Opened

An adult school has opened up in the county training school community. All negroes are urged to take advantage of this opportunity. Classes are being taught in the Lutheran school building with Mrs. Vanilla Barbour as teacher. If you haven't already started, start tonight.—Benj. Anderson.

IN MEMORY

On September 15 Mrs. G. W. Mullins fell asleep in Jesus. When He comes to gather flowers for His kingdom, He not only plucks the buds but the full open flowers. When He saw her bright face, He saw that she would make heaven a more beautiful place.

She was loyal to her church and master. She was always ready to stand up for His cause.

She leaves a husband and mother, Mrs. Sie Culp and one sister, Mrs. I. B. Yeargan; two brothers, Mr. J. A. and Mrs. J. O. Culp, and a number of friends.

She was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sie Culp. She had been a member of Mt. Pisgah Methodist church for 40 years.

She was laid to rest in Mt. Pisgah cemetery September 16 with Rev. Harvey Culp officiating.

IN MEMORY OF DEAR OLD DADDY

On September 17, about 3 o.clock a.m. God saw fit to take away our beloved father. He was 67 years old. He was born in Coosa County, in 1867 and lived there until about 17 years ago. He was married to Miss Edith Jacks in 1888, joined the church in Coosa County when 21 years of age.

Daddy had been in bad health about four years. He leaves to mourn his loss a widow Mrs. Edith Carrol; two brothers, W. J. Carrol, of Montgomery and John Carrol of Wetumpka; four sisters, Mrs. C. E. Waldrop of Talledega; Mrs. J. P. Burton and Mrs. Wiley Morris of Sylacauga; Mrs. K. O. Brooks of Verbena; seven children, Mrs. G. L. Messer of Verbena; Elzie Carrol of Jemison; Earnest, Thomas, and Lewis Carrol of Clanton; Mrs. Lee Wyatt and Mrs. Leila Mims of Clanton.

Who wants government ownership? The railroad—meaning those who have their money invested in railroads and the men who operate the railroads—do not want it; other agencies of transport do not want it, for, if the railroads were taken over by the government, other kinds of transport would also be taken over—or the other kinds would have to compete with government transport; shippers, as represented by their traffic departments, do not want it, for to them it means less efficient service; the same thing is true of business as represented by those who employ industrial traffic men—they do not want the wheels of commerce slowed up; economists and unbiased students of transportation do not want it—they believe it to be unsound economically.—Traffic World.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

There has been a disposition on the part of Great Britain during recent months to involve itself less and less in the unsettled affairs of Continental Europe. Gradually people of that great nation seem to be coming to the realization that they have profited very little by active mixing in the affairs of the dark and bloody continent in recent times. Some enlightening evidence of this new feeling is found in a recent dispatch to the New York Times, from its London office, telling about a poll on the question of foreign entanglements which was taken by the London Daily Express. According to the dispatch, the Express sent representatives to 689,301 homes in Great Britain asking the occupants the following question: "Are you in favor of Great Britain isolating herself from all foreign entanglements treaties and understandings and refusing to engage her forces in any war unless our territory or that of our dominions and possessions is menaced?"

The Express has just announced that 606,-165, or 87.9 per cent of those voting said "yes" while only two per cent of those voting said "no." The balance either refused to vote or were indefinite in their replies. This can only mean that the British people are coming to realize that it doesn't pay for a nation which is in any degree isolated, to mix too much in the affairs of other nations. Great Britain has always, of course, had an intense interest in what is going on in Europe. In the past her diplomacy has been directed to play on one nation against another and so preserve the balance of power to herself. She has had extensive trade weapons and the greatest navy in the world to assist her in the carrying out of her purposes and she has generally been successful. But it is now becoming evident that a great many Brtish people are beginning to believe that the game is not worth the candle, and that true British prosperity in the future lies in the direction of attending strictly to the business of the British Empire and not mixing in foreign difficulties unless the interests of the Empire are involved.

Now, although Great Britain has some isolation from the continent, John Bull is still much closer to European troubles than Uncle Sam. The British channel is by no means as wide or expansive as the Atltantic Ocean. So, if British opinion is coming to believe that true British interest lies in avoiding entangling committments, and attending strictly to business with the Empire, this would seem to show that Uncle Sam, with the thousands of miles of ocean separating him from Europe and Asia, is all the more justified in remaining at home and attending strictly to business which concerns the United States. Our stake in Europe, compared with that of Great Britain, is indeed small.

This doesn't mean, of course, that Uncle Sam should build a wall around our country, and refuse to have any intercourse with the outside world. Nobody has any such idea as that. But it means that we ought to avoid all international political agreements, which might in any way involve us in war in any part of the world. We have millions for defense but not a cent for foreign military venture. Let us see that our defenses, and especially our navy, are so prepared that nobody will want to attack us. If we do this, and attend strictly to our own business, permitting Europe to fight its own battles and settle its own difficulties, then we are in little danger of involvement in another world war. On the other hand, a weak navy and a meddlesome foreign policy is apt to entangle us in all sorts of troubles. The advice of Washington, Jefferson and the other founders of the nation, on foreign policy, is still good.

LOCAL REPUBLICAN OR DEMOCRAT OFFICERS—WHICH?

It is certainly with no intention of reflection on our two splendid local banks of Clanton that we refer to their figures in this political discussion, but inasmuch as The Chilton County News last week brought up the subject of the deposits then and now, we feel it necessary to make the figures a little more plain. The News stated: "Deposits in local banks have increased over two hundred thousand dollars in the past two years."

On December 31, 1932 the deposits in both local banks was $635,770.23. On June 30, 1934, deposits in the two banks was $794,491.89, an increase of $158,721.66, which is about 25 per cent increase. Probably The News used some other reports to get their figures of over $200,000 increase. We will grant that they were correct in their figures. This would make in increase of about 35 per cent.

Even an increase of 25 per cent looks good, but when you take into consideration the decrease in the value of the dollar over the same period of time, look what you have. The dollar now is worth a fraction less than 60 cents. With deposits increased 35 per cent and the value of the dollar decreased 40 per cent, you have a fair example of the general condition of things. The actual value of the money in our banks on June 30, 1934 would be only about $496,-695.13, or $139,075.10 less than it was on December 31, 1932.

On January 5, 1933 good flour was advertised at 45c a sack. On September 27 this year we find the price of this same flour advertised at 85c a sack, an increase of 40c per sack, or 88 per cent increase. The increase on all commodities ranges all the way from 25 per cent on up.

When cotton was selling at 5c a pound a farmer could raise all he wanted to, and a farmer who then marketed 15 bales is now permitted to market only 3 to 5 bales. His 15 bales then sold for $375. If he now can sell 5 bales, which would figure above the average, his crop this year at 15c would bring the same amount. Now, with the increase in the cost of the things he has to buy, you can readily see what condition the farmer is in.

It is true that you can get hold of a dollar now much easier than you could the first of 1933, but what have you got when you have it. A little figuring will reveal that you are in fact no better off. And when you get this dollar now, where does it come from. Does it come from the honest production of industry and representing an honest dollar's worth of somebody's productive labor? No, but a great percentage of it is a donation from the federal government and represents no actual production from the industries of the nation. Back in 1917 and 1918 dollars were flying thick and fast, but they were blood money from our government. It is virtually the same thing today. It is a phantom dollar with no real industrial production to stand behind it and hold it up. It is floating around only of its own power and is as likely to go down as up.

Let us ask you the question, where would Chilton County be if it had been run for the past few years like the federal government is now run? It is simple to answer. We would have been head over heels in debt with nobody knowing our real financial obligations, discounting our county warrants 40 per cent. We had an example of this kind of management of our county government when we had our last Democratic probate judge, Judge Deason, from 1911 to 1917. The News admits that the present "Local Democratic candidates are in full sympathy with the new program under President Roosevelt."

In deciding what party candidates you want to vote for in November, you only need to ask yourself the question: Do I want Chilton County to stay on a cash basis and continue to pay up its bonded indebtedness incurred under the last Democratic probate judge, or do I want Chilton County to do like the federal government is now doing—go in debt to the limit and make its money worth 60 cents in the dollar? There is no excuse for us getting lost in big figures which the average person cannot understand. These are the local facts boiled down to their actual local application, and the voters can decide these questions without much serious and exhaustive figuring and thinking. The News tells us that the local Democratic candidates stand for these things. The Republicans stand for sound pay-as-you-go business and dollar for dollar values. The Democrats believe in debts to the limit and dollars worth only 60 cents, together with complications that no one can understand, liberties taken away, industries regimented to death, and the people told by the dictator (the president) just what they can do and not do.

When the Republicans of Chilton County take these facts into consideration, they cannot afford to and will not vote Democratic. The issues are too plain when boiled down.

THE BANKHEAD LAW

The "New Dealers" are beginning to hunt cover. Senator Bankhead has been hearing from the dear "peepul" about his cotton law. He boarded the train the other day for Washington, announcing as he did so that he favored the retention of the Bankhead law but was going to urge the Department of Agriculture to take off all restrictions on the individual farmer as to the amount of cotton he might have ginned. Now the Bankhead law, is precisely analogous to the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out. The Bankhead law without this restriction is all noise and bluster and red tape and offices and clerks and salaries and the compiling of useless records and the squandering of the public funds.

The whole law has proved a piece of folly; it demonstrates the inability of even the "New Dealers" to run everybody's business. It has already blown up and the senator, with his ear always to the ground is trying to get from under. We had our "Cotton Tom;" now we have our "Cotton John."—Oliver D. Street, Guntersville, Ala., in Birmingham News.

MAGNITUDINOUS LAWS

The Honorable James A. Farley, now chairman of the democratic national committee, chairman of the New York State Committee and Postmaster General, recently made a speech in Chicago, in which he camouflaged the issues with indictments of the Republican party on its delinquencies in the past, as he saw them. It was, as we say, a smoke screen, spouted by the jovial National Chairman, to hide the encroachments on and denials of the constitutional rights of citizens under the so-called New Deal.

His speech recalls a choice excerpt from that other great leader of the New Deal Democracy, the Hon. Alfred Emanuel Smith, delivered before the New York State Tammanynized Democracy a few days ago, in which that distinguished gentleman took the Republican party to task for not repealing the prohibition amendment. We recall that they claimed the whskey business was of such magnitude that it was impossible of enforcement.

And now Smith and Farley point with pride, as the outstanding achievement of the New Deal, to the high privilege of an American citizen to guzzle booze to his heart's content. And at the same time the New Deal has put into enforcement hundreds of little prohibitions affecting the smallest details of the American citizen's life, in his own business or farm and in his own home.

For instance, before an Alabama farmer, who is trying to support himself, wife and children by following the time-honored calling of tilling the soil, can grow and market his cotton crop, he must fill out long, numerous and complicated blanks. He must, like a slave, figuratively with hat in hand, approach a county-government bureaucrat, or a flock of bureaucrats, answer numerous impertinent questions, and fill out blanks until he or no one else can tell what it is all about.

Then the blanks are sent to some other place for a second army of bureaucrats to revise, review and send to some other place for bureaucratic revision. When finally the poor, harrassed farmer triumphantly gains the bureaucratic-bestowed privilege of selling his cotton, he finds to his undoing and chagrin that when he takes has (say) five bales of cotton to market, he has an allowance of two bales, and he may sell the other three by paying sixty dollars tax to assist in maintaining the bureaucracy that is harrassing him.

Providence, through the destructive drought made conditions such that cotton this fall would easily have brought the farmer fifteen cents a pound, if it had not been for all this bureaucratic governmental interference. What a mockery it is to remind the farmer that he is getting 12 or 13 cents a pound for his cotton, and then extort from him from $50.00 or $60.00 direct tax on his small cotton crop, and at the same time the cost of his living expenses increasing by leaps and bounds.

And speaking of prohibition, what a mockery it is that the government cannot cope with a smattering of lawbreakers, and yet imposes such unjust restrictions on the lives of honest American farmers.

WE NEED RELIGION

The world needs religion these days about as badly as it does money. I'm terribly disappointed in the world's clergy. I'd like to see the churchmen put aside secular topics and theological controversies to talk to the peoples of the world on the necessity for a rebirth of that old-fashioned faith that brought our forefathers safely through vastly more trying ordeals than the economic breakdown we are facing today. And I'd like to see the peoples of the world recalled from the shallow, wise-cracking skepticism, now a modish affectation, to an honest belief in the helpfulness of prayer. The world needs to be re-educated in the old religion that faced its problems with faith and fortitude. As Dr. Henry Van Dyke put is: "The culture which leaves a man without a flag is only one degree less miserable than that which leaves him without a God."—From Viewed By and Large," in Philadelphia Dispatch.

COTTON — LOCAL DEMOCRATS

The cotton program, under which the farmer's acreage is limited by the government, his number of bales limited and if he makes more than the limit the balance is taxed to nearly half its value, and to which there is more red tape attached when the farmer goes to sell than there is to joining the army, is a part of this New Deal program which the Chilton County News says the "local Democratic candidates are in full sympathy with. One Chilton County farmer tried to check his shoes some place last Friday to keep from wearing them out walking from one place to another trying to get all the permits signed up to sell a bale of cotton. The local Democratic candidates in Chilton County are standing behind all this, according to The Chilton County News.

Another thing the New Deal stands for, and the Democratic candidates in Chilton County endorse (because they "are in full sympathy with the program") is the flowing of booze down every gutter in the country. Do the people of Chilton County want this? Do our Christian mothers want the open saloon to return?

About the only liberty the New Dealers have left the people is the right to drink and wallow in the mire all they want to, if you call that a liberty.

And, too, atheism has been encouraged by the brain-trusters of the New Deal more for the past year and a half than in all past times put together in America. Do the good people of Chilton County approve of the doctrine that there is no God? Russia is dominated by this belief. Do you approve of the soviet regime? The New Deal recognized it, and the "local Democratic candidates are in full sympathy with the New Deal."

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

(Editorial in The Birmingham Post)

When the president got through Sunday night there was not much left of his Tory critics . . . On the defensive side it was an exceedingly effective speech, but on the offensive side the president did not get so far.

The people are much more interested in learning the definite recovery plans of their chosen leader, than in seeing him turn to flay his already defeated and discredited tory enemies. The real enemy is depression. That is not yet defeated.

The business upturn reported by the president was last spring. In the last two months the curve has been steeply downward. Profits are decreasing. Cost of living is rising. Real wages and purchasing power are dropping. The national debt and the current operating deficit are mounting.

This momentary backswing would be alarming only if the president lost his ability to correct the errors, to make decisions, to tell the people frankly what the next move is. Sunday night's speech was unsatisfactory precisely because it was unlike the positive President Roosevelt.

The only definite part was about National Recovery Administration reorganization, which was already known. Even there he did not say how far he is going in dropping price fixing and production restrictions; or in enforcing collective bargaining law. His intimation that he will repeat the Hoover request for a capital-labor truce can only end in failure as the Hoover truce ended—unless there is business revival. What good is a shorter week or higher wage if the factory shuts down?

On the basis of last year's experience it seems fair to assume that there will be no major sustained recovery until private capital goes back to work, until the vast credit reservoir is turned into productive channels. No amount of government spending can take the place of private investment as long as this is a capitalistist system. To call this condition a capital strike is to miss the point. The barrier is not spite, not a boycott against the New Deal. It is uncertainty. People who have money and credit are not buying and are not borrowing because they do not know what the value of money is to be, what the rules of the game are to be.

And that uncertainty—rightly or wrongly—is feeding the fear of the future which helps to block recovery.

Most important is the sincerity of the president's leadership and the willingness of the nation to follow. But to retain that faith and hope the president must continue to lead, and must be franker with the people than he was Sunday night. He need not worry about the elections. It is recovery that counts.

WHAT THEY THINK OF IT

The Union-Banner presents for the consideration of its readers some pertinent remarks of prominent statesmen regarding present economic conditions and the trend of our government.

On Constitutoin Day, Mr. Horace Wilkerson, prominent attorney of Birmingham, in an address at Fairfield is quoted as saying:

"The United States Constitution represents a crystallization of American ideas of human welfare and is a vital document that affects the lives of all people of this nation.

"The tendency on the part of some people these days to scoff at the Constitution reveals that they have lost sight of this document which is the fundamental conception of the people for their own advancement, a document that has stood the test of time and to which now we need pledge a renewal of faith and confidence."

The speaker, said that in his conception of law, about 20 per cent of our present national legislation was unconstitutional and would not stand up if tested in courts. This statement, he said, he did not wish construed as opposition to the New Deal, which he heartily favored as long as it remains within the limits of the Constitution.

When asked recently what he thought of the Roosevelt regime, William Randolph Hearst said in his newspapers: "It is a very radical regime, but the sentiment of the people is radical." Mr. Hearst added:

"I really have to give the English government and the English people tremendous credit for an amazing recovery. The government devised soundly and sanely and without partisan politics the present plan of recovery. The ablest business minds of the nation aided in the conception and execution of the plan; and the people, with characteristic British good judgment and good order, supported the plan and made its success possible.

"Furthermore, the result was accomplished without any sacrifice of liberty and democracy, without essaying any visionary innovations, any speculative experiments. Great Britain had faith in its government, in its people, in its political system, in itself. The result has justified that faith. Great Britain is much further on the road to recovery today than any nation in Europe, much further along than the United States, where unwise innovation and experimentation has harmed and hampered the present welfare of the people and mortgaged the future.

"If the visionary extremists will kindly postpone any further experiments, if industry will be given a reasonable independence and opportunity to develop, if natural order will be allowed to take the place of regimentation and repression, we will soon be creating more wealth than ever in the United States and, what is equally important, distributing it better than ever.

"Just save a place for the U. S. A. at the prosperity banquet, please. We may be a little late, but we will be there."

In making a speech in Montgomery on Constitution Day, Hon. Fred S. Ball, Sr., of that place said:

"Probably the most important principle of the Constitution was the distribution of the powers of government into three branches. All executive power is vested in a president, but there are now many charges that too much of it, mixed with usurped legislative power, has been delegated to irresponsible cabinet and bureau heads and commissions who have forced on every branch of business codes which are equivalent to acts of congress of which its members never dreamed.

"We may observe that the Constitution provides that 'no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.' Some of the recent acts of Congress and of the executive departments are believed by many to violate this provision, especially in reference to the acreage production and cotton control acts and the arbitrary application thereof without either owner or tenant having his day in court.

"The recent trends are definitely toward a government of men and the present government of this country is largely vested in the president, who is exercising either directly or through his appointed agents the powers heretofore exercised by the legislative and judicial branches of our government. This makes ours now a government of men and not of laws. This is, therefore, directly contrary to the basic law, the Constitution."

Irenee DuPont, eminent industrialist and member of the executive committee of the American Liberty League, recently said in a public address:

"Ten years ago no one would have believed that office holders, usurping power, would so curtail the freedom of citizens that—A farmer is not free to plant what he will. Nor free to raise such animals as he desires.

"No group of men, however, experienced in the problems of management, could be wise enough to sit in Washington and direct all phases of American activity in this fashion. It is certain that political appointees have been unable to do so, and the reaction of business, industrial and employment indices proves it.

"If the N. I. R. A. is unconstitutional, unworkable, and retarding rather than aiding recovery, then here is one question which should be examined by all citizens who believe in a democratic and representative government.

"If we continue in this trend it is not inconceivable that the November election may be the last popular election in America.

General Robert Lee Bullard, president of the National Security League, recently wrote:

"The influx of foreign peoples has been one cause for an increasing disregard for the Constiution. During fifty years this immigration has continued, including large numbers who have had no experence with real representative government and little understanding of our system.

"Also vast numbers who have a hatred of any sort of government; or of any social or economic system which recognizes differences of ability and provides rewards of merit and industry.

"Many came here determined to overthrow our government and replace it by Utopian systems of society and industry—often tried, always failing and never fitted to human nature—experiments long ago discarded by all but the most backward peoples.

"Our system sprang from the innate sense of right and justice inherent in the English speaking peoples.

"This governmental system of ours—which is suited to our national temperament, and we would not like the alternative forms of dictatorship growing up abroad—has endured. It has endured under pressure which crushed less representative and liberal forms of government.

"I am no lawyer or politician. I cannot discuss the issues now being raised from any 'expert' viewpoint. But, as a common man, as a citizen, I can look at these problems. It is, in fact, my duty—and yours."

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala. — Game Commissioner I. T. Quinn of Alabama, who is chairman of the national planning council of commercial and game fish commissioners, has announced that a national policy is being formulated by the council at the request of Frank T. Bell, Commissioner of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

The policy was submitted by Commisisoner Bell at a conference of game and fish commissioners in Montreal, Canada, early this month and adopted in principle by a unanimous vote of the officials.

As chairman of the council, Commissioner Quinn has called upon the five zone chairmen, named at the organization meeting in St. Louis last April, to take prompt steps to set the policy in motion. His letter to the chairmen stated:

"Since more than 40 state legislatures meet early in 1935, I believe it is of the highest importance that the zone chairmen in each of the five zones into which the states were divided at the St. Louis conference call a meeting of commissioners within their respective zones at an early date for the following purposes:

"1. Set up a permanent organization within your zone.

"2. Adopt specific projects as a basis for cooperation with the bureau of fisheries.

"3. Accept or reject the offer of the commissioner of the fisheries bureau to furnish a trained biologist and fish culturist for each zone to render service to the states within the respective zones to which these men are assigned.

"4. Formulate, if necessary, a zone policy by coordinating and unifying our commercial and sport fishing program.

"5. Formulate a long-time fish program through co-ordination and cooperation of activities with states within your zone.

"6. Transact such other business as you may deem necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose or purposes of your zone organization.

"7. Transmit to the national chairman a complete copy of the proceedings at your zone conference."

Ford Makes Cars Most Economical

Henry Ford manufactures close to sources of raw material supplies and assembles near points of distribution. If he did not do this, Ford V-8 cars would cost much more.

To point this simple economic truth, a huge animated relief map of the Great Lakes region is displayed at the north end of industrial hall at Ford Exposition in A Century of Progress, Chicago. The map is thirty feet square and is tilted for the best visibility.

To study this lesson in economic, World's Fair throngs surge around the map throughout seven twelve-hour days weekly. Many find the best view from the balcony above. It is one of the most popular Ford exhibits.

Canada on the north, Kentucky on the south, New York State on the east, Missouri on the west—that's the area mapped, the heart of the Ford world.

Visitors study the map as a great Ford freighter plows eastward across Lake Superior with iron or copper from Ford mines in Upper Michigan. Down the lakes, the steamer proceeds to the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company, where the raw materials move into manufacture.

Miniature railroad gondola cars, heaped with coal, move from Ford mines in Kentucky and West Virginia to the great plant at Dearborn where the raw materials from all over the world become finished automobile parts, and the interested spectator sees those finished parts moving out—from Dearborn to the Ford branch plants throughout the country for assembly into Ford V-8's

Here on a Lilliputian scale are motor highways conecting distribution points in population cents with the factory. Along these roads flow continuous streams of motor traffic. At one point, a tiny Ford V-8 passenger car overtakes a fast moving truck. A horn sounds repeatedly, until, suddenly, the truck moves over and the Ford V-8 swings by.

This little touch of human interest fascinates the World's Fair crowds. Many people linger to hear the horn and watch the Ford go by, time after time.

The singing society met some time back and elected officers for the ensuing year. They were: B. L. Cobb, president and Mrs. J. E. Corey, reporter.

Cobb, Ben Tom Haynes, Sam Collins, Lonnie Cobb, Lloyd Edwards, Ivy Matthews, Burl Martin, Mesdames J. D. Scott and J. W. Lesson for October 7

FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—John 15:1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. John 15:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus and His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Be Jesus' Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May We Be Friends of Christ?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live a Fruitful Christian Life.

Under the beautiful allegory of the vine and the branches, Jesus set forth the spiritual oneness of himself and his disciples. He showed them that though he was going away, they would be in vital touch with their unseen Lord, and that through them his life was to be manifested to the world and his purposes accomplished.

I. The Relationship of the Disciple to Jesus and the Father (vv. 1-3).

1. Jesus is the source of the disciples' life (v. 1). He is the true vine. Through the incarnation Jesus identified himself with humanity, and by virture of his atoning death and resurrection it is possible for the believer to be a partaker of his life, so that between the disciple and his Lord there is a community of life. As the vine pours its life into the branch, so Christ pours his life into the believer.

2. The discipline of the disciple is in the hands of the Father (v. 1). The "Father is the husbandman." Just as the culture of the vine is in the hands of a husbandman, so the discipline of the believer's life is in the hands of the Father. He knows exactly how deep to cut with his pruning knife, and can be absolutely trusted to cut no deeper than necessary, for he is our affectionate Father. In this disciplinary process he

a. Removes the unfruitful branch (v. 2). He does not take the trouble to prune the fruitless branch—the nominal church member; the mere professor he removes.

b. Purges the fruitful branch that it may produce more fruit (v. 2). He restrains our natural tendencies and desires in order that the virtues of the Lord, the fruit of the Spirit, may shine forth.

3. The instrument by which the discipline is accomplished is Jesus' words (v. 3). If the believer's life is to be fruitful in character and service, the pruning knife, Christ's words, must be intelligently and regularly applied.

II. The Conditions of Fruit-bearing (vv. 4-7).

The supreme and grand object in pruning the vine is fruit. God's whole design in producing the vine and making men branches thereof was to obtain fruit, more fruit, much fruit.

1. Abiding in Christ (vv. 4-6). As the branches draw sap and life from the vine, so believers must abide in Christ, from whom they derive their purity, strength, and wisdom. Indeed, it is a mutual abiding—the disciple in Christ, and Christ in the disciple. It is really Christ's life expressing itself through the believer.

2. Christ's words abiding in us (v. 7). So mighty is the power of the one who abides in Christ and in whom the words of Christ abide, that Heaven can withhold no gift from him. In fact, the one who is united to Christ by faith and prayerfully meditates upon his words will be so led by the Spirit to pray as to have success without limit (Col. 3:16).

III. The Blessed Issue of a Fruitful Life (vv. 8-16).

1. The glorification of the Father (v. 8). The Father will be glorified through much fruit-bearing (Matt. 5:16).

2. Credentials of discipleship (v. 8). The way to prove that one is a child of God is to manifest the characteristics of God in his acts and service.

3. Abiding in Christ's love and keeping his commandments (vv. 9, 10). The way to abide in Christ's love is to keep his commands.

4. Fullness of joy (v. 11). The way to have fullness of joy is to have Christ's joy in us.

5. Loving one another (vv. 12, 13). The one who abides in Christ and has the life of Christ flowing into him will love his fellow-man, especially his brother in Christ.

6. Friends of Christ (vv. 14, 15). Christ's friends do whatsoever he commands. Being thus obedient to him, we are taken into his confidence and have made known unto us the heavenly Father's will.

7. Perpetual fruit-bearing in love with power in prayer (v. 16). This enriched life becomes possible through the sovereign choice and ordination of Christ.

The Attitude of Hope

It is good and right to hope. It is the natural attitude of an immortal soul. Let us hope that some great happiness awaits us. Let us hope that past pain and sorrow may be forgotten, and that new ambitions, new goods may rise up before us with all their golden opportunities.

Dare to Venture

He who fears to venture as his heart urges and his reason permits is a coward; he who ventures further than he intended to go is a slave.—Heine.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

ALABAMA vs. SEWANEE

University, Ala.—Alabama's powerful red line will take Montgomery by storm Friday night. Coach Frank Thomas and his charges will arrive in the Alabama Capital early in the day, ready to play Sewanee in Crampton Bowl.

This will be the first time an Alabama team has ever played at night.

Sewanee will offer a light, fast eleven to do battle with the tide. Always noted for its swift, though midget teams, Sewanee is apt to give 'Bama one of its biggest 1934 scares.

Alabama and Sewanee have been playing football since 1893, when the Tigers won two games from their Southern rivals. That was the year displayed its second football team.

For the next 12 years Sewanee made merry of Alabama's weak teams and took nine of the games, dropping one and tying two. Then Alabama gardually got stronger and the score sheet recorded 13 Alabama wins during the next 16 years. There were two ties and a lone Sewanee victory during that time.

Crampton Bowl is expected to be filled Friday night. Old Alabama grads from miles around will assemble in Montgomery for the various gatherings and the game.

The crack Alabama band will accompany the team on its trip, as will a strong band of students. The party will arrive in Montgomery on a M. & O. Railroad special train at 5:15 p.m.

University, Ala.—Fraternities at the University of Alabama pledged 391 men and sororities 175 women during recent rush week activities. Plans are now beng made for the annual banquet given in honor of fraternity pledges. This affair is sponsored by the Interfraternity Council.

The Aldrich collection of mollusks in the Alabama Museum of Natural History, University of Alabama, is one of the finest in the world, according to Prof. William J. Clench, curator of mollusks and professor at Harvard University. He was a recent visitor at the University.

The University of Alabama placed 11 faculty members in the first volume of "America's Young Men," the official "Who's Who among the young men of the nation. The book is a record of the achievements of young men who have not yet reached their fortieth birthday. Among the university men was James H. Newman, Heflin, Ala., an A. B. and M. A. of the University and assistant dean of men here.

The annual fall conference of state Y. M. C. A.'s was held held at the University Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The meeting was led by Jim Hardwick, southern regional representative of the Y. M. C. A. Speakers from all of the institutions of higher learning were heard.

The appointment of Dr. P. E. Alyea, Ph.D of the University of Illinois, as instructor in economics is announced by Dean Lee Bigood of the school of Commerce and business administration. Dr. Alyea succeeds Dr. Claud Campbell, who resigned to accept an associate professorship at Maryville College.

Mr. C. J. Littlejohn of Lawley was in Clanton Monday. Mr. Littlejohn says farmers out around him are expressing considerable discontent regarding the government's handling of the cotton business.

FOREST FIRE REPORT

Montgomery, Ala.—That forest fires are becoming decidedly unpopular in Alabama is evidenced by the 14,079 citizens who turned out to fight fire without pay from the state or federal government during the first half of 1934, according to information released by the State Commission of Forestry. The forest fire is ranked by the commissioner as Alabama's public enemy No. 1. The official compilations, based upon intensive observations and research over the entire state show that approximately eight and eight-tenths per cent of the 22,500,000 acres of forest land in Alabama burned over during the first six months of 1934. Most of the damage occurred during the months of January, February and March.

During the first half of the year the proportion burned on the 10,032,663 acres of net forest land comprised within the organized districts amounted to but four per cent. However, on the 12,467,337 acres of forest land included in the unorganized territory in which the Commission of Forestry, for financial reasons, is not able to maintain agents, the percentage burned over was approximately twelve and three-tenths per cent.

The total number of fires occurring from January 1 to June 30 was 13,047. Of these lightning caused 75 fires, railroads 299, lumbering operations 541, brush burning and land clearing 5,314, camp fires 345, smokers 977, incendiaries 2,149, and miscellaneous causes were responsible for 3,347.

These folks own the Bell Telephone System

It is truthfully said of the Bell Telephone System that it is owned by the public it serves.

Of the more than 800,000 holders of Bell System securities, 381,000 are women, 210,000 of whom are housewives; 90,000 are clerks and sales people; 30,000 are manual laborers; 115,000 are telephone workers. There are other thousands of doctors, lawyers, farmers and merchants. In fact, people in every walk of life, many of whom are doubtless your neighbors and friends.

Most of these folks are small investors. Eighty per cent own twenty-five or less shares of stock, while forty per cent of the total own five shares or less. No one owns as much as one-fifth of one per cent of the outstanding stock of the Bell System.

It is this vast army of small investors whose savings have financed the telephone business. Their savings have been attracted to the telephone industry because of their faith in the integrity of the management, and their confidence in the willingness of the public to pay a price for the service that will allow earnings sufficient to assure the best possible service at all times and to insure the continued financial stability of the business.

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

DIG SWEET POTATOES BEFORE FIRST FROST

Auburn, Ala.—Julian Brown, extension horticulturist, advises farmers to use the greatest of care in curing and storing their sweet potatoes.

Essentials of successful storage are given by Mr. Brown as follows: (1) Well matured before digging; (2) carefully handled; (3) well dried or cured shortly after digging; and (4) kept at uniform temperature after they are cured.

Although potatoes keep best if matured, regardless of this condition, they be dug before the first frost, Brown advises.

FARMERS WARNED ABOUT SEED

The Department of Agriculture has issued a warning to all Alabama farmers "not to accept grain for seed not properly tagged."

"We further advise that this department be notified of any dealers or shippers failing to comply with the requirements of the Alabama seed law in offering grains for seed purposes and which are not in compliance with the seed law" writes Seth P. Storrs, State Commissioner of Agriculture. The full letter reads:

"There are shippers in certain sections of the country who have stated that they are not willing to properly tag their grains which are to be used for seed to comply with the Alabama Seed Law but that they expect to sell grains to the dealers expecting them to be resold for seed purposes.

"We are writing this letter to advise you that it is necessary for grain sold for seed purposes to be labeled with an analysis complying with the Alabama Seed Law. The percentage of purity, germination and weeds, the name and number of noxious weeds per pound of pure grain, the name and variety and weight per bushel of the grain, the date of germination test was made and the name and address of the shipper should be on the tag.

"This Department advises that you do not accept grain for seed not properly tagged as listed above. We further request that this department be notified of any dealers or shippers failing to comply with the requirements of the Alabama Seed Law in offering feed grains for seed purposes and which are not in compliance with the seed law."

NO CONTROL MEANS 18,000,000 BALES NOW

Auburn, Ala. — Southern farmers will produce 18,000,000 bales of cotton in 1935 if control is abandoned and the weather condition is average, predicts Senator John H. Bankhead.

"It seems unthinkable to me that our cotton farmers would want to go back to the prices of 1931-32," he writes.

Senator Bankhead also states that "if it is ascertained and procalimed that the emergency in marketing cotton has ceased to exist there would be no justification of the continuance of 12 cent cotton loans."

STATE FARM FAMILIES REMOVED FROM RELIEF

Auburn, Ala. — Nearly 25,000 Alafarm families were on October 1 removed from direct relief and placed on rural rehabilitation. This is announced by Thad Holt, director of relief, who has also ordered that able bodied persons be dropped from relief if they decline to accept private jobs available for them.

The order is construed to apply particularly to that class of people to whom seasonal farm work is available, and follows reports that cotton farmers were having difficulty in obtaining sufficient labor to harvest their crops.

ALABAMA SHOULD GROW MORE WHEAT

Auburn, Ala.—Interest in wheat is increasing in Alabama, with indications that the old binders and thrashers will stage a "comeback" in the state. This is reported by J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist of Auburn, who says farmers should plant more wheat for home use and for poultry feed. "This is especially true in North Alabama," he said.

Mr. Lowery advises the planting of 4 to 6 pecks of the Alabama bluestem variety per acre during October or about the time for grownig fall oats. He said that if a farmer did not find time to plan wheat during oat sowing time that it will stand a little later planting. He also said that farmers will profit by using 200 to 300 pounds per acre of superphosphate, or an equivalent in basic slag. In the spring the wheat should be top-dressed with about 100 pounds of nitrate.

SAVE PLANTING SEED

The first step in a feed production program for the farm in 1935 is saving plenty of planting seed of such crops as cowpeas, soybeans, velvet beans, peanuts, and lespedeza. Prices of seed of feed crops will likely be high next season because of drought in certain sections. Saving ample seed this fall will insure that feed crops can be planted next spring and that neither case nor credit for seeds will be needed. Furthermore, by using home-grows seed the danger of using the wrong variety is avoided. Many farmers in Alabama lose considerable money each year in buying seeds, especially soybeans and sorghum, which prove to be undesirable varieties. Too much money is sent out of the state each year for seeds. Why spend money in other states for things that can be saved at home? Protect yourself against high-priced seed, bad varieties, seed bills and a feed shortage in 1935 by saving sufficient planting seed for your farm.

HARVESTING CROTALARIA SEED

Farmers who are growing a small area of crotalaria for observation and for seed are anxious to know how to harvest the seed. Most farmers are trying the early strain of spectabilis. Harvesting the seed will have to be done by hand since harvesting machinery is not available at present.

When crotalaria seed are ready to be harvested, some of the bottom pods may pop while some of the pods may still be green. The heads may be stripped by hand and the pods dropped into sacks. Put the sacks of pods in the sun for several days to dry thoroughly. The seed may then be tramped out in the sacks and the trash removed. In case of rank growth and big seed heads it is sometimes the practice to cut off the heads with either a sharp knife or pruning shears. Several growers who cut off the seed heads, strip the pods by jerking the heads throug sixty-penny spikes arranged about 3-8 inch apart in a semi-circle. The sacks of pods should not be left in stacks when first harvested but should be kept in the sun as much as possible to cure out thoroughly and to prevent decay. Crotalaria seed, especially the early strain of spectabilis, should be saved where possible.

The real value of crotalaria has not yet been determined, but it is a promising summer legume for soil-building purposes.—J. W. Fant.

Rev. R. M. Honeycutt, of Jemison, former Probate Judge of Chilton County, was a visitor in Clanton on Monday.

TEMPORARY PASTURES

Temporary grazing during winter months is of considerable value on most farms. Grazing crops occupying the land during the winter also afford a certain amount of erosion control.

Rye and oats appear to be the most desirable crops for winter grazing. Plant the abruzzi variety of rye at the rate of 1 bushel per acre or oats at the rate of 2 bushels per acre. These crops may be drilled in cotton or corn middles or sown broadcast and covered by plowing or disking. If planted in the early fall, oats and rye will usually be ready for grazing by the latter part of December. If the winter is not very severe these crops will furnish considerable grazing during January, February, March and April.

Top dressing with nitrogenous fertilizers will increase the grazing. Every farm should plant a few acres of enther rye or oats for grazing.

Italian rye sown on soil of permanent pasture will furnish considerable grazing for all kinds of livestock and poultry in middle and south Alabama. It is not so promising for the northern half of the state. Sow 25 pounds per acre on the sod in September. No preperation is necessary. An application of nitrate soon after it comes up should be made for maximum grazing.

SAVE SOYBEAN SEED

The farmer who saves plenty of soybean seed for planting purposes will not have to spend money or go in debt for high priced seed next spring. He will not have to run the risk of being sold the wrong variety. Each year much money goes out of Alabama for soybean seed which could be produced in the state. Varieties of soybeans which shatter the seed badly should be cut when the pods are turning, dried in windows, or on hay racks until dry enough to thresh.

Soybeans may be threshed with a grain thresher if the speed of the cylinder is reduced without reducing the speed of the fan, and if the concaves are removed to prevent plitting of the seed. A threshing machine is not needed, however, on farms where only a few bushels of seed are needed, on a two-horse farm for instance, the seed can be beaten out with sticks.

Varieties which do not shatter badly, such as Otootan, may be left in the field until the leaves are shed and the seed dry enough to thresh before being harvested. In Alabama, a large percentage of Otootan seed harvested is from soybeans interplanted with corn. The vines are either pulled up or cut with hoes after all leaves are shed and are beaten over the edge of a wagon bed to get out as much seed as possible, after which the plants are dropped on the land.

Many farmers are saving not only sufficient Otootan seed for the farm, but have a few bushels of seed to sell in late winter or early spring.

Play safe by saving sufficient soybean seed to plant next year's hay crop.—J. W. Fant.

CORN-HOG PRODUCERS ASKED TWO QUESTIONS

To determine whether or not they want the corn-hog program continued, farmers are being asked these two questions:

Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935?

Do you favor a one-contract-per-farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936?

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Eastaboga, Ala.—Taking up where the civil works administration left off, a large crowd of emergency relief Administration workmen are engaged in making additional improvements at the state's fish hatchery near here.

The work is being superintended by G. H. Black, sueprintendent of the hatchery, and at the present includes cleaning out of the hatchery spring, building a pond at the spring and construction of a concrete house to shield the spring.

The workmen, ranging in number from 40 to 70 a day, also are laying the pipe that feeds the hatchery ponds up to the concrete house in order to cut off all possible sources of water contamination.

This work has been in progress about a month and after the spring project has been completed it is the plan of the state game and fisheries department to continue enlarging the hatchery. Excavations were started by the CWA but were only about 30 per cent complete when work was halted.

As approximately 22,000 cubic yards of earth yet remain to be removed it is expected that the ERA will go ahead with the uncompleted projects of the CWA, enlarging present ponds and building additional ones.

All who has canned fruit for New Salem church, please bring it to the church not later than the first Sunday in October.—Mrs. J. O. Smith.

TREE PLANTING

Nearly everybody likes trees. But the orchardist's interest in trees is a very material one, for from trees—fruit trees or nut trees—come his livelihood and profits.

The establishing of an orchard involves a considerable investment. The planting of an orchard requires a lot of hard, laborious work. That is, it did before a California orchardist got the idea that digging might be an unnecessary task, if the holes could be blasted with dynamite. He tries it. The results were most gratifying, not alone from the standpoint of avoiding hard labor, but also because the growth of the trees was accelerated. That means crops from younger trees. In short, by using dynamite, this orchardist made a very profitable investment, not to mention the decreased costs of planting. Incidentally, it is now an accepted principle among orchardists that the way to profit lies in the direction of reducing the costs of production.

The chief advantage offered by the blasting method for tree planting comes from the fact that the explosion of a charge of dynamite in compact subsoil shatters the soil for a considerable depth and diameter. As a result, the delicate fibrous roots can extend to wider and deeper areas. Thus, the roots can draw upon a larger store of plant food and moisture than would be available in the restricted feeding ground provided when a tree is planted in a hole dug with a spade.

It is important that the right kind of dynamite is used. Since the object of the blasting is to shatter the tight subsoil, but not throw it out, the explosive should be one which will exert a relatively slow, heaving motion. A so-called agricultural dynamite is excellent for making tree holes.

Generally speaking, the proper time to blast soil preparatory to planting trees is in the latter part of August or early in September. The subsoil is then likely to be at its driest and the explosions of dynamite will result in the required shattering effect.

A good practice—one followed in northern sections—is to blast the soil in the late summer or early fall, dig holes and leave them exposed to sun and air until the following spring.

This sort of blasting is simple. The nature and depth of the subsoil determines the depth of the holes and the quantity of dynamite necessary. Usually, one cartridge—1¼x8 inches—is sufficient, but where heavy hardpan is encountered or the charges are to be placed more than forty inches deep, larger charges are necessary.

A punch bar, made for the purpose, or even a crowbar, is used for making the holes.

Ordinarily, the dynamite cartridges are primed with a blasting cap and fuse, though the "shooting" may be done electrically, with an electric blasting cap and a blasting machine.

The holes should be well tamped with earth.

Care should be exercised by using a fuse sufficiently long to permit the blaster to take a safe distance after lighting the fuse in order to be out of range of flying bits of stone or pebbles. The same advice holds good in the case of electric blasting; that is, the leading wires from the blasting machine should be long enough for the blaster to get a sufficient distance away from the blast.

Aside from the labor saving, the orchardist who uses dynamite for planting his trees is almost certain to get earlier and better crops of fruits.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

David Kills Goliath.—The armies of the Philistines were gathered together, and Saul and his men prepared to battle against them. The two armies were camped opposite one another. "And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span."—I Sam. 17: 4. "And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, 'Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants and serve us.'"—I Sam. 17: 8-9. David accepted the challenge of Goliath. "And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth."—I Sam. 17: 49. This illustration by Merian was engraved in 1625.

BIRMINGHAM POST IS FORGING AHEAD

The Birmingham Post has established an enviable record in the annals of Southern newspaperdom. This Scripps-Howard newspaper, established thirteen years ago, now has the second largest circulation in the State of Alabama and is known as the most thouroughly read daily in the field.

This record-breaking progress is due solely to the vigor, fearlessness and independence of its editorial policies, the outstanding quality of its features and its presentation of the news.

Independent thought and action always engender respect if not unanimous agreement. Thus it is that the Post has invariably won the strong approval and high regard of intelligence wherever found.

Its editorial independence is the foundation of its remarkable success. Its financial independence is a guarantee against outside influence, it has no axes to grind, no special interests to serve. To its editors "the sacred cows" of business are just so much beef on the hoof. The result is readability and believability.

With the addition during the year of many strong feature writers, an increase in news content of 20,000 words a day and an expanded program of news pictures, it is now a greater newspaper than ever before.

HOME COMING AT MT. SPRINGS

The public is cordially invited to attend and bring well filled baskets which will be served picnic style. The program will be announced later, which will be held on Sunday, October 21, 1934.

We are proud of our Sunday school at this place. We had a very nice attendance Sunday. All teachers and officers were present. We were very glad to have our teacher of the Bible class, Mr. Johnnie Plier, who has been ill for some time.

We were also glad to have with us Rev. and Mrs. Nelson.

The Christian Endeavor Society was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Williamson. Games were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Teel. About 50 were present, including visitors.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of thanking the people of this community and elsewhere for the help, kindness and sympathy shown us during the short illness and death of our beloved husband and father, Mr. N. G. Carrol, who died September 17th. We also want to thank Dr. N. S. Johnson, Brother J. D. Hughes, Brother J. W. Hightower and Brother A. C. Nelson for their comforting words and assistance, and also Mr. Cope of the Spigener Funeral Home. May God's richest blessings rest upon each and everyone that extended a helping hand.—Mrs. N. G. Carroll and Children.

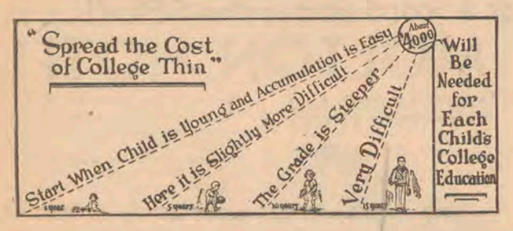
Use Life Insurance to Pay the College Bills

Some day son or daughter will say, "I am ready. I have graduated with honors from high school." . . and you will face the problem of college bills.



Ask this question:

"Would it be easier for me to pay five or six percent interest on four thousand dollars during the next fifteen years, or to pay four thousand dollars cash in four years?"

Under the Life Insurance plan the cost is spread so thin that a payment of only five or six percent annually upon the sum needed is all that is required to accumulate a college fund—providing you do not wait too long to begin.

A Life Insurance company will contract to complete the college fund whether or not father is alive when the great day comes.

Four thousand dollars cash for each child in the space of four short years—or five or six percent on that sum if the start is made now.

Which plan is easier, safer, better?

1,500 BALE ALLOTMENT EXPECTED FOR THE 1934 COTTON GROWERS

County Agent J. W. Fant, announced this week that he is reasonably certain that Chilton County will soon receive an allotment of 1,500 bales of cotton, which will go to the benefit of those farmers who grew cotton in 1934, but had no cotton history prior to this year, since 1927.

According to Mr. Fant, the three classes of farmers who will be permitted to share in this allotment are as follows:

(1) Farmers who grew cotton this year, but grew no cotton between 1927 and this year. (2) Farmers who had less than one-third of their cultivated acreage in cotton over the past five-year period. (3) Farmers who had less than five acres in cotton this year, regardless of past cotton history.

The county agent expresses assurance that the expected allotment of 1,500 bales for this county will be ample to take care of those farmers of the county who fall within the above classifications.

U. S. CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE

The first census of agriculture in the United States was taken by the federal government in 1840. The last census of agriculture was taken in 1930. The number of farms reported in 1930 was 6,288,648. The next census of agriculture will be taken in 1935. The law now provides that a census of agriculture be taken every five years.

The census of agriculture in 1935 will include the name and address of the farm operator; farm tenure; farm acreage, which includes all crop land, all pasture land, and all farm woodland; the total value of the farm, the acreage and yield of the principal field crops and vegetables; the total number of trees and the yield of each of the principal fruits; the number and vale of each class of livestock; poultry and eggs; and farm population.

In order to secure complete and accurate reports from each individual farm operator in the United States, it will be necessary for every farmer and all agricultural agencies to cooperate with the federal government in this census. Never before has a census of agriculture been of greater importance. The individual farm operator's report is a confidential government report. If you should like to have in advance of the enumeration a sample copy of the general farm schedule or questionaire, write to the Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C.

MOSQUITO CONTROL

Attention is called to the fact that the mosquito control is becoming more important due to the fact of so many more cases of dengue fever having been reported in various sections of the state. Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer, states that 200 cases of dengue fever have been reported in Lanett, Alabama, in Chambers County.

Mr. McKinney wishes to call attention particularly to the inspection of concrete fish ponds or concrete lily ponds. There are several such breeding places for this species of mosquito. He also wishes to stress the fact that the Ardis Egypti species or the dengue fever mosquito only breeds in places where water is not in contact with the soil, and unlike his brother, the swamp mosquito, he does not sing, bites day and night.

Mr. McKinney is again asking the people in towns adjoining Clanton that do not have mosquito inspections to please look around their premises for tin cans, old automobile tires and any receptacle that will hold water to see that there are no mosquitoes breeding there, and by full cooperation from all, he hopes to keep dengue fever out of Chilton County.

Mr. McKinney reports that Thorsby, Jemison and Maplesville are cooperating with this work, having put trucks to work hauling away old tin cans and buckets, etc. In general, having days on which to conduct a clean-up campaign, which is very beneficial to the town in many ways.

Let's advertise our towns in Chilton County as a place without mosquitoes, where dengue fever cannot gain a foothold. — G. D. McKinney, Supervisor of Project for Chilton County.

INJURED MAN IS FOUND ON R. R.

Unsolved Mystery As To How Joe Reynolds Was Hurt Saturday Night

Joe Reynolds, age 23, a young man who lives at the Cotton Mill, in Clanton, was found unconscious with a severe wound on the head, his body prostrate beside the railroad tracks early last Sunday morning. Three boys passing over the bridge on Fourth Avenue, observed the body lying by the railway tracks in the cut just south of the bridge.

Officer J. A. Nivens was notified and went to the scene. He found the man was still alive, but unconscious. A severe wound was on his head, indicating that he had received a blow with a heavy instrument that fractured the skull.

Reynolds was carried to Central Alabama Hospital, where he was given medical and surgical attention. At this writing he remains unconscious, and hospital authorities have little hope that he will recover.

City and county officers have been making every effort to solve the mystery of how the young man met his fate, but so far no clue has been reached. Bernice Barnes, the man last seen with Reynolds about 10:30 Saturday night, has been arrested on a warrant sworn out by relatives of Reynolds, and is being held in jail. Officers say circumstances and the bits of vague information they have been able to piece together indicates that Reynolds suffered the assault somewhere about midnight Saturday.

When found the injured man's pockets were turned inside out, and a knife was near his body. His relatives say the knife belonged to Reynolds. In the opinion of Sheriff Gillespie, if Reynolds should die without gaining consciousness, the mystery of his injury and death will never be solved.

COTTON YIELD PLACED HIGHER IN NEW REPORT

Montgomery cotton prices advanced approximately 20 points — $1.00 per bale—during the early hours of trading Monday following the government cotton estimate which fixed the probable crop at 9,443,000 bales, a smaller increase over last month's estimate than had been anticipated by traders.

Middling opened at 12.15 cents a pound here and advanced to 12.35 only to react about 10 points at noon where the market held at 12.25.

The advance was also felt in the New Orleans market where a rise of $1.00 was also registered.

MRS. ELLA MAE ELLISON

Mrs. Ella Mae Ellison, age 40 years, wife of A. T. Ellison, died Wednesday, October 3, at her home in Mt. Zion community. Burial was at the Mullins cemetery last Thursday, with Martin in charge.

Mrs. Ellison was a daughter of Walter Mink, and is survived by her husband.

Fiddlers Going To Veterans Hospital

Selection Made At Convention Here Last Saturday Night

A fine response of fiddlers, musicians, and listeners came out to the musical program of the Legion Auxiliary at the courthouse last Saturday night.

For about two hours the crowd was most interestingly entertained by many selections of old time music by some of the best musicians of the county.

Doctor Robinson, Tug Willis and W. J. Best constituted the board of judges to select a group of musicians to be carried by the Legion Auxiliary to the veterans hospital at Tuscaloosa to put on a program for the sick veterans of the World War.

After hearing all the numbers presented the judges made the following selection to go to the veterans hospital:

Stealey Jones, fiddler; Allen Smith, buck dancer; Orville Wright, fiddler; Lexie Mims, fiddler; Charley Eiland, fiddler; Odis Ellison, yodeler. Together with the above three will be a number of accompanists with guitars, mandolins and other instruments. Selection of these accompanists will be made and announced by the musicians between now and October 26th when the crowd will go to Tuscaloosa.

Following is the complete list of the entertainers who took part on the program Saturday night. We regret that the list of their accompanists was not furnished us.

G. O. P. OPENS ATTACK ON THE ROOSEVELT POLICY IN APPEAL

Washington, Oct. 8.—The congressional campaign was enlivened Monday by statements from rival camps in which Republicans manifested optimism over prospective results of the November elections.

Representative Hamilton Fish, (R.) New York, said:

"The Republican party has greater hopes of a real comeback in the November elections than ever before in its 'out of office' history."

The Republican senatorial congressional committee in a statement asserted:

"President Roosevelt repudiated the pledge he made to the American congress and the American people in his budget message . . . From that time (January 6, 1934) until this, there has been no attempt to check the wild extravagance of the 3 bureaus ladling out the public's money."

Birthday Event At The Leader

Fifteenth Anniversary Sale By Popular Dry Goods Stroe This Week

The Leader, popular with the people of Chilton County as just what it's name implies, is this week celebrating its birthday with the greatest anniversary sale in the history of the store.

Mr. M. Lande and Mrs. Lande, looking back over the years they have labored here to serve their thousands of friends and customers, have taken this occasion to express in impressive words something of their feelings toward those who have remained loyal to them.

Mere words are not alone the means whereby they express their obligations. In a very definite manner that will receive a hearty response, no doubt, they will express their appreciation by offering their customers a list of values and bargains in merchandise unexcelled by any opportunity of the kind ever presented.

Thousands of pieces of advertising matter have been sent out heralding this great anniversary birthday event of The Leader. One of these pieces have gone to every mail box in Chilton County. It bears tidings of great bargains at the wonderful sale which starts Friday morning, October 12.

The growth of The Leader has been steady and constant from the very day Mr. and Mrs. Lande came here fifteen years ago. Today the sotre is bigger and better than ever. During the past summer the building was enlarged and better facilities added in all departments.

The Union-Banner joins with the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Lande in extending hearty congratulations on this birthday occasion of The Leader.

HOUSTON E. RAY DIED SUNDAY

Houston E. Ray, age 28 years, died last Sunday at the home of his father, M. D. Ray, about three miles west of Jemison. Burial was at Pates Chapel Monday, with Martin in charge.

Death was caused from complications of a head injury which Mr. Ray received in 1928 or 1929 while serving with the United States Army on the Mexican border.

For many months he was in the army hospital at Fort Sam Houston, from which he was discharged in April, 1930. Later he went to a hospital in Indiana for a long time.

SINGING AT PROVIDENCE NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

There will be singing at Providence, Beat 16, next Sunday afternoon, October 14th, beginning at 2 o'clock. A. H. and E. L. Glasscock of Jemison have promised to attend. An invitation is extended all singers of the county to lend their help. Both the Henson and Stamps books will be used. Everybody invited.—R. M. Robinson.

COUNTY SINGERS HOLD REGULAR SESSION HERE

Probably the largest and best singing ever held in Chilton County was at the courthouse in Clanton last Sunday. The weather was ideal and all other conditions were favorable.

The chairman, Prof. O. L. Devaughn, of Maple Springs, had the proceedings of the day in charge and carried things out in a very masterful and satisfactory manner. Singers were present from various parts of the state, both prominent quartets and directors. The Cobb sisters of Birmingham, the Ward Quartet (Ladies) from Bibb County, Shaw Sisters from Brookside, a duet from Montevallo, and Dr. Pepper Quartet from Birmingham presented most of the specials for the day. It is safe to say that about all of the singing talent of Chilton County was either present or close around—nothing like all could find even standing room in the auditorium.

Along toward the middle of the afternoon the question of electing officers was called for by the chairman. In the course of only a few minutes the same officers were re-elected to serve another year. The chairman also announced that the spring session of the convention next year would be held the fourth Sunday in April, the place to be announced later.

Georgia Democrats Fire On New Deal

Yes, the honeymoon for President Roosevelt and the New Deal is really over. They have been given a fair chance to do something for the country, but they haven't accomplished results satisfactory to the people of the country.

Even the Democratic party in the rock-ribbed state of Georgia, have registered their disapproval of the New Deal policies. At their state convention held in Macon last Thursday, the party adopted a vigorous platform saying:

"We feel and believe the period of experimentation in national governmental affairs should be brought to a speedy termination; that the affairs of our national government, in the best interest of all our people, should have its policies directed toward a more definite and clearly defined purpose.

"We condemn any policy of government which dominates and competes with private business. We believe the control of business by governmental bureaus acting in managerial capacities should be brought to an end.

"Under the conviction that government by the people and for the people is sound and that special privileges to any classes or groups is unsound and unsafe, we assert in the name of our party in Georgia the conviction that a renewed faith in the original purposes of the party of Jefferson and the safety vouchsafed in the Constitution of the United States and of the several states is of paramount importance; therefore, we disapprove of the growing tendency toward diverting the original purposes of these documents to fit occasions of the moment. We believe in the safety of wisdom from experience rather than hope from untried experiments under the control of governmental bureaus.

"We are of the firm conviction that practices of rigid economy in the national government should be applied as vigorously and as wisely as they have in our own state of Georgia to the end that such economies shall bring about an equal relief to the people of our nation; therefore, the Democrats of Georgia, speaking through their state convention, are of the opinion that an early—if possible an immedate—cessation of the orgy of money-spending should be effected."

Delivering the keynote speech of the convention, Shelby Myrick, able and respected Savannah lawyer, earlier in the day had evoked thunderous applause from the convention when he declared:

"To those who claim that there should be no criticism of the policies of the national administration unless at the same time there is a suggestion of something better, may it be said that many Democrats of nation-wide reputations are advising the revision of NRA, the balancing of the budget, the stabilization of the currency, the cessation of governmental competition with private business, curtailment of the orgy of money-spending, lowering of taxes in general and the processing taxes on farm products in particular, and, above all, the concentration of the government's energies on reviving and extending this country's heretofore tremendous but now almost non-existent foreign trade.

"I do not feel that I could be said to be guilty of lese-majeste by reason of the remarks I have just made. I believe I am voicing in Georgia today what other loyal Democrats in the nation are thinking and whose thoughts, if not already proclaimed, soon will be transformed into words and action."

The convention voted to unseat the Rooseveltian National Committeeman for the State of Georgia, of course, their voice in this matter was not effective because that was beyond their jurisdiction.

W. A. Reynolds Favors Republicans

Editor Union-Banner:

May I have space in your paper to express a few thoughts pertaining to the future of our county. It has been several weeks since we had our primary election and many people have expressed themselves pro and con as to what the outcome would be this fall.

To begin with I would say that I have helped to nominate and elect Republicans for over thirty years. In some instances in the past I have felt like I could have cast my vote to a better advantage but as a whole I feel proud of the choices I have made. I will have to be frank and admit that I was disappointed in some of the nominations that was made in our party. But this is a give and take proposition and we must remember that in every election there is a great number who fail to get the one they voted for.

We have been passing through the greatest revolution of thought and opinion that the world has ever known. There is no business of any kind that is traveling on a sound basis. I have interrogated a great number of the business men in our state and I find them destitute of an opinion of the future as much so as the most humble citizen. In my opinion, probably, the vote that you cast this fall would carry with it the greatest responsibility of any vote that you have ever cast. So it will behoove us to exercise our best thought and judgment without prejudice in making our selection. In order to make myself clear I feel like I ought to go into the history of our two parties in a limited way.

In 1913, when Woodrow Wilson was elected president of the United States, our national debt was very small and at the end of his administration, and after the war, our indebtedness was 26½ billion dollars. When Mr. Harding was elected president and Mr. Coolidge followed with eight years of service, he reduced the national debt to fifteen and one-half billion dollars. When Mr. Hoover was elected we maintained this condition, although we were going through the greatest panic that the world has ever known. When Mr. Roosevelt was elected the same condition prevailed and he immediately began to borrow money and place our nation further in debt, until it is estimated we will owe about thirty-two and one-half billion dollars at the end of the year. Now, everyone knows as an individual or a nation that we are not going to make ourselves better off in the future by going more and more into debt. It has been stated by the best authorities that one of the main causes of this depression was due to the fact that individuals in the nation were burdened with debts and the day of liquidation was at hand. Now if this fifteen billion dollar indebteness was causing all of this trouble, I want to ask you what in the world will become of our children and grandchildren when this thirty-two and one-half billion dollars will have to be paid?

In 1919, Alabama's state debt was nine million dollars and this has increased from year to year until now it is said that we owe around eighty-five million dollars. Remember this was a Democratic administration.

Now back to our county. There are sixty-seven counties in our state and it is said, from a financial standpoint, that our county stands next to the top. This was accomplished by the wise administration of the Republican party. You older ones will remember the Democrats came in charge of this county twenty-four years ago, and at the end of their administration left us with a debt or of two hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars, and some of it is still hanging over us now.

From the facts stated in reference to the two parties it seems that it has been the policy of the Republican party to be conservative, to protect the life and liberty of the individuals and guard their constitutional right and have free speech, free action and free htought. It seems it has been the policy of the Democratic party to make more debts, more taxes, and restrict the rights and privileges of our citizens. I will have you to bear in mind the only way that the debts of the nation can be paid is by taxation, and I feel like this burden is as heavy as we can bear.

By reason of the foregoing pertaining to the national and state affairs, including our own local county affairs, I reach the conclusion that the only manner in which the Republicans of Chilton County have to properly express their political convictions effectively is to do so by going to the election on November 6 and voting for the full Republican ticket in Chilton County. The obligation of Republicans to support the principles of the party in its broadest application in our county, state, and nation certainly, in my opinion is more important than any of our local political differences. — Yours for future sucess of our party.—W. A. Reynolds.

FARMER WANTS TO HIRE SOME PRIVATE SECRETARIES

I need two or three private secretaries and one good car driver. All that these employees will have to do is to sign papers, keep them on file, meet agents at different points in the county for instructions, and keep up with the Bankhead Act, and assist in various other ways toward getting a bale of cotton on the market grown on my reduced acreage.

If said helpers will work as I do, without pay, we might get money enough out of said bale of cotton to pay the marketing expense.—A thoroughly harassed farmer, E. H. Littlejohn, Lawley, Ala.

Don't fail to help the Circle by catering to the Cooke Players all the week beginning Monday, October 22.

THREE KILLED AT R. R. CROSSING

Horrible Accident Near Jemison On Thursday of Last Week

Loyce (Rip) Northcutt, age 21, Bobby John Northcutt, age 3, and Eleanor Louise Northcutt, age 14 months, were killed instantly in a horrible accident about 6:30 o'clock last Thursday morning, when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by the Pan American, fastest passenger train that runs on the L. & N. Railroad. The accident occurred at the Kalona crossing about two miles north of Jemison, near Oak Grove church.

Loyce Northcutt was a son of Mr. W. J. Northcutt. Bobby John and Eleanor were children of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Northcutt. Lonnie is a brother of Loyce.

The following story of the tragedy is related by the mother of the two dead children, who was the only witness:

Loyce Northcutt was coming to Clanton in a Model T Ford car. It would not crank. It had to be pushed down a hill. Bobby John, age 3, was in the car with Loyce. Mrs. Lonnie Northcutt had the baby, Eleanor Louise, in her arms. She put the baby in the car with Bobby John. Loyce and the mother of the children pushed the car until it would roll down the hill. When it got under way Loyce jumped in. The motor started, and when the car crossed the railroad tracks it was hit by the fast-moving passenger train going north. The mother of the children witnessed the horrible catastrophe.

Reports say that the car was completely demolished. The bodies of Loyce and the baby were hurled several yards. When the train came to a stop half a mile up the tracks the body of Bobby John was found on the front guard of the engine.

When the train stopped and the crew saw what had happened they notified Mell Martin in Clanton, who carried an ambulance to the scene and brought the bodies to Clanton, later preparing them for burial.

Joint funeral services for all three of the victims were held at Oak Grove Saturday, conducted by Rev. Green of Jemison. Burial was in charge of Mell Martin. The three bodies were laid side by side in the same grave.

"Rip" Northcutt was a member of the Oak Grove Quartet, a group of widely known singers. Music at the funeral was furnished by the three other members of the quartet.

It is said that the purpose of the young man in coming to Clanton on Thursday was to secure a marriage license, and plans were made for his wedding Thursday night to Miss Loy Mae Glass, sister of the mother of the dead children.

The families of Northcutt and Glass are among the most widely known and universally beloved people of North Chilton. The terrible tragedy that blotted out the lives of these three people so ruthlessly cast a deep shadow of sorrow over the hearts of a vast number of friends and relatives.

Culp Gives Last Notice Of Taxes

Delinquents Must Be Advertised Next Week For Sale

Please allow me space to make this final statement to the delinquent tax payers for 1933 tax. I have kept this matter constantly before you through the newspapers and otherwise for several months and this tax is more than 12 months past due, and the time has come when I am forced to make these collections.

It has been a pleasure to me and as I believe you know, a policy of mine, since I have been serving you as tax collector, to give to you every opportunity at my command to make your taxes as easy to pay as possible, and if it was in my power to grant you more time, I would gladly do so. But since my duties are fixed by statute, I have come to the end of my ability to help you further, and on Thursday, October 18th, every piece of property on which the 1933 tax has not been paid will go to the newspaper, advertising same for sale.

I am sorry that I am unable to help you further in this matter, but as I stated in my former letter, my powers to grant further extension is exhausted, and I am now pursuing the course which the law forces me to pursue.

I am hoping that as many of you as can will take advantage of the few days left and make your settlement as I have no desire to put extra costs on you, but as I have already said, I have done all I can do for you.

When I can serve you, call on me.—Yours very truly, W. G. Culp, Tax Collector, Chilton County.

Mrs. James Wade, Mrs. John Durwood Mullins, Mrs. Doub Huddleston and Miss Mary Gilbert of Valdosta, Ga., motored to Birmingham Monday and spent the day.

Favors Hughes For Co. Sheriff

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space in your paper to again speak to the Republicans of Chilton County.

My friends, the time is now fast approaching when we must choose the officers who are to serve us the next four and six years. As slightly as some may take it, this is a very serious matter. It should interest and vitally concern every man and woman in the county.

I am sorry to see some dissatisfaction among our ranks. This happens more or less in every election, but this time it seems a bit more than usual; however, I believe the people of this county are intelligent enough to vote for their best interest by staying with the Republican Party which has proved its value to us heretofore.

The Republicans will elect the county officers in November and we have gone into a legal primary and nominated as good and as clean a ticket as has ever been nominated in this county. Why should there be any dissatisfaction?

I understand some are fighting our nominee for sheriff. My friends, I am unable to see any just cause why any Republican should refuse to vote for Mr. Hughes. He is a fine young man who is striving to make his mark in life. He is a young man who is clean, a staunch Republican and one on whom we can depend. He is a man whom I am persuaded to believe no man can bring an accusation against.

Again, Mr. Hughes entered into a legal primary with two other fine men and as I remember, received more votes than both the others. Men who live near him and come in daily contact with him, both Republicans and Democrats, speak well of him. Mr. Hughes comes from a section of the county that seldom has a representative as an official. He is from one of the best families of the county. He is cool, level headed, and a man of good sound judgment. Let me ask again, Republicans, where is your excuse for turning him down?

May I warn you to think seriously before you turn a friend like Mr. Hughes down and go to your political enemy's camp for a substitute. What can you promise yourself, your party or your county?

The Republicans are in a good majority in this county. We have homes, wives, children and property to be protected. Shall we trust this protection to our friend or shall we call on our enemy to protect us?

My friends, this is a serious matter, let us ponder it well before we leap.

If we will do what our better judgment tells us to do we will go to the polls on November 6th, and elect Mr. Hughes Sheriff of this county, along with the rest of the Republican ticket, with one of the biggest majorities we have ever had.

Yours for the success of the Republican party and our county.—A. M. Devauhn, Clanton, Ala., Route 3, Oct. 8, 1934.

VERMONT SCHOOL

The Vermont Jr. High School opened for the 1934-35 session on October 2, with an opening day enrollment of one hundred twenty-one students. A large group of enthusiastic parents were present for the informal opening exercises. Several presented encouraging remarks relative to school activities for the forthcoming term.

Our Parent-Teachers Association meets on next Thursday night, October 11. All members and friends are cordially requested to attend, as the feature part of this meeting will be to elect new officers for the ensuing year. Many worth-while additions were made to our school last year by the P.-T. A. organization, all of which the school and community are deeply grateful. We feel that through effective cooperation and a well-directed leadership that this year's accomplishments will equal, if not exceed those of last year. We have first installed a good lighting system for our auditorium and have now focused our efforts upon placing durable shades in all the classrooms. This latter project is one of deep concern to the progress and welfare of the child, so we insist that all parents give this move a generous response by adding their bit to its final completion.

Our principal, aided by a number of interested patrons, went before the Commissioners Court of Chilton County during their last session and presented a plea for assistance regarding our school desk obligation, and we are proud to announce that their efforts were fruitful. We take this opportunity to record our appreciation for their timely donation.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Johnson, principal and elementary teacher of our school, attended the funeral services last Saturday of his good friend, "Rip" Northcutt, of Oak Grove community.

Those students within compulsory age limits and living within this school district, who have withheld enrollment for no reasonable cause, are requested to enroll at once, or their names must be submitted to the attendance officer, as required by the Alabama School Code.

The girls and boys athletic clubs have met and arranged their course to follow in carrying out their athletic activities for the school year. The ball courts are being prepared by cleaning off courts, erecting goals, etc.

The school does not yet have a convenient water supply. Those parents who are due to place wood for fuel upon the grounds and have not yet taken care of this matter, has caused us to have to depend upon some outside source for water. This condition is wholly unsatisfactory, very unsanitary and most inconvenient. We appeal to those who have not yet brought their quota of wood to please get this in at an early date so we may apply for funds due us to dig a well and install a pump. So let's get this all-important matter settled quickly, thus relieving our school from unnecessary delay and worry relative to said water supply.

We are proud to see a large number of new faces in our school this year.

Don't forget our P.-T. A. meets tonight (Thursday). We'll be seein' you.

WHAT NEGROES ARE DOING

Special Drive in Terracing

In connection with an evening school, the teacher of agriculture is putting on a special drive in terracing. The evening school is being conducted in the Morning Star community, but terracing will be done any place a group of at least ten farmers may get together for instruction in the technique of the operation. During the last three years more than 300 acres have been terraced and it is hoped that at least 300 acres will be terraced this fall and winter.

Those who are interested in terracing their land should get in touch with the teacher of agriculture at once. Do not wait until next February or March because terracing should be done in the fall and not in the spring.

Shop Work

All farmers who live in the county training school community may bring their old plow stocks, harrows, planters, distributors and the like for repairs. It is hoped that a large number of these implements will be brought in early, because the vocational boys are eager to get started and to show the community what they can do.

Appreciation

To the friends and acquaintances of the comunity, Morning Star Baptist church, Hopewell Baptist church: This comes to let you know that we most highly appreciated your unselfish kindness in the sickness and consequent death of our sister, wife and mother, Mrs. Leila Holyfield.

We sincerely believe and hope that the Christian sisters of the church and community will be a guiding light and a mother to the bereaved children. Yours in Christ, Anthony Holyfield, Vergie, Daisy, Mary and Vivian Holifield, General Grant Holifield, Annie T. Barbour, Leila Belle Floyd, Katie I. Young, McCardiff Holyfield and Alice Monroe.

HOME COMING AT MT. SPRINGS

The public is cordially invited to attend and bring well filled baskets which will be served picnic style. The program will be announced later, which will be held on Sunday, October 21, 1934.

We are proud of our Sunday school at this place. We had a very nice attendance Sunday. All teachers and officers were present. We were very glad to have our teacher of the Bible class, Mr. Johnnie Plier, who has been ill for some time.

We were also glad to have with us Rev. and Mrs. Nelson.

The Christian Endeavor Society was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Williamson. Games were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Teel. About 50 were present, including visitors.

TO COTTON GROWERS AND BUSINESS MEN OF Chilton County:

The first thing to do before you buy any car is to drive it . . . And the Ford V-8 welcomes this test.

You will appreciate its 85 horsepower V-8 engine. It is the only V-8 engine in any car selling for less than $2500. But performance can cost little or much. What are the facts on Ford V-8 running costs?

There you can rely on Henry Ford's statement that the new Ford V-8 is the most economical Ford to operate ever built. The Ford V-8 saves you money on gas—on oil. Further, in that distant day when parts may need replacement, remember that Ford parts are economical as they always have been.

You will want to investigate the added protection to your wife and children offered by the Ford welded all-steel body. You will want the safety and dependability of a strong front axle and welded steel spoke wheels.

You know that the Ford has always been an honest, dependable, economical car. It must have more value built into it because the records over past years show that its trade-in value has always been very high. And don't forget—Ford prices have not been raised this year—they have been reduced! Delivered prices are now at the low point for the year.

A V-8 is no longer the privilege of the wealthy. Ford has made V-8 performance available to almost everyone. Come in today and drive the Ford V-8. Test its performance, comfort and economy for yourself.

Cotton is moving into warehouses. Now money is available in Chilton County. Many a family is considering the purchase of a new automobile.

If you, or anyone you know, is considering buying a car, the facts contained in this advertisement will well repay careful study.

The purchase of an automobile is second only to the purchase of a home . . . An investment where you will want to look for satisfaction next year, and the year after, as well as now.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THESE THINGS

In the relations between Ford dealers and the car-buying public, it is desirable that all facts and statements should be presented clearly and without confusion.

The TRUTH About Wheelbase: The Ford V-8 comes to you in only one wheelbase—a full 112 inches. There is no doubt or question about this. When we refer to the Ford V-8, we always mean this car in this size . . . And it is important to realize—in addition—that because the V-8 is a compact engine, every Ford has added expensive-car roominess—V-8 construction saves engine space which becomes usable body space.

The TRUTH About Delivered Prices: At no time this year have Ford V-8 prices been raised. Instead, they have been reduced. When choosing a car you should consider and compare delivered prices—not merely advertised F.O.B. prices. And you should consider what equipment the delivered prices include.

The TRUTH About Equipment: The following equipment is included on all Ford DeLuxe Models without extra charge. It is part of the delivered price. Safety glass throughout; two matched-tone horns; twin cowl lamps; 14 gallons of gas in tank; colored wheels; cigar lighter and ash receptacles; fenders matching body; two adjustable sun visors.

The TRUTH About Economy of Operation: The New Ford V-8 costs less to operate than any other Ford ever built. It is extremely economical on gasoline and oil and its upkeep is slight also. You get Ford V-8 performance, faster pickup, and ability to get places without driving strain, but you pay no extra running costs.

REFUGE NEWS

Our Sunday school was very well attended Sunday. Although there is still some room for more to come. We hope that some of our members will become more interested in Sunday school.

Our pastor filled his regular appoint at Pates Chapel Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mims and little daughter, Vera Nell, were here from Sylacauga last week end visiting relatives.

We are planning on having a singing at this place the third Sunday afternoon. Notice in next week's paper for further announcement.

There will be service at this place next Saturday night. It is not our regular preaching day, but is for the purpose of finishing up our associational letter as we will not have another preaching day before the association. Our pastor will preach and the church will be called in conference Saturday night. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

Mrs. Rebecca Ann Mims

Mrs. Rebecca Ann Mims, wife of Mr. A. H. Mims of Sylacauga, was laid to rest in Refuge cemetery last Friday, October fifth. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, twelve children, a host of relatives and friends, but we hope our loss is heaven's gain. She had been in failing health for some time. And to give her relief our blessed Lord called her home to rest, where there is no more pain, sickness nor death, but eternal joy and happiness.

UNIVERSITY NEWS

University, Ala., Oct. 9.—The Crimson Tide of Alabama will play its third contest of the year Saturday in Denny Stadium when it faces the strong and husky Mississippi State eleven.

The two teams, on the basis of early season games, appear to be evenly matched, and a great battle is anticipated by the fans.

State showed her mettle when it held the highly touted Vanderbilt eleven to a 7 to 0 score. The Commodores scored on the Maroons only in the last 8 minutes of play on a long pass.

The Tide is clicking smoother each week and should be in prime form for the invasion of the Mississippians. Riley, Stapp, Tarzan White, Whatley and other cripples are expected to be ready for duty this week end.

The Alabama frosh will play its first game of the 1934 season Friday when it goes to Starkville to clash with the Mississippi State plebe eleven. The Tidesmen have shown up well in scrimmages with the varsity on the defense, but have not shown so well on the offense.

Dr. Ralph McBurney, professor of bacteriology at the University of Alabama, and Dr. Harvey B. Searcy, Tuscaloosa ear specialist, are carrying on important research in an effort to find a satisfactory cure for common moulds of the ear, an ailment which is the torment of a goodly percentage of the populatoin. Dr. Searcy is conducting the case work and Dr. McBurney the bacteriological research. Thus far the two physicians have found that a combination containing 70 per cent alcohol and 30 per cent thymol seems to effect the quickest and most thorough cure with least discomfort to the patient.

New honorary cadet officers to serve in the University of Alabama R. O. T. C. during the coming year have been announced as follows: Miss Mary Harmon Black, Birmingham, cadet colonel; Miss Grace Manderville, Carrollton, Ga.; Miss Lolla Wurtele of Ensley; and Miss Helen Burns, Selma, lieutenant-colonels.

Taking a definite stand against any socialized scheme of medicine, Dr. James S. McLester, president-elect of the American Medical Association, declared that every effort should be made to restore the general practitioner to the central place he formerly occupied in the practice of medicine. Dr. McLester was speaking to the Gorgas Medical Society of the University of Alabama and was delivering the Gorgas Birthday Address. The Birmingham physician said that the cost of sickness should be provided for by insurance. He declared that the majority of physicians are opposed to the plan whereby people in the lower income brackets would get free medical service with the physicians being paid by the state. Physicians are reluctant to give up their independence and become mere minor officials in a bureaucratic scheme of medicine, the speaker said.

SINGING AT MT. OLIVE

On September 30 a goodly number of Chilton County singers at an early hour were on their way to Mt. Olive, situated on the Randolph and Marion Road in Perry County. All ready for an all day singing.

The service was opened by Mr. Virgil Crocker. The directors all seemed at their best. The class responded heartily. The audience gave marked attention all day. Singers were there from Selma, Clanton, Brent, Jemison, West Chilton, Eolin, Mt. Olive and Sylacauga. Quite a number of directors were there, among whom were Prof. Sanders, Mr. Akers, T. C. and M. C. Jackson, Prof. Deason, Prof. Daniels, Mrs. Culver, Miss Bertha Mae Brown, Miss Augusta Deason, Mrs. Stewart, Mr. Langston, Mr. Ratliff, Mr. Crocker, J. M. Williams and others.

At eleven o'clock Elder Woodall, of Louisiana delivered an impressive sermon. Dinner was abundant and free for all.

It was a great occasion. It almost seemed that the heavens kissed the earth. The directing by the young ladies seemed almost perfect. The only drawback was the absence of Uncle John Hayes. He had to leave us at Randolph to go to South Alabama. If any enjoyed the singing better than others, it must have been Mr. Best of Clanton and the writer. The memory of our visit to Mt. Olive will remain a source of pleasure.—Zac J. Jones.

Dr. Hayes, L. E. Diefenderfer and Horace Popwell went to St. Louis last Thursday morning to attend the World Series ball game there. They also saw Jack while in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. John Foshee of Maplesville visited friends here Sunday.

Mrs. James Wade visited Birmingham Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Grady Heflin and children spent Sunday in Randolph as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Trig Duke.

Rev. and Mrs. Cecil Ellisor of Verbena were shopping in Clanton Monday.

Lesson for October 14

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS BIBLE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:26-39.

GOLDEN TEXT—O how love I thy law! It is my meditation all the day. Psalm 119:97.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Learning From God's Book.

JUNIOR TOPIC—An Ethiopian Finds Good News in the Bible.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Finding Time for Bible Study.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Study the Bible.

In the conversion of the Ethiopian we not only see the Word of God in relation to the salvation of a sinner, but the Lord's work broadening in its scope.

I. Philip Meeting the Ethiopian (vv. 26-29).

1. Leaving the Lord's work by Divine direction (v. 26). The Lord called Philip away from a great work in Samaria, and specifically directed him to this man. Abrahamlike, he obeyed the divine command, not knowing why he should leave the work in Samaria and go into a desert place. As he journeyed on by faith, he espied the state chariot of the Ethiopian treasurer. The Spirit of God directed him to go near and join himself to the chariot. The tactful question put to the treasurer gained him a seat by the side of this dignified officer. The commission which at first seemed so unpromising was now clear. The way of faith begins in obscurity, but it always ends in the clear light.

2. An officer of state reading the Bible (vv. 27, 28). The Ethiopian had been to Jerusalem to worship. Despite his high official position, he was not ashamed to be a worshiper of God. Following after God should not be considered beneath the dignity of a statesman. Indeed, the world's greatest statesmen have been God-fearing men.

3. A providential meeting in the desert (v. 29). The coming together of these two men was clearly the predetermined way of God. God knew the road which the eunuch would be traveling, and the time of his passing through Gaza.

II. Philip Preaching to the Ethiopian (vv. 30-35).

1. The Ethiopian's employment while journeying (v. 30). His occupation at the time of this meeting was reading the Word of God. At the invitation of the Ethiopian, Philip joined himself to the chariot and found him reading from the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. God will eventually show the way of life to the one who searches his Word.

2. The absolute need of an interpreter (v. 31). The Ethiopian was reading one of the clearest testimonies to the Messiah in the Old Testament, yet he was unable to understand it. The Ethiopian, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures. The mind of the natural man is blind to spiritual things, making the work of an evangelist indispensable. Preaching the Word of God will always be necessary. Valuable as is the Bible in the hands of men, the touch and influence of the living man who has experienced the work of God's saving grace in his own heart is needed.

3. Philip's message (vv. 32-35). He began at the Scripture which the Ethiopian was reading, and preached unto him Jesus. This shows us that the person represented in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah as suffering in the stead of others was Jesus Christ instead of Israel. It shows also that the central theme of the preacher's message should be Jesus. He did not preach Jesus as a great teacher, but as a Saviour who had suffered and died instead of the sinner. He preached Jesus as the one who had offered himself as a ransom for many. If there is to be a revival, there must be a return to the preaching of salvation through the shed blood of Jesus Christ.

III. Philip Baptizing the Ethiopian (vv. 36-38).

As a result of Philip's preaching, the eunuch proposed baptism. When Christ is truly preached, men naturally desire to confess him in baptism. Water baptism is clearly included in the program of evangelization. The Ethiopian might have offered many excuses as to why he should neglect this important ordinance, but, like every man who is honest before God, he was willing at any cost to render obedience. It is faith in the finished work of Jesus Christ that saves, but those who have a genuine faith desire to seal it in baptism.

IV. The Ethiopian Rejoicing (v. 39).

Having understood the way of salvation, embraced the Saviour, and rendered obedience to the Word of God, he went on his way rejoicing. Confession of Christ always issues in joy.

Rights of Others

Everywhere the Gospel bids the Christian to take sides against himself. He is to stand ready to forego his surest rights, if only he is hurt by so doing; while on the other hand, he is to be watchful to respect even the least obvious rights of others.—Dr. H. C. G. Moule.

Hurry and Despatch

No two things differ more than hurry and despatch. Hurry is the mark of a weak mind; despatch of a strong one.—Colton.

Mr. Ralph Jones spent several days in Montgomery last week.

BOB JONES

COMMENTS ON HERE AND HEREAFTER.

The trouble with our modern business world is clear to the mind of the writer. Few representative business men have the proper appreciation of real values. Let me illustrate. Some years ago I called on a promnent banker and I asked him for some advice. A widow had a few thousand dollars in cash which she wished to invest. She could take no chances on losing the principal and insisted that she must live on the interest. "Place it on real estate. First mortgages on real estate are safe," said the banker. I advised the widow to do what the banker said. She did it. Now she has several vacant houses on her hands which she had to take over. She has no income and cannot pay her taxes. I have lived long enough to learn that the biggest business men do not always known real values. I know another widow who had a little money to invest. She loaned it to a good man. This good man has lost all he had except his own honor. He is almost going hungry now to pay the widow what he owes her. There is no substitute for common sense and honor. Of course, some good men don't have good judgment. Give me a man with good common sense and an honest heart and I would not be afraid to lend him money. Men with good common sense under ordinary conditions will not borrow money unless they can pay it. When good men borrow money they intend to pay the debt.

Real values are not in stocks and bonds. Nobody knows what stocks and bonds are worth. The price fluctuates. Character has eternal value. A man who is right will do right. God is more interested in what we are than what we do. God knows that men who do right permanently are permanently right in their own hearts.

The world needs a revival of the old time decencies. We need to get back to those days when a man's word was as good as his bond, back to those days when women had to have good names if they had social position, back to those days when people believed in a just God who would not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance, back to those days when men believed in hell and in heaven, back to those days when men knew that what they sowed they would have to reap, back to those days when the gospel of the grace of God was preached from practically all pulpits and the people in the pews believed the message and had confidence in th messenger.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's constipated bowels until nature restores their regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use.

We don't hear so much now from the New Deal about spending ourselves rich. The riches do not seem to know it. While the New Deal has been trying to live up to its advice in the way it is spending so lavishly, the citizens are more saving than ever—13,686,947 savings bank depositors in the country at the present time, exceed all records. We still have a tendency to string with with Franklin Ben Franklin, we mean!—Los Angeles Times.

Governor Brann, re-elected Democratic governor of Maine, was frank in assuring the voters that he could get more out of the federal treasury than a green horn could. Thus introducing a novel, if not noble, theme into American politics.

The Herington minister who, according to the Advertiser, preached recently from the text "God has no standing army" may have been thinking about a lot of persons who take Christianity on the national guard plan—one drill a week and a ten-day meeting once a year.

President Roosevelt is going to have a conference of industrial and labor leaders. Let's see. Didn't President Hoover try something like that?

NATIONAL AFFAIRS
(By Frank P. Litschert

There has been a great deal of talk recently, by some of those in rather high places as well as others, about the redistribution of wealth. There is something alluring about the phrase. It has special appeal of course to the fellow who feels that in the distribution of this world's goods he hasn't received all that is coming to him.

It is of course true that there has always been some mal-disribution of wealth. This cannot be avoided in any system of government which is purely human, because nothing human is perfect. It is equally true, however, that in the United States our fathers perfected a system of government which gave to every citizen, so far as humanly possible at this stage of civilization, an equal opportunity to prosper and get ahead according to his own personal ability, his character, his intellect, and his sound judgment. Certainly a government can go no further than that without inflicting a great deal more injustice than the amount of good accomplished. And no citizen ought expect more than he is entitled to. If he is to accumulate he must be thrifty, industrious, and possessed of reasonably sound judgment. If he doesn't have these qualities, if he is lazy, reckless and extravagant, he cannot expect the government to make up for these bad faults in himself. If and when the government attempts to do so, it will injure the deserving in a vain effort to help the undeserving.

Centuries of experience have proved that about the most a government can do is to give a man an equal opportunity with his fellow men. It cannot make him industrious far sighted and economical if he is inherently indolent and extravagant. Of course, we all have our misfortunes, and frequently the breaks go against us. But even aside from that, it is human nature to blame some outside force rather than ourselves when we make a speculation or a venture which doesn't turn out as we expect. It is a lot easier to blame the government than our own foolhardiness or lack of good sense. Then is when we begin to say there ought to be a redistribution of wealth. Well, perhaps such a thing can be brought about, but it is much more likely that the effort will end in destruction of wealth rather than a reapportionment. The government can pour out millions and billions to appease that part of the populace which wants redistribution, but after a while there won't be any wealth left to distribute. It may vanish like the firecrackers which we shoot away on the Fourth of July.

When it is all gone we will start all over again. Some of the people must then recreate the wealth. And it will not be those who are used to leaning on the government. The work will of necessity be done by those who have always been the doers, not the dreamers.

If the little fellow, the modest property owner, the fellow with the small home, the little farm, a few shares of stocks, a dozen or so bonds, or a life insurance policy expects to be aided by artificial redistribution of wealth he is in for a big disappointment. He will be wiped out in the end just as surely as is the bigger property holder. Uncle Sam has no surplus in his treasury. Every billion now spent must be collected back from the people, in higher taxes or cancelled in some form of inflation which will be infinitely worse.

A NEW SLOGAN

In his address to Congress on April 6, 1917, President Woodrow Wilson paved the way for the declaration of war upon Germany with his plea that "the world must be made safe for democracy." It was Woodrow Wilson who pointed out that the peace of the world must be planted upon the tested foundation of political liberty. It was Woodrow Wilson who told the world that we would fight for the things which we have carried nearest our hearts—for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own government, for the rights and liberties of small nations.

The A. E. F. fought "to make the world safe for democracy" and see what we have. Dictatorships and autocratic rulers hold sway in Germany, Italy, Spain, Austria, Turkey, and Russia while other nations are trembling on the brink of political upheavals. These autocracies are merely unexploded shells of hatred, navy and greed, certain to explode at the first concussion.

This generation has witnessed the absolute failure of internationalism as a dominant policy in our diplomatic relations with other countries. Bitter experience has taught us that such gestures are absurd in purpose and impossible to achieve as long as mankind is composed of human beings who are subject to the age old weaknesses of human character.

The effort to "make the world safe for democracy" has in reality made most of the world a stage for autocracy. Evil forces are today trying to undermine the Constitution of the United States and the principles of liberty and freedom for which it stands. Our country is being flooded with propaganda designed to wean the people away from the traditions and ideals that constitute the foundation of America's present form of government.

In defiance of these forces, the members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States have pledged themselves to the preservation of the Constitution and our representative form of government. We stand opposed to any suggestion that we again become crusaders in a fight to "save the world for democracy." Instead, we present to the American people a new slogan—one that will permit us to look after our own welfare in a fight to "Save America for Democracy." Let our neighbors over the seas solve their own troubles in whatever way they deem best while we—in America—content ourselves by defending the heritage that is ours as a free, liberty loving people.—From Foreign Service, magazine of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

WHY COMPLAIN OF HIGH PRICE

"We hear quite a number of our farmer friends complaining about the price of meat and lard being high," says the Oneonta Democrat of Blount County. "They are complaining about the price of flour, and about having to pay a quarter for a peck of meal. Aren't these farm products? Hasn't the farmer been seeking and demanding higher prices for the products of his farm? A farmer in this county ought not have to buy meat and lard, flour or meal. These products he ought to have to sell and reap the benefits of the higher prices. The man in town who can't produce these things might have a cause for complaint, but certainly not the man on the farm."

According to one New England politician with a flair of figures, for every vote cast for Louis J. Brann, Democratic candidate for governor of Maine in the recent election, $345 has been expended by the present administration at Washington for public work, relief, etc., in the Pine Tree State. Well, the Republicans have been pretty good campaign spenders in years gone by, but we doubt whether they will be able to match that accomplishment dollar for dollar on the present campaign or in 1936 either for that matter.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, says that the storm of the depression is over although there are still some rumblings. It is our opinion that the principal rumbling will come when the public has to foot the bill.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, is quoted as saying that he hopes "the day is not far distant when most government lending can be discontinued. But he probably doesn't mean before November, 1936.

Secretary Ickes says that there is too great a flow of oil for the good of the petroleum industry. Maybe he can get Congress to cut down the gas pressure when it gets in session this winter.

Because she admired the statue of the Winged Victory, the President's mother was presented a copy by the French government. Won't she say a few words of admiration for the war debt?

When they are in college we call them "Rah, Rah" boys. But when they graduate and go down to Washington to run the government they are apt to be looked on as "Raw, Raw" boys.

This department is interested in the information, via the Atchison Globe, that $2.23 buys as much today as $1.95 bought a year ago, but inforamtion as where one might get the $2.23 also should prove interesting reading.

Speaking of the old age relief, why not have the government give everybody $200 a month for life? Then we could all knock off work and take a tin can tour of the country.

The solemn pledge of the 1932 Democratic platform and candidate to reduce federal government costs by at least 25 per cent is recalled by Bainbridge Colby, Democratic Secretary of State under President Wilson, "who holds that the promise has been fulfilled" by so vast an enlargement of government spending that the bankruptcy of the federal government is just around the corner.

Now why should Mr. Colby persit in bringing the platform up again?

"I suppose," a man remarked to a county case worker, "you find many cases of extreme want when you go around among the poor." "Yes," admitted the case worker, "today when I visited Mrs. Gadder, she hadn't a drop of gasoline for her car."

When private interests produce and sell electricity power they have regulations to obey, taxes to pay, stockholders to please, dividends to earn and bonded debt to carry and pay off. When the government barges in it spends the people's money, is exempt from taxation and regulation, has neither dividends nor stockholders to worry about and rates a distinguished service medal if it can get by without a deficit. Is it fair or American to ask private business to meet that kind of competition?

LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Despite any primary or election results to the contrary, the business men of New England are not exactly satisfied with the economic situation if we are to believe a survey taken among them recently by the New England Council and just made public. The survey shows that many New England business men lack confidence in the immediate business future. It is stated that 503 responses were made to inquiries sent out by the council. Of these, 79 per cent reported lack of confidence with respect to their own business and 16.5 per cent reporting no such lack of confidence. On general business conditions 94 per cent of the replies reported lack of confidence and six per cent no absence of confidence.

According to the survey there were six major reasons reported for lack of confidence, as follows:

"Uncertainty regarding administration policy towads business.

"Government interference with and control of business.

"Excessive expenditures, borrowings, unbalanced budget.

"Uncertainty regarding monetary policy; fear of inflation.

"Experiments and reforms.

"Distrust of President's advisers."

Six major suggestions for restoring confidence, also listed in the order of frequency of mention, were:

"Adopt, state clearly and adhere to a more helpful policy toward business.

"Stop government interference with and regulation of business.

"Reduce expenditures; balance the budget.

"Stop experiments and reforms; turn to the right.

"Replace present advisers with conservatives; with sound, practical, experienced advisers; with business men.

Adopt sound monetary policy."

There is at least food for thought in the reasons set forth why business is not forging ahead faster, and just as much food for thought in the remedies proposed.

Maybe when the time comes around for the meek to inherit the earth there won't be anything left worth inheriting.

SOME REASSURING NEEDED

Lack of confidence still seems to be one of the chief deterrents to the return of normal economic conditions. For some reason or other the stock market has seemed to be, of late, in a rather extended decline. Some of the so-called experts on the market, who are not inclined to approve the New Deal claim that the market is now discounting in advance the November election, in which they claim to see a further turn to the "left" on the part of the voters. This may be somewhat far fetched in view of the fact that the market was declining before the barometric Maine election and has continued to decline since. At any rate, however, many stocks including United States Steel touched new lows for the year 1934 and many business indices are still below what they were in the corresponding period a year ago. Quite the reverse is true in Canada where business is better than it was at the beginning of the autumn of 1933. Stocks in the London and Canadian markets are now at the peak for 1934.

A great many people will say that the decline on the stock and bond markets does not mean anything to the country at large, but is due only to a scare in Wall Street. To this reply may be given that securities are not held in Wall Street alone. They are in the possession of many millions of people all over the United States, people whose spending power is generally felt in the nation's marts of trade. When these holders of securities become nervous the effect is felt everywhere, and the nervousness apparent, in the small town as well as in Manhattan, indicates that there is still considerable mistrust about certain phases of the New Deal.

But it is not only the holders of securities who seem to be worried. Business men are timid, too, and are not buying as freely as they were a year ago. This results in lessened production of manufactured goods, car loadings, etc.

Some of the things which are said to be causing uncertainty generally are the continued heavy federal expenditures which are plunging Uncle Sam more and more in debt, the fact that the federal budget is not balanced and apparently will not be any time in the near future, the uncertainty about our future money policy which brings the fear of uncontrollable inflation, and the labor disturbances in various parts of the county.

Many commentators believe that an announcement of a reassuring nature by the president, that the period of experimentation is about over and the march back to a balanced budget is about to begin, would do a great deal to restore confidence. Whether such a statement will be forthcoming remains to be seen. It seems to be taken for granted by the insiders that President Roosevelt will make some sort of statement on the national situation before the November election at least.

Why not write your congressman to suggest to the president that he appoint Hugh Johnson minister to Germany?

It is said that the total indebtedness of all the peoples in the world is four hundred billion dollars. There are no figures available as to how much of it will ever be paid.

"As Maine goes so goes the nation," according to the old slogan which must mean this year that the whole nation is going on the public payroll.

RALLYING TO CONSTITUTION

No matter what an imposing array of college professorial talent may be lined up for the New Deal, it is becoming more and more evident that an imposing array of business and political leaders, of independent thought, are lining up against some of the important features of the administration program. Monday, September 17, was Constitution Day, and afforded opportunity for many prominent speakers to touch on the present-day tendency away from our written Constitution. Among these who may be regarded as independently minded politically were Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson; Edward A. Hayes, National Commander of the American Legion, and Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune. Another outstanding address was that of Ogden Mills, who can hardly be regarded, however, as politically independent. The first three mentioned men took part in a celebration held in historic Carpenter's Hall at Philadelphia.

Mr. Hayes launched a broadside against those modern statesmen who seem to have an idea that the Constitution is so flexible that it can be stretched to cover almost anything that the politicians may desire." He declared that "men of serious purpose will not be motivated by partisan, political considerations in their support of constitutional principles. Neither will they be deterred from defending the Constitution because partisan politics seem to be involved. Upholding and defending the Constitution trascends politics."

Bainbridge Colby openly assaulted some of the methods of the national administration, making the charge that the control of relief had been mismanaged, and that the money which should have been expended effectively for relief was "frittered away, recklessly expended, improvidently exhausted by foolish programs and incompetent government officials" some of whom he characterized as impractical and claptrap theorists in government."

Colonel McCormick delivered attacks against two prominent members of the administration, characterizing General Johnson as a "military despot" and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace as an "irresponsible despot." Many of the rules and regulations of the New Deal he declared as "tyranny laws."

Another speaker at the same meeting of national note was Congressman James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, who recently announced that he would not run for congress again but would continue his fight in the courts against what he believes to be unconstitutional phases of the New Deal. He said, during his address, that "the good ship Constitution is in the same danger as the Titanic on which passengers did not realize the danger until just before it went down."

In his striking explication of the Constitution, Mr. Colby said:

"The Constitution is expressly dedicated to the promotion of the general welfare and to securing the blessings of liberty. To that end it has ordained a system of legal protection for the rights of every individual, and has provided apt means of protection against tyranny or oppression or arbitrary rule.

"The unemployed of the moment and other victims of the depression are not victims of the Constitution. The encouragement of industrious living by the pledge of protection to even the humblest worker, in the enjoyment of the fruits of his labor, is not intended to insulate either the government or any individual against the duty of relieving distress.

"The grace of God is not a monopoly of any political party or of any political faction, and it is a gross calumny against the Constitution to represent it only as the protector of property.

"It is a protector of rights, not of property, and the rights of the least and the lowliest among us quite as much as the rights of any one. Without the solidity of our social organization, which the Constitution alone provides, there would be no source from which relief could come and no subject-matter upon which even the most charitably disposed government could rely for the support of its measures of succor to the unfortunate."

THE MAINSPRING

The riddle of the New Deal centers around the question as to why the "priming of the engine" has failed.

Actually, the effectiveness of federal spending to regenrate prosperity has been partly nullified by the simultaneous preachment by immature New-Dealers against the profit motive.

It was apparently the mad dream of some politicians to plan for a return of prosperity without including the prosperity-makers; the businessmen and the investors.

Irrelevant aspersions against business profits were made at the very time when the whole economic machine had long been deadlocked as aresult of five years of red ink and inadequate profits.

With the detachment of an outsider, Sir Josiah Stamp, eminent British corporation head and political economist, recently put his finger on the reason for the lagging of the recovery movement in this country.

Referring to efforts to disparage business profits, Sir Josiah, in a recent address before the British Association for the Advancement of science, said:

"What appeals to me about the American new order is not merely the speed at which things are done, but the fact that men are being encouraged to supose you can revive industry while you are still sitting on the mainspring. After all, the mainspring of all individualistic enterprise, of any kind, outside of Russia, is the making of profit. Unless you are getting people to make money, you will never get reemployment.

"Yet this is the last thing that seems to have been thought of in America. If the result of all your regimentation is a reding figure, you will always have a trade depression."

Recognizing the validity of this argument, William Randolph Hearst has repeatedly admonished the administration to go out actively to get the cooperation of businessmen.

Assurance by the president of his sympathy for honest business enterprise, of the fact that the blue prints of the changed order have already been drawn and that the next two years will be concerned more with administration than with innovation and an announcement that no new burdens will be placed on employers in taxes or otherwise until the national income has been restored to normal, would have an electric effect in breaking the current psycholigical deadlock.

Such a pronouncement would mobilize for the recovery movement the latent genius and spirit of enterprise of the American businessman.—Atlanta Georgian.

South Dakota knows full well the folly of socialism in government. We tried it and quit it long ago, but are still paying for it.—Wolsey, S. D., Herald.

A FINANCIAL WIZARD

There can no longer be any doubt about it. Mr. Morganthau is, unquestionably, the greatest secretary of the treasury since Mr. Woodin.

Under Mr. Morganthau's guidance this country is engaged in importing silver and paying for it by exporting gold. We are buying the silver for more than it is worth. Every time a ship heads east with a load of gold aboard we take a loss and every time a ship heads west with a load of silver we take another one. The eminent Mr. Montagu Norman of the Bank of England is lost in admiration of our cunning.

Mr. Morganthau is lost also, but it is just plain lost. The other day he explained that the profit from the gold devaluation constitutes a treasury asset which some day will be used to decrease the national debt. This is remarkably reassuring. The gold is not to be sunk in the ocean; it is not to be dropped into the crater of a volcano; it is not even to be given away entirely, as the recent silver purchases might suggest.

What Mr. Morganthau with truly statesmanlike reticence did not say, though it is true, is that the application of the profits of devaluation to the reduction of the national debt constitutes a capital levy. The national debt is to be reduced not by a taxation which might take some account of ability to pay but by reducing the real value of all savings. The little man who has a few hundred dollars in the bank, a bond or two, and an insurance policy for the protection of his wife and children will pay off the national debt under Mr. Morganthau's elegantly simple plan. The beneficiary will be the shoestring operator who borrowed the little fellow's money and now gets a larger share of the equity than he has any right to.

In the light of Mr. Morganthau's recent acts and pronouncements it is not difficult to see why the house of Morganthau has been able to spare him from active participation in the management of its financial affairs.—Chicago Tribune.

OUR TWO CONSTITUTIONS

The old written Constitution and the new unwritten constitution represent philosophies of government which are so different and opposed that as the one progresses it blots out the other; the one stands for a government of law, the other a government of men; the one individualism, the other socialism; the one democracy, the other state despotism. In that process forms and names matter little, for a sovereignty in name may be a democracy in fact, while a despotism in fact may be a democracy in name. Nor is any particular plan or method essential to the change. It may be made directly without any fuss or feathers by at once bringing the whole people under the power of the government that it may hold and direct their social, industrial and political life as it will, or it may be by taxaton under which the government takes the product of those who produce and redistribute it to those who do not produce, and to maintaining the endlessly swelling ranks of officialdom, reserving to the producers so much of their harvest, as may be deemed consistent with the general welfare.

Whether the one system or the other prevails in the end depends of course upon the effective will of the American people, nor while a test of their common sense can be a preference for the one or the other be said to be any fair test of patriotism. For it cannot be said that the Russian who is willing to lay down his life in defense of communism, or the Italian who is willing to suffer and sacrifice to promote fascism, is any more or less patriotic than the American who believes that the best form of government ever invented for the government of man is laid down in the American Constitution as it left the hands of the founding fathers.

If the American people prefer socialism to democracy, or collectivism to individualism, or a government of men to a government of law, or an unwritten constitution to a written Constitution, a few judges and an ancient document will never stand in the way. The American Constitution derives its force and its influence from the sanction and approval of the American people. When that is withdrawn it falls. And that must be so. That instrument has always seemed to me the most perfect product of the noblest political genius of the ages, sufficient for the government of as many millions as this rich and fertile land may support. Nevertheless when it ceases to reflect the will of our people it ceases to be a Constitution. They may be wrong, they may be misled, they may be bartering their liberties for transitory material welfare, but the choice is theirs. This is their land and their government, and it lies with no one to queston their right to do with it as they will. They may be right or they may be wrong, their wisdom may be questioned, they may invite disaster, but the right to choose is at least with them. But in justce to those who founded and built this nation, their gift to humanity should not be destroyed casually or by cunning evasions, but consciously, honestly, deliberately and openly.

And before we cry to those who are alien in thought and sentiment to our tradition to "Come over into Macedonia and help us," it may be well to realize that our saviors may be our masters, too. And before we do abandon the most perfect form of practicable democracy the world has known, some consideration should be given to the fact that for a century and a half the American Constitution has made us great and powerful and free. History justifies our faith in it. Before we leave it for a blind voyage on an unknown sea with no chart and strange pilots, if we do not know where we are going, we should at least know where we hope to go.—Hon. T. Scott Offutt, Judge of Maryland State Court of Appeals in the National Republic magazine.

According to a United Press dispatch from Milan, Italy, an article in a prominent newspaper attributed to Benito Mussolini himself, praises President Roosevelt, stating that while he has not attained his fundamental objective it must not be concluded that he has failed. After commending the president for trying to bring the nation out of the depression the article adds that although Mr. Roosevelt denies that his principles are Communist or Facsist "he nevertheless is guided by the Facsist spirit." We are inclined to doubt whether our chief executive will relish this sort of praise although it was doubtless given in the right spirit, and intended to be highly complimentary.

At this time Mr. Lande and I are glad to unite in one mutual expression of thanks for the splendid friendships that have been made for us by our neighbors and our loyal customers. We can truly say we are glad we cast our lot with you, and you have richly rewarded us in your noble response to our efforts.

A&P Blazed Way For Home Service

"The red wagon trail blazed by horse-drawn wagons through the hub-deep mud of the highways of the last half of the 1800's pioneered the way for the modern system of food distribution," declared J. T. Patten, oldest living member of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company organization, which is celebrating its 75th Anniversary this month. "Horses, though rarely given credit, played as important a part in the development of modern food distribution as they did in settling the west," Mr. Patten stated.

"In the 1870's when I started in the grocery business," Mr. Patten continued, "transportation wasn't as good as it is now. Many of our customers could not get to the stores for their supplies. But then, as now, our company believes that large volume of business results in reduced prices. This volume was obtained by mail, and by sending supplies to outlying customers in these little red, horse-drawn wagons.

"The routes of these wagons radiated from the stores in the cities like the spokes in a wheel. Each wagon would start off loaded, delivering the tea and coffee ordered a week before, taking the orders for the week after from the housewives along the route. These early A & P wagon routes, of course, had to struggle through knee-deep mud and snow, ford streams; fight their way through. But they were welcome when they arrived, for they not only brought these groceries at low prices which was an innovation in those days, but also news of the outside world and gossip of the neighborhood. They also brought a gift for each customer, a colored chromo, a piece of china or bric-a-brac. Many of these pieces are still prized possessions of their owners.

"The idea was quite successful. I remember that in 1896 when Uncle Sam established the rural free delivery, we used to say he was copying our system of 'rural food delivery' for we had 1,500 wagons at that time.

"People began to ask these wagons to carry other foods. Soon the lists of foods that customers wanted were greater than any wagon could carry, even with the improved roads that were built at the end of the first decade of this century.

"But by this time other means of transportation had developed. Cities had grown, and the wagon routes had built up trade to the point where it was possible to open little grocery stores in almost every town, in fact in almost every neighborhood.

"But for a long time after that the horse drawn truck with its beautiful Percheron beasts was more economical than the motor truck for city deliveries, long after the auto became a practical vehicle for transportation.

"When the first funny-looking horseless carriages passed my store, I had no more idea than anybody else that I would live to see ridiculous gasoline buggies make the world an entirely different place to live in," Mr. Patten concluded. "In a way I was sorry to see those hundreds of fine horses we used to have go, but I suppose they would be uneconomical in the world now."

County Farm Agent's Notes

Compiled by J. W. Fant, County Farm Demonstration Agent for Chilton County

EXTENSION COURSE AT JEMISON

An extension course from Auburn will be offered the teachers of the county at Jemison. The first meeting will be held Saturday morning, October 13th, at 9 o'clock in the Jemison High School.

Professor J. A. Peterson expressed a particular interest in the course in that it will deal with practical problems which confront the teachers in their daily work.

"School and Community Problems" is the title of the course. It will carry 3 hours of college credit in education or social science and may be used for both extension of certificates and raising the classification of teachers in the salary schedule.

Professor S. L. Chestnutt will give the course. Quite a number have expressed the intention of joining. Among them being five teachers from Autauga and Elmore Counties.

CANNING BEEF FOR WINTER USE

Auburn, Ala. — Thousands of Alabama farm women have already made plans to can at least one beef this fall in order that their families may have an adequate supply of meat in their daily diets.

Prospects are that the 1,143,371 quarts of beef conserved for winter use in 1933 will be greatly exceeded this year. Not only is the practice spreading among farm families but the Relief Administration has already canned large quantities of beef from drought cattle for the state's needy families this winter.

Last year a concerted drive by home demonstration agents in practically every Alabama county resulted in the adoption of beef canning as a regular practice by many farm families. "The canning process," says Miss Margaret Garrett, extension specialist in food preservation, "is not difficult and can be done on the farm by means of a steam pressure cooker for processing."

NEW MEAT CURING PLANTS TO GO IN AT ATMORE, FLORALA

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 8.—Any time will be "hog killing time" in the vicinity of Atmore and Florala following the completion of meat curing plants there by Consumers Ice Company, a subsidiary of Alabama Power Company, the early part of November.

The new plants will be community smokehouses installed as additions to existing ice plants and will be a boon to the farmers in those sections who now lose 50 per cent of their meat from spoilage according to estimates of agricultural authorities.

Farmers in the vicinity of Florala and Atmore have already signed contracts to cure many thousands of pounds of meat at these plants during the coming season, but with skyrocketing prices of all cured meats and the urging of United States and Alabama agricultural agents to save all food and feed crops, it is expected that the facilities of both plants will be taxed to the limit.

Power Company engineers are hopeful that the new plants will demonstrate that by installing meat curing facilities any ice plant in an Alabama farm community may develop a profitable year-round business and confer a great favor on the farmers in the surrounding section.

COTTON CROP WORTH $48,661,707 MORE THAN THE 1932 CROP

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers are receiving approximately $48,661,707 more for their 1934 cotton crop than they did for their 1932 crop, according to figures compiled by Senator John H. Bankhead, who shows that farmers are getting about $85,700,707 for the present crop while the 1932 crop brought only $37,391,000.

"Farmers who cooperated with the AAA in reducing cotton acreage are getting two and a half times as much as they got for their 1932 cotton, and $19.77 a bale more than cooperators received for the same amount of cotton, seed and rentals in 1933," he said.

GAME AND FISH NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 9.—Alabama 1934-35 hunting licenses went on sale the first of this month and the first two issued went to Governor-designate and Mrs. Bibb Graves of Montgomery.

A total of 90,060 hunting, trapping and non-resident hunting and fishing licenses were mailed to the county probate judge and the commissioner of licenses in Jefferson County the latter part of September and are now available for purchases.

The state hunting license will cost the hunter the usual fee of $3; the county hunting license $1, and the trapping license $15 for the first trap and $2.50 for each additional trap used.

The annual non-resident hunting license fee is $25; the non-resident trip hunting license $5. The annual non-resident fishing license is $5 and the trip fishing license $2.

On the back of each license is a brief summary of the state's game and fish laws.

The Auburn Outing Club has kept an accurate check on the growth of fish planted in Wilmore Dam Lake by the state game and fisheries department back in 1927.

Since 1929, the records of the club show, the fish have steadily been gaining in size and this year the lake yielded an 8¼ pound bass, the largest yet taken there.

In 1929 the largest fish caught there weighed two pounds, 15 ounces. A year later the largest one tipped the scales at three pounds, 14 ounces and in 1931 the prize catch weighed five pounds and one ounce.

The biggest one in 1932 weighed four pounds and seven ounces and the largest bass taken in 1933 was only one ounce heavier. But this year the scales have been groaning under fish weighing seven pounds, 1 ounces; seven pounds 11 ounces and finally the biggest bass of all.

The members of the club are anxiously awaiting 1935.

DESTROYING STALKS HELP KILL WEEVILS

Auburn, Ala.—Early destruction of cotton stalks this fall will give the boll weevils a serious blow, declares Prof. J. M. Robinson, entomologist of the Alabama Experiment station.

The bureau of entomology of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which has been advocating this method for more than 25 years, considers it one of the most important steps in boll weevil control.

"As soon as picking is completed the stalks should be plowed under," said Mr. Robinson. "If this is done promptly the weevil problem for next spring will be greatly reduced. Community action will produce the best results, but every farmer should destroy the stalks on his farm as early as possible, regardless of the action taken by his neighbors.

"Early destruction of the stalks prevents the development late in the fall of a multitude of weevils. Plowing the stalks under or grazing destroys the immature stages of the weevils in squares and bolls now infested and it stops the growth of squares in which weevils might develop later this season. This stops the development of weevils, many of which would hibernate successfully, and this, in turn, decreases the number of weevils which will emerge in the spring."

Henry Ford Gives Service To Owner

Will See That The Cars Give Full Satisfaction To The Owners

Shortly after he began to build automobiles, Henry Ford made this pronouncement:

"We have always believed that a sale does not complete the transaction between us and the car buyer, but establishes a new obligation on us to see that his car gives him good service."

That ideal of a continuing obligation to give good service to its customers, which has been the guiding principle of the Ford Motor Company in all its relations with Ford car owners for 30 years, finds new and eloquent expression in an original system of parts distribution, recently inaugurated by the Ford Motor Company whereby Ford car owners living in the smallest communities are extended the same prompt and efficient service that those who live in populous centers are accustomed to receive.

This system, devised by Ford and ique in the automitive industry, involves the daily employment of more than 600 distributors' vans, calling regularly on the 100,000-odd independent garage owners throughout the United States and directly supplying their needs of genuine Ford parts and accessories.

Nor are Ford car owners the only beneficiaries of this unique service. The independent garageman can now obtain Ford parts at a discount that assures him reasonable profits on material as well as labor. And not only can he profitably supply his customers with genuine Ford parts; he himself is supplied with every facility to push their sale—porcelain and enamel signs, telling the world that here "Genuine Ford Parts" may be obtained, lubrication and maintenance charts, and all the printed matter issued by the company to increase the dealer's knowledge and sales of Ford cars, trucks, parts and accessories.

Briefly, the way the system operates is this: Each of the 32 Ford branches divided its territory into sections, the number based on the number and importance of independent garages each included, appointing a dealer to act as distributor in each section. Thus, the Atlanta Branch, for instance, which has some 224 Ford dealers, has 20 distributors, whose panel trucks call on every garage in the area allotted to them at least once a week, selling them directly the "fast moving" items they need, taking orders for heavier parts and leaving with them lists of the items carried in the delivery trucks and self-addressed postal cards on which they can order additional parts to be delivered on the next call.

These Ford V-8 panel vans, specially designed for the services they perform, are identical in apearance and their sleek long bodies, painted in blue and cream, add a distinctive and colorful note to the moving stream of motor vehicles that form the traffic pattern of the land.
